General FE colleges implementing TPI have the flexibility to use their funding allocation to meet local priorities and needs, within the context of the national TPI framework and current employment legislation.

Teacher Recruitment

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on the Fast

Track scheme for teacher recruitment and how many teachers were recruited into Fast Track in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [86234]

Mr. Miliband: The Fast Track teaching programme is an accelerated development programme for teachers, designed to recruit, retain and rapidly develop transformational school leaders of the future. In 2001–02 the Department invested £8,265,344 in developing and implementing the Fast Track programme. This included the cost of recruiting 161 highly qualified and talented individuals. As numbers on the programme grow over time the unit cost will reduce, as there are fixed costs associated with establishing the infrastructure for this new nationwide programme.

The numbers on the Fast Track teaching programme are as follows:

Fast Track teaching programme	Number
In teaching posts in 102 schools	110
of whom, NQTs	88
In initial Teacher Training in nine providers	117
Currently deferred for one year	22
Total on Fast Track	249

Training

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what priority learning and skills councils will place upon training aimed at adults over 19-years-old. [85500]

Margaret Hodge: The training for adults over 19 is vital to both increased productivity and improved social inclusion. The priorities for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) were announced in the Grant Letter for 2003–04, released last Thursday 5 December. One of the four high level priorities (unchanged since the first remit letter in 2000) is "increasing demand for learning, and achievement of skills and qualifications by adults". The LSC will be assisted in meeting this priority by the generous budget increase that is included in this Grant Letter: resources will increase from £7.5 billion in 2002–03 to £8 billion in 2003–04, and rising again to £9.2 billion in 2005–06. This record level of investment will give the LSC the resources it needs to bring about radical and sustained improvements in adult skill levels.

The Grant Letter provides more detail on the priorities for adult learning, including a challenging new target of reducing by at least 40 per cent. the number of adults without a level 2 qualification by 2010, and participation by the LSC in pooled budget pilots with Regional Development Agencies. We are working closely with the LSC on the Review of Funding of Adult Learning which will set out in more detail how to meet the adult skill needs. The outcome of the Review will form part of the Skills Strategy which will be published by my Department in June.

Furthermore, the LSC's approach to adult training is set out in detail in its Workforce Development Strategy, released in November 2002. The development of the LSC strategy was co-ordinated with the Cabinet Office Strategy Unit report "In Demand (2): An Action Plan for Adult Skills in the 21st Century", and thus links into the wider Government strategy for adult skills.

University Research Funding

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the level of central Government funding for university research was for the current year in England per head of population. [86464]

Margaret Hodge: There are three sources of Government funding for higher education research in England: The Higher Education Funding Council for England, the Research Councils and Government Departments. The most recent year for which all these figures are available is for academic year 2000–01, when funding totalled £1.75 billion. Using the latest population estimates from the Office of National Statistics for 2001, at around 49,181,000, this is approximately £36 per head of population.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

"Living Places, Powers, Rights and Responsibilities"

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many copies of her recent consultation paper "Living Places, Powers, Rights and Responsibilities", were printed; how they were distributed; how many local authorities received them; and what steps she took to publish it. [86903]

Mr. Meacher: There were 5,000 copies printed initially, with a view that more would be printed if needed. Copies were sent to all local authorities, a wide variety of associations including trade associations, civic societies, the police, NGOs, utility companies, environmental bodies and groups, institutes, small to large businesses, including multi-national corporations, rail operators, women's groups, retailers, other Government Departments and relevant agencies, waste operators and land managers.

The cross-Government review of public space during the summer, involving most central Government Departments, identified many issues that were essential for improving the local environment. The culmination was the Living Places consultation paper, which was launched by my right hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Alun Michael) at the Urban Summit in Birminham on 31 October.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many responses she has received to her recent consultation paper Living Places, Powers, Rights and Responsibilities; and if she will make a statement. [86904]

Mr. Meacher: To date we have received seven responses to our consultation. We do not expect many until nearer the closing date due to the number and complexity of the proposals.

Agircultural Waste Stakeholders Forum

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress within the Agricultural Waste Stakeholders Forum. [87126]

Mr. Meacher: The Agricultural Waste Stakeholders' Forum has met twice—on 24 Septembern and 25 November. We have set up a website on which the agenda for, the minutes of and papers discussed at, these meetings are available. The address is: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/agforum/index.htm

At its meeting on 25 November the Forum agreed to the formation of four sub-groups to address specific issues. These are Research and Development; Information Campaign; Licensing and Exemptions; and Recovery, Re-use and Recycling of Non-natural Farm Waste. The sub-groups will meet before the Forum's next meeting on 30 January 2003 and will report their progress to the Forum.

Cattle

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on the arrangements under which a farmer may have cattle aged over 30 months slaughtered for personal consumption. [80459]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Cattle aged over 30 months may only be slaughtered for human consumption if they come from a low BSE-risk Beef Assurance Scheme herd, for which the age limit is 42 months. All such cattle must be slaughtered in a licensed abattoir, test negatively for BSE, and their meat held under Meat Hygiene Service supervision until the test result is obtained. After receipt of a negative BSE test result, the animal's vertebral column and dorsal root ganglia must be removed from the carcass, under Meat Hygiene Service supervision, at a licensed cutting plant that is separately licensed by the Food Standards Agency for this purpose. Following this, the meat may be supplied to the farmer for personal consumption or for consumption by any other person.

The only exception permitted to this would be if an over 30 month animal was slaughtered personally by its owner for his or her own consumption, with there being no supply of the beef to any other person.

Corporate Environmental Reporting

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken to encourage corporate environmental reporting. [87134]

Mr. Meacher: We have have produced a series of guidelines to help companies measure and report their environmental performance, including general guidelines published last year and more specific guidance on reporting the key impacts of greenhouse gas emissions, waste and water. The general guidelines were endorsed by the CBI and sent to approximately 3,000 of their members, and to all of the leading FTSE 350 listed companies.

We have written this year to companies in the FTSE 350 asking them what they had done to respond to the Prime Minister's challenge to report on their environmental performance. A list of the results was placed in the Library of the House in July.

We have also been working with the Department for Trade and Industry on plans for some important new reporting provisions, set out in the White Paper on Modernising Company Law published this summer. These would require approximately 1,000 of the most economically significant companies to include information on environmental, social and community issues relevant to the company's business in a new Operating and Financial Review. We have supported the Department of Trade and Industry in establishing an independent group of experts to help develop guidance on how directors should assess whether an item is material to their company and would therefore have to be included in its OFR. The group met for the first time this month and will produce guidance in autumn next year.

Food Safety

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the European Food Safety Authority regarding harmonisation of approaches to Food Safety. [81062]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

The European Food Safety Authority is in the process of being set up and the future route for input by member states will be through the Authority's advisory forum. This body, which will comprise representatives of Government food agencies, will assist the Authority in its work programme as well as ensuring efficient networking and provide a mechanism for exchanging information on potential risks and for pooling knowledge. It will also encourage broad understanding and acceptance of the scientific advice of the Authority in Europe. The first formal meeting is expected next year.

Negotiations continue on various proposals in the legislative programme, set out in the Commission's January 2000 White Paper on Food Safety, which are intended to update and harmonise European Union food law and safety.

Foxhunting

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the terms of the licence under which foxhunting occurs on Forestry Commission land. [86610]

Alun Michael: The Forestry Commission allows fox hunting only where it has traditionally taken place or where the right to hunt is reserved in the Commission's title.

The Commission has an agreement with the Masters of the Foxhounds Association whereby hunts are licensed individually for access to Commission land. The latest copy of the agreement has been placed in the Library of the House.

GM Field Trials

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish the conclusions of the GM field trials experiment; and if she will make a statement on the timetable for decisions regarding future public policy in respect of the commercial cultivation of GM crops and the extent to which field trials will inform such decisions. [84728]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 3 December 2000]: The results of the Farm Scale Evaluations for the three spring sown GM crops, fodder maize, beet and spring oil seed rape, are expected to be published in Summer 2003. The results for winter oil seed rape will be published early in 2004. The results will show what effect, if any, there is on the diversity and abundance of farmland wildlife associated with the farmers' management of GM herbicide tolerant crops as compared with equivalent non-GM crops. This will be one factor which will inform decisions that will be taken under Directive 2001/18/EC on the release of these particular GM crops.

In addition there are other regulatory approvals, such as those the commercial cultivation of a GM crop. The nature and timing of any decision taken by the Government will depend on the status of each particular crop within the regulatory system. The Government has a voluntary agreement with the industry that GM crops will not be grown commercially in the UK at least until the Farm Scale Evaluation programme has been completed. No GM crops will be grown commercially in the UK until we are satisfied that they do not cause damage on the environment.

Hunting

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement on 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 755W, of the right hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) on hunting with dogs, what evidence he assessed that led him to conclude that stag hunting should be banned. [87514]

Alun Michael: The Bill that was published last week is intended to enable Parliament to reach a conclusion on the contentious issue of hunting with hounds. It seeks to prevent cruelty while recognising those activities which are necessary to countryside management such as the protection of animals or crops. All activities have to satisfy the two tests of "utility" and cruelty (least suffering). The evidence on which decisions were taken include the report of the Burns inquiry and evidence provided to that inquiry, public hearings held in Portcullis House in September and submissions from a variety of organisations and individuals.

All the evidence has been published: the Burns report and related documents in 2000; 194 letters from organisations or individual hunts in response to the consultation letter of 31 May 2002; complete verbatim transcripts of hearings on 9–11 September 2002 in Portcullis House; videotapes of these hearings are also available, and papers of evidence submitted by the witnesses at those hearings. All of these documents are in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Kyoto Obligations

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has undertaken on public attitudes towards the UK meeting its Kyoto obligations on renewable energy and the potential change in electricity prices to the consumer; and if she will make a statement on how the cost of electricity for consumers will affect the Government's policy of promoting renewable energy sources. [85438]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today, PQ No. 85437.

Marine Environment

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the second round of consultation on marine environment high risk areas will take place. [87063]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

I expect that the consultation document will be issued during February 2003.

Ordnance Survey Mapping

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the accuracy is of Ordnance Survey Mapping. [86563]

Mr. McNulty: Statistical information about the accuracy of Ordnance Survey mapping is published on the Ordnance Survey web site at http://www.ordnancesurvey.co.uk/productpages/landline/positional-background.htm.

Projects (Sedgefield)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which projects in the Sedgefield constituency have benefited from the landfill tax credit scheme. [86607]

John Healey: I understand environmental bodies within the Sedgefield constituency have invested in around 15 ongoing or completed environmental projects as a result of the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme.

Recycling (Christmas)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has of the number of (a) christmas cards and (b) christmas trees that were recycled in each year since 1990; what support she provides to local authorities with regard to the recycling of Christmas cards; and if she will make a statement. [86414]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 12 December 2002]: Defra does not hold information on the recycling of Christmas cards and trees centrally, but I am aware of a scheme to collect and recycle used Christmas cards run in January 2002 by the Woodland Trust. This resulted in 34 million Christmas cards being recycled, in addition to those that were recycled by local authorities as part of their normal collection and recycling of waste paper. Further information is available from the Woodland Trust Website: http://www.woodland-trust.org.uk.

Some local authorities do report the number of Christmas trees they recycle to the environmental charity EnCams. The number of trees reported to be recycled in each year since 1997 are:

Year	Christmas trees recycled (English local authorities)
2998	171,488
1999	413,560
2000	728,927
2002	1,194,670

There is no special provision made to local authorities for the recycling of Christmas cards and trees. However, the Spending Review 2000 included an annual increase in revenue support for Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services (EPCS), which includes waste management services. By 2003–04 this support will have risen by 1.1 billion over the 2000–01 provision.

The 2002 Spending Review has also announced that EPCS spending will increase by a further £671 million by 2005–06. Consistent with the general local authority financial framework, it is for individual local authorities to decide the proportion of their budget that should be directed to waste management work.

In addition to general support to local authority revenue expenditure, Spending Review 2000 provided a £140 million Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fundand 220 million of Private Finance Initiatives (PFI) resources, for waste projects, in Spending Review 2002, the PFI provision was increased to £355 million over the next three years. In addition, the New Opportunities Fund will distribute £38.75 million to expand community sector waste reuse, recycling and composting in England.

Waste Framework Directive

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what forms of agricultural waste will be subject to the Waste Framework Directive. [87127]

Mr. Meacher: Section 75(7)(c) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 excludes from our national waste management controls, "waste from premises used for agriculture within the meaning of the Agriculture Act 1947". This, exclusion is in contravention of the Waste Framework Directive and we are preparing Regulations which will have the effect of repealing it. As a result, the Waste Framework Directive will apply to all types of agricultural waste other than those excluded from the Directive's scope by Article 2. In practice, this means that all forms of agricultural waste will be subject to control under the Waste Framework Directive other than animal carcasses which are subject to controlunder the Animal Waste Directive. The Waste Framework Directive provides that "waste" is ". . . any substance or object . . . which the holder discards or intends or is required to discard."

Waste Management

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans there are for new landfill sites for the disposal of household waste in England. [85326]

Mr. Meacher: Waste Strategy 2000 recognises that landfill will still have a role to play in any sustainable waste management system, but that it will be a much smaller role.

Local authorities should take into account the landfill diversion targets required by the Landfill Directive, to reduce the landfilling of biodegradable waste to landfill across the United Kingdom by around two-thirds in line with the timetable set out in the directive (ie by 2016, should the UK decide not to take advantage of the final four year derogation) and the recycling and recovery targets set out in WS2000.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the proportion of household waste (a) buried in landfill sites, (b) incinerated and (c) recycled in each local authority in England. [85327]

Mr. Meacher: Local authorities are required to provide estimates of the proportion of household waste recycled (including composting) recovered (including incineration) and landfilled under the Best Value regime. The latest results for 2000–01 are published on the ODPM website www.bvpi.gov.uk and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. Estimates for 2001–02 will be available shortly.

TREASURY

Credit Unions

Mr. Colman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what subsidies and grant funding were given to credit unions in (a) England and Wales and (b) the UK (i) by the UK Government and (ii) from European social funds in each year since 1997. [86976]

Ruth Kelly: This information is not readily available. However, research by Liverpool John Moores University in 1999 estimated that total public investment in credit unions in Britain could be in the range of £15-£20 million per annum.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the annual costs were of regulation of credit unions by (a) the Registrar of Friendly Societies in each year from 1997–2001 and (b) the Financial Services Authority in 2001–02. [86977]

Ruth Kelly: Data has not been collected in a form that details the cost of regulation, specific to credit unions.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many ethnic minority members in the Wycombe constituency were in employment in (a) spring 2001 and (b) spring 2002. [87129]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Nationals Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from L. Cook to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment in Wycombe constituency. (87129)

Information on the number of ethnic minority people in employment in the Wycombe parliamentary constituency will be available from the April 2001 Population Census when this is published in June 2003. Information about the employment of ethnic minorities is available each year from the Labour Force Survey, but the sample size for the Wycombe constituency is too small to provide a reliable estimate.

Insurance Policies

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the absence of a statutory notice period before an insurance policy is cancelled by an insurer. [86863]

Ruth Kelly: Treasury Ministers receive numerous representations on a wide range of topics. The terms and conditions of insurance policies are a matter for insurers.

Landfill

Mr. Flook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many projects he estimates will become financially unviable following the decision to make changes to the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme in (a) Somerset, (b) Dorset, (c) Devon, (d) Cornwall, (e) Wiltshire, (f) North Somerset, (g) Bristol and (h) Bath and North East Somerset. [86939]

John Healey: The Government have made no such estimates. The recently proposed changes to the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme will ensure that around £47 million per annum will continue to be made available for spending on local community environmental projects, ensuring that the current level of support for these types of projects is maintained. In addition there will be around £100 million per annum of funding available under the new public spending programme for sustainable waste management projects.

Tax credits which have already been claimed by landfill operators, or which may be claimed until March 2003, will need to be spent under the existing LTCS arrangements. This will ensure that projects which have been allocated tax credit funding will continue to benefit until such time as they are completed.

No decisions have yet been made on the criteria or scope of the replacement spending scheme.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many environmental projects which are funded by the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme have a completion date beyond March 2003 in (a) Somerset, (b) Dorset, (c) Devon, (d) Cornwall, (e) Wiltshire, (f) North Somerset, (g) Bristol and (h) Bath and North East Somerset. [86940]

John Healey: From details provided by ENTRUST, the regulator of the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme, the following estimates have been made of the number of projects with completion dates beyond March 2003 in each of the areas listed:

Area	Number of Projects
Somerset	18
Dorset	2
Cornwall	11
Wiltshire	10
North Somerset	0
Bristol	26
Bath and North East Somerset	0

Low Birth Weights

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many babies were born with a low birth weight, broken down by local authority, in each of the last three years. [87153]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many babies were born with a low birth weight, broken down by local authority, in each of the last three years. (87153)

The number of low birth weight live births that occurred in each year from 1999 to 2001, by local authorities in England and Wales, are shown in the table which has been put in the Libraries of the House.

Teenage Pregnancies

Chris Ruane: To ask theChancellor of the Exchequer how many teenage pregnancies there were in each (a) constituency and (b) county in the last 12 months. [87154]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Chris Ruane, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many teenage pregnancies there were in each (a) constituency and (b) county in the last 12 months. (87154)

The latest available figures are for 2000. Teenage conception data for 2000 by local authorities were published on the ONS website on 27th February 2002 and will also be made available by ward by April 2003. To protect the confidentiality of individuals, figures for certain parliamentary constituencies cannot be released as this might reveal small number of cases in individual wards. Number of teenage conceptions by each parliamentary constituency and county for 2000 have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Alcohol

Mr. Jim Cousins: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the expenditure on alcohol (a) in cash, (b) in real terms and (c) as a percentage of total expenditure in each region and nation of the United Kingdom in each year since 1996. [85732]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 11 December 2002]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Jim Cousins, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on estimates of expenditure on alcohol in each region and country of the United Kingdom in each year since 1996. (85732)

The ONS compiles regional individual consumption expenditure estimates, including an estimated series for alcohol (current prices only). The latest data available are for the year 1999. These data are presented in the following table.

Total expenditure on alcohol

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer to which bodies his Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87398]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 16 December by the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office.

Child Trust Funds

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions officials from his Department have had with representatives of (a) the banking industry, (b) building societies and (c) friendly societies regarding the provision of Child Trust Funds; what research his Department has undertaken on the provision of Child Trust Funds; and if he will publish the research. [86295]

Ruth Kelly: Proposals for the Child Trust Fund were first published in April 2001 in the consultation document entitled "Saving and Assets for All". A follow up consultation document, "Delivering Saving and Assets", was published in November 2001. A wide range of financial services providers have taken part in the consultation exercises to date. As announced in the pre-Budget report the Government will now consult with key stakeholders on the detailed implementation of the Child Trust Fund.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will introduce child trust funds. [86665]

Ruth Kelly: The Government provided an update on the child trust fund in the pre-Budget report (paragraphs 5.55–5.59).

Cigarettes

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the assumed change in revenues was in the pre-Budget report resulting from the October changes to arrangements for cross-channel purchases of cigarettes for own use for financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [86865]

John Healey: The pre-Budget report public forecast for tobacco duty revenues cautiously allowed for a cost of around £100 million per year as a result of the package of measures announced in October.

Citizens Advice Bureau Service

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the publications produced by his Department that refer people to the Citizens Advice Bureau Service for advice and assistance; and whether Citizens Advice Scotland is informed of such referrals prior to publication. [84154]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 2 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer given to her by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Competition, Consumers and Markets on 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 684W.

Civil Servants

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants are employed by his Department; and how much money was spent by his Department in the last 12 months, broken down by local authority area. [87176]

Ruth Kelly: Data on the location of civil servants are not available in the format requested, except at disproportionate cost. Information is available for the Government Office Regions of Great Britain.

For information on how many civil servants are employed by HM Treasury, Customs and Excise and Inland Revenue refer to Table D of Civil Service Statistics 2001, published in June 2001. Copies of the publication were placed in the Library of the House at the time of publication.

Information regarding how much money spent by the above Departments by local authority area is not available.

Cocaine (Death Certificates)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it Government policy to ensure that deaths caused by crack cocaine and cocaine are identified separately on death certificates. [86254]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from L. Cook to Lynne Jones, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about ensuring that deaths caused by crack cocaine and cocaine are identified separately on death certificates. (86254)

Deaths that may be due to drug poisoning are referred to the coroner, who has a duty to report on the cause of death on the best available evidence. As part of his investigations the coroner may order tests to be carried out to detect the presence of particular drugs or other toxins. Unfortunately, it is unlikely that these would separately identify whether the cocaine taken in the form of crack cocaine.

The Government recognises the concern that precise levels of drug-misuse deaths are not clearly identified due to a lack of available monitored information. As part of an Action Plan to Prevent Drug-related Deaths, £320,000 is being invested in better surveillance and monitoring systems which will allow increased analysis of information from coroners' reports and provide best practice guidance and training to coroners. It is hoped that this will improve the evidence provided by coroners on death certificates to better distinguish different types of drug-misuse deaths, where evidence other than toxicology is available.

Council Tax

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what local government revenue from council tax was in each year since 1997. [86667]

Mr. Boateng: Figures for council tax in England, Scotland and Wales and domestic rates in Northern Ireland, are published by the Office for National Statistics and in Budget and PBR documents for the relevant years.

Demography

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many single (a) women and (b) men will reach the age of 60 years between 20 September and 25 December. [87602]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the number of single women and single men who will reach the age of 60 years between 20 September and 25 December 2002. (87602)

It is estimated that there will be 21,000 single women and 17,000 single men in England and Wales who will reach the age of 60 during this period. Single has been defined to include single (never married), widowed and divorced.

These figures are estimates. They have been derived using interim revised national population projections produced by the Government Actuary's Department.Data from the Office for National Statistics on the pattern of births in 1942 indicates the proportion of the total number of 59-year-old men and women in June 2002 who will reach the age of 60 between 20 September and 25 December 2002. Data from national population projections by marital status produced by the Government Actuary's Department have been used to estimate the proportion who are single.

Departmental Report

Norman Lamb: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer how much it costs to produce HM Treasury's departmental report 2002; and how many copies of the report were sold at its cover price. [87231]

Mr. Boateng: The final cost of producing HM Treasury's departmental report was £4,912. 454 copies have been sold for the most recent edition (Cm 5425, published 10 June 2002). This includes copies supplied at discount by The Stationary Office Limited (TSO) to certain types of customer.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of average earnings in (a) the West Midlands region, (b) the West Midlands conurbation, (c) Birmingham, (d) Walsall, (e) Wolverhampton, (f) Dudley, (g) Solihull, (h) Coventry, (i) Sandwell, (j) Worcestershire, (k) Herefordshire, (l) Shropshire, (m) Warwickshire, (n) North Warwickshire, (o) Nuneaton and Bedworth, (p) Rugby, (q) Stratford-on-Avon and (r) Warwick, in the last year for which figures are available. [87029]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from L Cook to Mr. M Foster, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on average earnings for counties and unitary authorities in West Midlands. (87029)

I have provided a table overleaf, showing average weekly earnings, from the 2002 New Earnings Survey (NES), the latest survey for which data are available.

The NES can provide earnings data for small geographical areas. The release of NES data is restricted to figures that are derived from a sufficiently large sample of employees, and have an acceptable level of accuracy and I have provided the available data for the areas requested where the samples are large enough.

Environmental Health Practitioners

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to allow tax incentives to companies who take on an environmental health practitioner. [87492]

John Healey: The Government keeps all taxes under review and any changes will be announced as part of the normal Budget process. The Government currently has no plans to allow tax relief to companies who take on an environmental health practitioner.

Equitable Life

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contingency plans have been made to help pensioners in the event of Equitable Life going into liquidation. [86506]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 12 December 2002]: Equitable Life issued its interim accounts on 15 November and made it clear that it remained solvent. The FSA continues to monitor the company to ensure that it is complying with regulatory requirements.

Should an insurer become insolvent a safety net for policyholders is already in place in the shape of the Financial Services Compensation Scheme. The Scheme will act if a company has become insolvent or gone out of business. The Scheme will first seek to take measures to safeguard policyholders, for example by trying to ensure that policies are transferred to another company. If that is not possible then compensation may be payable to eligible policyholders, subject to the Scheme rules.

Government Debt

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much Government debt has been generated by private finance initiatives (a) as a percentage of GDP and (b) in total; [86675]

(2) whether the forecast net borrowing for this financial year includes Government liabilities generated by private finance initiatives. [86676]

Mr. Boateng: Forecasts of the Government's net borrowing are compiled in accordance with National Accounts concepts and methods, which are based on international rules (European System of Accounts—ESA95), that the Government are legally obliged to follow. Under these rules economic activity is measured by transactions, which are recorded according to the sector considered to be undertaking the transaction.

For an on-balance sheet PFI deal, the capital expenditure adds to public sector net borrowing, assuming that there are no off-setting reductions in other capital spending. For an off-balance sheet PFI contract, the capital expenditure does not affect public sector net borrowing. Professional accountants, in preparing the accounts of Government Departments, judge whether a PFI deal is on or off balance sheet. The National Audit Office, or a comparable audit body, audits these decisions.

The Government publish a full statement of expected PFI-related payments in the Budget, showing estimated PFI payments for the next 25 years. Service charge payments made by the public sector to the private sector score as public sector current expenditure in the year in which they are made.

Highlands and Islands

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revised gross domestic product figures for the Highlands and Islands regarding eligibility for Objective One status for 2000–06 the Office of National Statistics has calculated since the bids for Objective One status were submitted. [84295]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 2 December 2002]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from L. Cook to Mr. David Stewart, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on Gross Domestic Product (GDP) for Highlands and Islands. (84295)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) publishes estimates of regional and sub-regional Gross Value Added (GVA, previously referred to as Gross Domestic Product—GDP), compiled using methods agreed at a European level. These data are then supplied to Eurostat, the Statistical Office of the European Union, who convert the data into euros and Purchasing Power Parities (PPPs) for international comparison. The PPP-based data for sub-regions (NUTS level 2) have been used to determine eligibility for Objective 1 of the Structural Funds. The Highlands and Islands Enterprise area is a single NUTS2 unit.

The GDP figures for the NUTS 2 area of Highlands and Islands for 1993 to 1996 were published in October 1998. These data (Table 1) were based on the European System of Accounts 1979 (ESA79) methodology, and were used to inform the decisions on Objective 1 eligibility for the period 2000 to 2006.

Table 1: ONS data published in October 1998

GDP £ million	2,739	2,877	2,990	3,093
GDP £ per head	7,385	7,729	8,020	8,308
GDP £ per head UK = 100	80	79	79	78

In April 2001, sub-regional gross value added (GVA) data were published using the new ESA95 methodology, for the period 1993 to 1998, as shown in Table 2. ESA95 is the new National and Regional Accounts convention now used for compiling regional accounts by all EU countries.

Table 2: ONS data published in April 2001

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998
GDP £ million	2,947	3,052	3,176	3,217	3,306	3,461
GDP £ per head	7,943	8,199	8,515	8,634	8,898	9,369
GDP £ per head UK = 100	82	81	80	77	75	75

The ONS published revised estimates for NUTS level 1 (Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, and the nine English Government Office Regions) for 1989 to 1999 on 21 November 2002, and will be publishing provisional estimates for 2000 and 2001 in December 2002. The ONS then plans to publish consistent sub-regional and local area (NUTS levels 2 and 3 respectively) GVA for the period 1993–2000 early in 2003. These data will be supplied to Eurostat, who will, as described above, convert these to a PPP basis before publishing on an EU = 100 index basis.

However, I should like to draw to your attention to an announcement the ONS put out this week about an error in sub-national, annual business inquiry estimates which provide part of the source information for many industries. These are impacting on the ONS regional GVA publications of 21 November 2002 and 17 December 2002 referred to above. The size of the error is within the range of variability seen by changes made in the past when first published GVA estimates have been revised. We are taking the unusual step of publishing a revised series of estimates at NUTS-1, 2 and 3 level in early 2003. Therefore the regional GVA series being published in 2002 are being referred to as provisional, but because the size of the revisions is not anticipated to be outside of past user experiences they will continue to be made available, subject to being marked as provisional from now on. The announcement can be found at the NS website at: www.statistics.gov.uk/notices/Impact_on_other_regional_outputs.asp

Loan Guarantees

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy relating to setting out in the national accounts the extent of Government liability for guarantees of loans, with special reference to the London Underground. [86555]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question relating to setting out in the national accounts the extent of Government liability for guarantees of loans, with special reference to the London Underground. (86555).

The responsibility for the national accounts falls to me as National Statistician.

Guarantees of loans are usually accounted for as contingent liabilities. As such they are not included in national accounts under the rules of the European System of Accounts 1995. The Office for National Statistics has not been asked about the status of any guarantees for possible London Underground loans.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by him or his predecessor and (b) by ministers in his Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87347]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that the Minister of State, Cabinet Office has given him today.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will answer written question 83395 tabled by the hon. Member for Altrincham and Sale, West on 21 November. [87228]

Dawn Primarolo: I replied to the hon. Gentleman's question on 12 December.

Partnerships UK

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedures are in place to measure the effectiveness of Partnerships UK in delivering and developing public private partnerships; what plans his Department has for the future development of Partnerships UK; and if he will make a statement. [83214]

Mr. Boateng: Partnerships UK has a unique corporate governance structure geared towards safeguarding its public sector mission. The structure includes the establishment of an Advisory Council chaired by Sir Andrew Turnbull, the Cabinet Secretary. The council is comprised of a wide range of representatives of PUK's public sector client base, and is appointed by HM Treasury. HM Treasury also appoints two non-executive directors to PUK's board.

Copies of the Advisory Council's most recent report and Partnerships UK's Annual Report for the year 2002 are both available from the House Library.

Performance Reports

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the timetable is for publication of the performance reports as set out in the Pre-Budget Report, November 2002 (Cm 5664), paragraphs 6.49 to 6.54; and if he will make a statement on the performance of Government Departments on publication of their full reports; [86671]

(2) pursuant to the Budget Red Book, April 2002 (HC 592), box 6.3, what dates his Department uses to define each of the four seasons of the year; and what the publication dates are for each Department's report; [86669]

(3) pursuant to the Pre-Budget Report, November 2002 (Cm 5664), paragraph 6.32, what the timetable is for implementation of his Department's plans to provide links on its website to Departments' PSA progress reports. [86670]

Mr. Boateng: Departments are currently publishing their autumn performance reports, for which they are responsible. The page of links was established on the Treasury's website on 27 November 2002, and is being updated as reports are published. This page is available in the Public Spending and Services pages under the title, 'Links to Departmental Performance Documents'.

Public-Private Partnerships

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of Partnerships UK in ensuring successful development and implementation of public-private partnerships; what guidance has been given to Partnerships UK; and how this differs from guidance given to the Treasury Taskforce. [83134]

Mr. Boateng: Details of Partnerships UK's business strategy were outlined in the Information Memorandum issued prior to HM Treasury's capital raising exercise in early 2001. The company's progress measured against its business plan is covered in its latest Annual Report, a copy of which is also available from the House Library. Copies of the Information Memorandum and the Annual Report are both available from the House Library.

Partnerships UK is a public-private partnership with the majority of its shares held by private sector institutions. As a minority shareholder, HM Treasury does not exercise control over the company. Partnerships UK's board is responsible for the overall management of PUK on behalf of its shareholders which include HM Treasury. HMT also appoints PUK's Advisory Council which monitors the delivery of PUK's public sector mission.

The Treasury Taskforce as an arm of HM Treasury issued regular guidance to the public sector on the application of public-private partnerships. The taskforce was also responsible for PFI policy. Following the establishment of Partnerships UK, these roles have passed back to the Treasury and the Office of Government Commerce.

Research and Development

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer how much research and development funds were provided by central Government to institutions in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland, in the last year for which figures are available. [84393]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The Government publication "Forward Look 2001" (Cm5338) shows that in 2000–01, UK government departments and devolved administrations were estimated to have spent £5006 million on R&D, including £1518 million on the Science Budget, much of which will have been spent with external institution. Within this total the direct expenditure by the devolved administrations was £104 million by the Scottish Executive, £21 million by the National Assembly for Wales, and £32 million by the Northern Ireland departments. No overall figures are available to indicate the geographical breakdown of the institutions who received funding from these sources, but so as far as the breakdown of Science Budget spending is concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Strangford on 25 November, Official Report, column 33W.

Retirement

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what incentives he is putting in place to encourage young people to save for their retirement. [86890]

Ruth Kelly: The Government already provides generous tax relief, worth around £13 billion a year, to encourage saving in pensions for retirement.

The Government is publishing a consultation document, on 17 December, which includes proposals for the simplification of the taxation of pensions, thus enabling people to plan effectively for their retirement.

Royal Mint

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place a copy of the Royal Mint quinquennial prior options review in the Library. [86864]

Ruth Kelly: The 1999 review of options for the Royal Mint is commercially confidential, and therefore cannot be released in accordance with exemption 13 (third party's commercial confidences) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Targets

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the pre-Budget report, November 2002 (Cm 5664), paragraph 6.25, what the relationship is between the targets set, the outcomes departments are required to deliver and the money allocated by his Department to other Government Departments. [86672]

Mr. Boateng: Public Service Agreements are an integral part of our spending plans. PSAs set out the objectives and outcomes Departments are required to deliver within their resources.

Tax Processing

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 26 November, Official Report, column 159W, on Tax Processing, if he will place in the Library the underlying data for the basket of outputs for the previous two financial years; and if he will make a statement. [86909]

Dawn Primarolo: I have placed a copy of the information relating to financial year 2000–01 in the Library. This was the first year for which this data was collated.

Taxation (Non-domiciled Individuals)

Mr. Portillo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his plans are for the UK taxation of non-domiciled individuals resident in the UK. [87512]

Dawn Primarolo: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his Budget last April that we are reviewing the residence and domicile rules as they affect the tax liabilities of individuals. We believe that any modernisation of these rules needs to be based on clear principles: the rules should be fair, clear, easy to operate and support the competitiveness of the British economy. Paragraphs 5.81–82 of the Pre-Budget Report published on 27 November set out the latest position on the review.

Taxes (Wales)

Ian Lucas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount of (a) income tax, (b) corporation tax, (c) inheritance tax, (d) capital gains tax, (e) national insurance and (f) VAT paid by organisations and persons in Wales in each year since 1997. [86897]

Dawn Primarolo: Available information is given in the table. Data on the regional distribution of inheritance tax are not collected regularly. A special survey estimated a yield of about £50 million for Wales in 2000–01. Figures for corporation tax are not available and it would only be possible to provide reliable estimates of national insurance contributions for Wales at disproportionate cost.

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Income tax[1]	2,670	2,630	2,990	3,230
Capital gains tax[2]	30	40	40	30
VAT[3]	2,470	2,260	2,500	2,480

[1] Estimated income tax liabilities for Wales based on the Survey of Personal Incomes.
[2] Estimated capital gains tax liabilities in Wales.
[3] VAT is a centrally collected tax and the figure for receipts is only available for the UK as a whole (HM Customs and Excise Annual Report, Table A1). The tax share for Wales is estimated by apportioning the figures for household expenditure from the ONS publication, "Family Expenditure", by the number of households in Wales from "Regional Trends".

Treasury Publications

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 2 December 2002, Official Report, column 506W, on Treasury publications, how many leaflets were distributed in the case of (a) the Budget and (b) the pre-Budget report; and if he will make a statement. [86896]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury distributed 2.1 million Budget 2002 summary leaflets and 1.4 million leaflets summarising the 2002 pre-Budget report.

Trust Ports

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what adjustment he has made to the public sector borrowing requirement consequent upon the decision of the Office for National Statistics to classify major trust ports as public sector bodies; [87561]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 681W, on trust ports, what adjustments have been made to public sector accounts as a result; [87559]

(3) pursuant to his answer of 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 681W, on trust ports, when classification of major trust ports as public bodies became effective; and whether the classification has retrospective effect. [87552]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent questions on trust ports. (87522, 87559, 87561)

The reclassification of major trust ports to public corporations in National Accounts became effective in September 2001. Available data were introduced retrospectively back to 1996. The National Accounts data are used for the public sector accounts. The Chancellor's fiscal measures are based on these and hence reflect the changes made to the National Accounts data.

Trust ports data appear in the public sector accounts and net cash requirement in many places. I am not able to give you a breakdown of this. However, trust ports are not particularly significant in the overall public corporations' accounts, for example their gross operating surplus and capital formation both account for about 0.6% of the sector total.

UKAEA/BNFL

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on how (a) UKAEA and (b) BNFL's liabilities are reflected in reports to Parliament about the national finances. [84758]

Mr. Boateng: The information is as follows:

UKAEA

UKAEA is a non-ministerial public body reporting to the Department for Trade and Industry. Its liabilities are recorded in its balance sheet and in its annual report and accounts. This is available in the Library of the House and is accessible at http://www.ukaea.org.uk/about/acc 2002/cover1.htm. The liabilities that are recorded in its accounts include financial debts and provisions for the future costs of nuclear decommissioning.

The financial debts of UKAEA, owed to the private sector, are included within public sector net debt—the statistic used to monitor the Chancellor's sustainable investment rule and reported to Parliament in the FSBR and PBR. Provisions are not recorded in public sector net debt.

UKAEA's nuclear provisions are included in DTI's resource accounts that are presented to Parliament each year.

BNFL

BNFL is a public corporation. Its liabilities are recorded in its balance sheet in its annual report and accounts. This is available from the House of Commons Library and here http://www.bnfl.com/annualreport2002/pdfs/BN1726 Report.pdf. The liabilities that are recorded in its accounts include financial debts and provisions for the future costs of nuclear decommissioning. The financial debts of BNFL, owed to the private sector, are included within public sector net debt—the statistic used to monitor the Chancellor's sustainable investment rule and reported to Parliament in the FSBR and PBR. Provisions are not recorded in public sector net debt.

BNFL's nuclear provisions are included in the resource accounts of DTI and MOD that are presented to Parliament each year.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answers of 9 December (reference 86133 and 86134), whether a recipient of working families tax credit who marries prior to April 2003 and becomes responsible for children of his new wife can surrender his existing entitlement and make a new claim to include his new children. [87234]

Dawn Primarolo: No. The award would continue regardless of the change of circumstances. Working families tax credit is a fixed award and generally runs for the period of entitlement. However, a claimant can surrender an existing award and make a new claim following the birth of a baby, the adoption of a child or granting of a parental order for a surrogate child. The new tax credits will replace the current system from April 2003 and will be more responsive to changes in family circumstances.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Application Forms

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the process by which his Department compiles the questions used on benefit application forms. [80815]

Malcolm Wicks: Questions used on the Department's benefit application forms are deemed to be those which are most appropriate in order to capture relevant information on entitlement to benefit and how benefit may be paid, as laid down in the relevant legislation.

They are arrived at by a process of research, consultation, testing and piloting.

Benefit Payments

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether claimants having to attend interviews to assess a claim to continue receiving a benefit as a cash payment (a) will be provided with travel assistance where they have no ready access to public transport and (b) will be able to claim travel expenses; and if he will make a statement; [83998]

(2) whether interviews with claimants wishing to continue receiving cash payments will take place as close as possible to their home; and if he will make a statement; [83999]

(3) whether claimants will be required to attend an interview in order to continue receiving cash payments of their benefits from the Post Office; and if he will make a statement; [84000]

(4) what information benefit claimants will have to provide if they wish to continue receiving cash payments from the Post Office; and if he will make a statement. [84001]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: From April 2003 the normal method of payment for benefits and pensions will be directly into bank, building society or Post Office card accounts. Customers who wish to continue to collect their benefit or pension in cash at the Post Office need to choose one of the account options that can be accessed at post offices and provide these account details to the Department. Customers will not be required to attend special interviews as part of this process.

Benefits

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed (a) jobseeker's allowance, (b) child-related benefits, (c) winter fuel payments and (d) sickness related benefits in (i) Lancashire and (ii) the North West of England in each of the last five years. [82147]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the tables. Many benefit recipients fall within more than one category and there is therefore a degree of overlap between the figures.

Number of people claiming jobseeker's allowance

	Lancashire	North West region
May 1998	18,536	164,925
May 1999	18,242	155,903
May 2000	16,375	139,888

Child Maintenance Payments

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the new system for calculating child maintenance payments will be extended to all Child Support Agency cases. [85322]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Duncan) on 27 November 2002, Official Report, column 318.

Child Support Agency

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what provisions are in place within CSA assessments to help with the additional costs that non-resident parents incur when they have to travel long distances and accommodate themselves in hotels in order to see their children. [83131]

Malcolm Wicks: A system of Departures from the formula exists in the current Child Support scheme. This allows a non-resident parent's maintenance assessment to be adjusted in cases where high contact costs are incurred. In the new scheme, this has been replaced by a system of Variations. These also take account of the cost of overnight accommodation where a return journey on the same day would be impractical. Under both schemes an award only takes effect when a threshold level of cost has been exceeded.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the reforms to the CSA system will be introduced; and when they will be extended to parents already in the CSA system. [83132]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the letter sent to hon. Members on 19 September 2002 by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, a copy of which was placed in the Library. The new scheme will commence for existing clients when we are satisfied that it is working well, which we expect to be about a year later.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will implement new guidelines for assessments by the Child Support Agency for existing clients. [84170]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the letter sent to hon. Members on 19 September 2002 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, a copy of which is available in the Library. The new scheme will commence for existing clients when we are satisfied that it is working well, which we expect to be about a year later than for new clients.

Departmental Website

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the website links associated with his Department, including sites now dormant or closed; what the start-up costs were for each site; what the operating costs were in each year for each site; which company hosts each site; and what assessment has taken place for each site. [81954]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 7 November, Official Report, column 293–94W.

Executive Agencies

Mr. David Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the future staffing levels of his Department's Executive Agencies; what changes in employment levels will be brought about by (a) the move to Jobcentre Plus and (b) the establishment of the new Pension Service; and if he will provide estimates for total staffing levels in each of the next three years. [86731]

Mr. McCartney: Information on the future staffing levels of the Department's Executive Agencies is not as yet available. Profiles for staffing levels in each of the next three years are still being developed by each of the businesses.

Fraud

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) recorded and (b) estimated level of fraud has taken place through benefit payments at post offices in each of the last ten years. [86811]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 December 2002]: As part of our programme to modernise welfare delivery, from next April we shall be paying more benefits direct into bank accounts. The move to direct paymentprovides a safe, convenient, more modern and efficient way of paying benefits that will reduce the cost of red tape and make the system more secure from fraud.

The figures in the table show losses from fraudulent encashment of instruments of payment. These may include losses incurred through transactions at places other than post offices, such as banks and building societies. Figures for instrument of payment fraud prior to 1995/96 cannot be identified separately.

Year	Order book losses £m	Girocheque losses £m	Total instrument of payment losses £m
1995 to 1996	133.0	17.0	150.0
1996 to 1997	84.0	17.8	101.8
1997 to 1998	98.0	21.0	119.0
1998 to 1999	83.2	19.4	102.6
1999 to 2000	89.4	19.3	108.7
2000 to 2001	58.0	19.2	77.2

Guide Dogs Charity

Claire Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what support he gives to the Guide Dogs for the Blind charity. [83821]

Maria Eagle: We fund voluntary and charitable organisations only to deliver specific projects or services. Guide Dogs for the Blind does not provide any specific projects or services for the Department for Work and Pensions.

The Department does work in partnership with a range of charitable and voluntary organisations to break down barriers and improve service delivery.

Housing Benefit Reforms

Mr. Kirkwood:: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library the local reference rents for each size of property in each locality of each of the local authorities invited to be a pathfinder in the housing benefit reforms. [85303]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not collected centrally. With the introduction of the standard local housing allowance, each pathfinder authority will publish in advance the rates that will payable under the scheme.

National Insurance Recording System 2

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) retirement pension, (b) widow's benefit, (c) bereavement benefit, (d) incapacity benefit and (e) jobseeker's allowance cases are awaiting a review triggered by a national insurance recording system 2 (NIRS2) calculation. [83210]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 25 November 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 7 November 2002, Official Report, columns 642–44W.

NIRS2

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people (a) were asked to repay and (b) repaid overpayments triggered by the NIRS2 computer system; [83213]

(2) how much people repaid (a) in total and (b) on average, following a request for a repayment resulting from an overpayment triggered by the NIRS2 computer system. [83207]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 25 November 2002]: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pensions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to ensure that people have confidence in the pensions they are investing in. [86891]

Mr. McCartney: It is clearly important that individuals have confidence in the long term stability of the pension system. We are publishing a Green Paper on pensions on 17 December that will look at pensions policy in the round. It will make a range of proposals to encourage more pensions saving and to balance the competing issues in pensions policy. The proposals will be designed for the long-term, as people need to be able to plan and make decisions for the future.

Personal Information (Restricted Access)

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his policy on restricting access by staff to personal information held by his Department and its agencies in cases where victims of violence have changed their names and addresses. [87161]

Mr. McCartney: It is the policy of the Department for Work and Pensions to ensure that all personal information held by the Department is afforded protection in accordance with legislative requirements and good practice.

Access by staff to any personal information is restricted to that needed for the proper conduct of the Department's business. On-line activity is subject to random management checking and full audit trails are maintained.

Additional protection is provided and access further restricted for cases assessed to be at serious risk. In this case all access to a record is blocked unless specifically authorised by management and all attempts at access are monitored.

The Department takes a very serious view of any unauthorised disclosures being made from its records and disciplinary action, including dismissal and prosecution, will be taken against anyone making an unauthorised disclose of customer information to a third party or casually browsing the Department's records.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance he has issued to his Department and its agencies concerning restricting access by staff to personal information held in cases where victims of violence have changed their names and addresses. [87162]

Mr. McCartney: Department for Work and Pensions staff with access to customer information are made aware of their responsibilities for the security and protection of customer information during induction training. This is reinforced through various publications and regular security bulletins and awareness sessions. Comprehensive supporting guidance is also available in both paper and electronic form.

Post Office Benefit Payments

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department is doing to encourage those who wish to have their benefits paid through the post office. [84255]

Malcolm Wicks: We are providing customers with information (including letters and leaflets) which clearly sets out the account options as part of the move to direct payment. Customers can choose the bank or building society account (including the post office card account) which best suits their needs and circumstances. The information material sets out the key features of the various accounts and explains how people can access their money at the post office, if they wish to do so.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Laws: Mr. David Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures he is taking to promote the take-up of the Post Office Card account as part of the migration to automated credit transfer. [82666]

Malcolm Wicks: DWP is providing customers with information (including letters and leaflets) which clearly sets out the account options as part of the move to payment direct into accounts. Customers can choose the bank or building society account (including the Post Office card account) which best suits their needs and circumstances. The information material sets out the key features of the various accounts.

Poverty

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) people over retirement age, (b) children, (c) women, (d) members of ethnic minorities and (e) others in the Wycombe constituency lived below the poverty line in each of the past five years. [85660]

Malcolm Wicks: The requested information is not available. Poverty and social exclusion are complex and multi-dimensional problems, which affect many aspects of people's lives. They cannot be measured using a single indicator. Our long-term strategy to tackle the underlying causes of poverty is set out in our recently published "Opportunity for all—fourth annual report", which provides detailed analysis on a range of indicators of poverty and social exclusion. Unfortunately, not all indicators can be broken down to the constituency level—due to sample size limitations. The National Statistics website, www.statistics.gov.uk, provides a comprehensive source of information that is available at the constituency level.

Social Fund

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to reform the Social Fund; and if he will make a statement. [82078]

Malcolm Wicks: The Social Fund plays an important role in our agenda for tackling poverty and social exclusion by providing people on low incomes with grants and interest-free loans to help them manage a wide range of unexpected or occasional costs.

We have introduced a number of important changes to the Social Fund since 1997, including a simpler and more transparent claims process. In the PBR, we announced that from April 2003, £90 million will be added to the discretionary Fund over the three years to 2005–06. Also from next April, a further £15 million will be available for the funeral payment scheme, increasing the amount allowed for unspecified funeral expenses from £600 to £700. This extra investment will bring the total amount of cash available through the Social Fund to around 900 £million and enhance the Fund's ability to help people on low incomes manage their finances.

We also aim to improve the administration of the Social Fund and have announced that further work on this will be taken forward in conjunction with the Treasury.

Statistics (Privileged Access)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the series of statistics to which his Department has privileged access prior to publication. [86732]

Mr. McCartney: We have pre-release access to statistical series produced within the department and to the following National Statistics released by other government departments:

Labour Market Statistics (Office for National Statistics)

Low Pay (Office for National Statistics)

New Earnings Survey (Office for National Statistics)

Work and Worklessness (Office for National Statistics)

Individual Incomes (Department for Trade and Industry)

The Department was also given early access to the 2001 population census results. On some occasions the Department has had access to the redistribution of income series produced by the Office for National Statistics. It may also be involved in quality assurance of statistical series produced by other departments before they are finalised and published.

Sure Start Maternity Grant

Mr. John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) couple families with children and (b) one parent families he estimates will be passported to the Sure Start maternity grant in Leeds West, under the new tax credit scheme. [83480]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on eligibility for Sure Start Maternity Grants by family type is not available, either at local or national level.

From April 2003, Sure Start Maternity Grants will be available to families in receipt of Child Tax Credit at a rate greater than the family element (£545/year or £1090 for families with a child under the age of one), or Working Tax Credit where a disabled worker is included in the assessment.

It is estimated that nationally there will be around 250,000 awards of Sure Start Maternity Grants in 2003–04 under the new rules. This compares with 201,000 in 2001–02. Around 25,000 of the additional successful claims will be due to the link to the new tax credits.

Victims of Crime

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Home Department concerning the protection of new identities of victims of crime. [87160]

Mr. McCartney: While there have been no recent discussions between the two Departments, arrangements do exist for additional protection to be applied to the records, held by the Department for Work and Pensions, of certain individuals at risk when requested by the Home Office.

Requests for additional protection from individuals at particular risk are also considered.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many people became newly entitled for the 2002–03 winter fuel payment and who needed to make a claim before 20 September in order to receive their payment before Christmas but failed to do so; and what the value was of such payments. [87600]

Mr. McCartney: We estimate that for winter 2002–03, there could be around 500,000 people newly entitled to a winter fuel payment. Some 250,000 of these are being paid automatically but others, who are not in receipt of certain benefits, will need to claim.

By 20 September 2002, around 170,000 claim forms had been received, although some of these may have been from people entitled to an automatic payment. By the end of November, about a further 35,000 claims had been received.

It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the value of unclaimed winter fuel payments because the amount due depends on the composition of the household. It is up to an individual, where a claim is necessary, to decide whether or not to make that claim.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many single (a) women and (b) men in 2002 will reach the age of 60 years after the qualifying week for winter fuel payment eligibility, but before 25 December. [87601]

Mr. McCartney: It is estimated that around 18,000 single women will attain the age of 60 after the qualifying week (16 to 22 September) and before 25 December 2002 in Great Britain.

It is estimated that around 13,000 single men will attain the age of 60 after the qualifying week (16 to 22 September) and before 25 December 2002 in Great Britain.

Note:

The figures have been calculated using the latest GAD population projections and the Family Resources Survey.

CABINET OFFICE

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office to which bodies the Cabinet Office makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87387]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office has published information on public bodies and appointments to them in "Public Bodies 2001". Copies of this publication may be found in the House Libraries. It gives details on the number of members in total, for each body and a breakdown by gender.

There is no requirement to collect data and analyse how many of the appointees are businessmen and of different sized businesses. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Better Regulation Task Force

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many times the Better Regulation Task Force has met in the last year; what allowances from public funds are made available to members of the Better Regulation Task Force; and what the cost has been since the task force was established. [87608]

Mr. Alexander: There were 10 meetings of the Better Regulation Task Force during the past year. Members of the task force are unpaid, but can claim reasonable travel and subsistence expenses. Before July 1999, when a dedicated support team was established, the administrative costs for the task force were met from within the budget of the Regulatory Impact Unit (and its predecessor) in the Cabinet Office. It is not possible to identify the specific costs within this overall budget. But over the period from July 1999 to the end of November 2002, the administrative and running costs of the task force, covering staff salaries, printing and publication costs etc., have totalled approximately £1,422,000.

Civil Servants and Spending

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many civil servants are employed by his Department; and how much money was spent by his Department in the last 12 months, broken down by local authority area. [87178]

Mr. Alexander: The data are not available in the format requested, except at disproportionate cost. Data for the number of civil servants in the major Departments are published in Table D of Civil Service Statistics, copies of which are laid in the Libraries of both Houses. The latest information, for April 2001, was published in June this year. The remaining information is available for the Government Office Regions of Great Britain.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by him or his predecessor and (b) by Ministers in the Cabinet Office in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87433]

Mr. Alexander: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

Detailed information requested in respect of UK travel is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Panel for Regulatory Accountability

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many times the Panel for Regulatory Accountability has met in the last year; what allowances from public funds are made available to members of the Panel for Regulatory Accountability; and what the cost was in each year since 1997. [87609]

Mr. Alexander: The panel has been a Cabinet Committee since July 2001. It is established practice under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information that information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committee business is not disclosed.

Prior to this, no allowances from public funds were made available to members of the panel in relation to their membership.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many regulatory reform orders have been made since the Regulatory Reform Act 2001 came into force; how many regulatory reform orders are before Parliament; and how many proposed regulatory reform orders were out to public consultation on 1 December. [87604]

Mr. Alexander: Since the Regulatory Reform Act came into force in April 2001 we have made six regulatory reform orders (RROs) . There are a further seven RROs undergoing parliamentary scrutiny. On 1 December there were no proposed RROs out for consultation, but consultation had just ended on four RROs.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate his Department has made of the total savings to business as a result of regulatory reform orders made to date; and what estimate his Department has made of the potential savings to business of (a) regulatory reform orders before Parliament and (b) proposed regulatory reform orders out to public consultation on 1 December. [87605]

Mr. Alexander: The Regulatory Reform Action Plan, which was published in February 2002, listed 268 items, of which 63 were potential Regulatory Reform Orders (RROs), 160 related to business. No total estimate of savings has been made. All Regulatory Reform Orders have to be accompanied by a full Regulatory Impact Assessment, setting out the costs and benefits. Departments have been asked to make these available to the House of Commons Library and on departmental websites.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Air Quality

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent assessment he has made of air quality standards in market towns. [86900]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Air quality in the UK is monitored through the national air quality monitoring networks, which comprise over 1,500 automatic and non-automatic monitoring sites. Many of these monitoring sites are situated in small towns. Historic and current levels of air pollution at all of these sites can be checked via the National Air Quality Information Archive at www.airquality.co.uk For some sites, this information is updated on an hourly basis. For others, the information is updated on a monthly or quarterly basis, depending on the type of site.

In addition to this, local authorities carry out their own reviews and assessments of air quality in their areas, in order to identify any pollution hotspots. Several authorities have identified potentially elevated levels of air pollution in small towns, particularly alongside congested streets. In these cases, authorities are required to designate air quality management areas and to draw up action plans setting out what they intend to do to remedy the situation. Details of all the air quality management areas designated by local authorities to date, together with information on their action plans where available, can be found via the local air quality management section of the National Air Quality Information Archive (www.airquality.co.uk).

Council Tax

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate the cumulative percentage increase in the council tax for a Band D property in each billing local authority in England since 1996. [85494]

Mr. Leslie: A table setting out the cumulative percentage increase in real terms in area council tax for a Band D properly in each billing local authority in England since 1996 has been placed in the Library.

East Lancashire

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times he has visited East Lancashire in his official capacity; and what the purpose was of each visit. [82406]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have visited East Lancashire twice since June 2001. Both visits were related to community cohesion, housing and neighbourhood renewal following the disturbances in June 2001. I plan to return following an invitation from my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike).

Fire Service

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to publish a fire cover review. [87801]

Mr. Raynsford: The fire cover review task group agreed the text of its final report at the end of September 2002. The central fire brigades advisory council will consider the report at a future meeting. If the council endorses the report, it will be published.

Firefighters

Mr. James Paice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, (1) pursuant to his answer of 9 December 2002, Official Report, column 130W, if the proposals for retained firefighters' pay as described in the Fire Employers statement of 13 November would enable individual retained firefighters to assess the impact of their proposals on their own annual income; [87237]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 9 December 2002, Official Report, column 130W, if he will provide the calculations and assumptions from which he derived the typical increase for retained firefighters being 6.4 per cent. more than wholetime firefighters; [87117]

(3) how many hours per annum he estimates (a) a Leading Retained Firefighter and (b) a Retained Firefighter of two years' service would need to work at the hourly rates detailed in the Fire Employers' Statement of 13 November in order to compensate for the combined effects of the alterations to the Annual Retaining Fee, the Turn-out fee and the Attendance fee detailed in the same statement. [87096]

Mr. Raynsford: The local government employers have informed the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister officials that they calculated this figure on the basis that, under the deal outlined in the Fire Brigades Employers Circular of 12 November:

The Retained hourly rate would have been equal to the wholetime hourly rate

The Retaining Fee would have been 10 per cent. of the wholetime annual rate

The Turn-out fee would have been 1.25 per cent. of the wholetime hourly rate

The Attendance fee would have been 0.75 per cent. of the wholetime hourly rate

But under the deal the current Turn-out fee of £13.93 would have been frozen, until the Turn-out fee calculated on the new basis reached this level.

The local government employers have informed the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister officials that under this deal the pay of wholetime firefighters would have risen; and any increases in wholetime rates would have raised retained rates, because they would have been linked.

The local government employers have also informed Office of the Deputy Prime Minister officials that this would have led to the typical increase for retained firefighters being 6.4 per cent. more than that for wholetime firefighters. The Fire Brigades Union rejected this deal.

The information which the local government employers have supplied to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister officials, as described, should allow individual retained firefighters to assess the impact of the proposals on their own annual income. Ultimately, however, it is dependent on the individual retained firefighter's workload.

Homeless People

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of homeless people have suffered from (a) physical assault and (b) mental abuse whilst living on the streets since 1997. [87192]

Mrs. Roche: The information requested is not collected centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will commission research into the causes, extent and possible solutions to household overcrowding in the United Kingdom; [86819]

(2) what measures he plans to bring forward to address changes in the number of households who are two or more bedrooms below the bedroom standard. [86822]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the extent of overcrowding in England is available from the Survey of English Housing. As mentioned in the reply given to my hon. Friend on 7 November 2002, Official Report, column 621W, we are considering whether overcrowding is best tackled through a modern set of standards—updating the present legislative framework or through the new Housing Health and Safety Rating System (HHSRS), which we hope to introduce as a replacement for the housing fitness standard when parliamentary time allows. Our consideration of options will take account of our understanding of the underlying causes of household overcrowding.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many households in each Government Office region have been shown by the Survey of English Housing 2001–02 to be two or more bedrooms below the bedroom standard (a) in total and (b) in the private rented sector; [86821]

(2) how many households are three or more bedrooms below the bedroom standard; and if he will make a statement. [86818]

Mr. McNulty: The number of households three or more bedrooms below the bedroom standard is extremely small which means that any estimate from a sample survey will be subject to a very wide margin of error. The best estimate from Survey of English Housing data, averaged over the last three years (1999–2000, 2000–01, 2001–02) is 4,000 households out of more than 20 million households.

The number of households in each Government Office region two or more bedrooms below the bedroom standard, estimated from Survey of English Housing data and averaged over the last three years, is shown in the table.

[1] Bedroom standard is an indicator of occupation density. A notional number of bedrooms are allocated to each household in accordance with its age/sex/marital status composition and the relationship of the members to each other. This is then compared with the actual number of bedrooms (including bedsitters) available for the sole use of the household.

Inspectors

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what standards of competence he sets for (a) building regulations inspectors and (b) National House-Building Council inspectors. [86907]

Mr. Leslie: It is for each local authority with building control responsibilities to decide on the qualifications and experience of officers employed by them on building control duties.

The National House-Building Council is an independent, non-profit distributing company. Inspectors employed by the NHBC carry out inspections in connection with their Buildmark new home warranty scheme. It is for the NHBC to decide whom to employ for purposes connected with that non-statutory scheme.

NHBC inspectors also carry out inspections for building control purposes in cases where NHBC's subsidiary, NHBC Building Control Services Ltd, is acting as an approved inspector. Under Part II of the Building Act 1984, a person carrying out regulated building work may engage an approved inspector as an alternative to applying to the local authority building control department.

Approved inspectors are subject to periodic re-approval by the Construction Industry Council, which is the body designated by the Secretary of State for the purpose of approving inspectors under Part II of the Building Act. The CIC have drawn up criteria for assessing the qualifications and experience of companies and individuals applying or re-applying for the status of approved inspector.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will meet a delegation comprising of hon. Members from Dorset and representatives of the county and district councils to discuss the local authority funding settlement for the county. [87557]

Mr. Raynsford: I would be happy to consider meeting such a delegation, if a representative of the authorities concerned were to write to me setting out the points they wish to raise.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people he estimates are sleeping rough. [87422]

Mrs. Roche: As of June 2002, local authority statistics show that around 600 people are sleeping rough on any one night. This represents a reduction of around two-thirds since 1998 when it was estimated that nearly 2,000 people were sleeping rough on any one night.

Sangatte

Mr. Portillo: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether persons from Sangatte admitted to the UK under special arrangements will be eligible for local authority housing at the end of their period in hotels financed by central Government. [87510]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

Those persons admitted from Sangatte to the United Kingdom under special arrangements are being brought here, not as asylum seekers, but on work visas to contribute and pay taxes. Once they arrive they are being given accommodation while we start the process of training and job matching. We are confident that they will be able to move on to alternative accommodation within three months. In the event of an individual being unable to find their own accommodation they would be eligible to apply for assistance from a local housing authority, but we expect numbers to be small and any burden to be spread across different local authorities.

Sellers' Packs

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he intends to publish the two further consultation papers on the seller's pack. [87596]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to publish early next year consultation papers on the detailed contents of the seller's pack and the application of seller's packs in areas of lowest property values and demand.

Tax Credits

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in the Local Government Finance Report (England) 2003–04 (1) what figure was used for the number of children of claimants of (a) working families tax credit and (b) disabled person's tax credit, used in the calculation of (i) additional needs for primary pupils and (ii) additional needs for secondary pupils, for each local authority; [87018]

(2) how many pupils (a) of primary school age have a mother tongue that is not English and (b) of secondary school age are in low achieving ethnic groups in each local authority; [87016]

(3) what figures were used in the calculation of (a) district, (b) environmental protection and (c) cultural services deprivation top-up for each non-metropolitan district council in non-metropolitan areas; [87020]

(4) what was the average number of dependent children of claimants receiving income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance used in the calculation of (a) additional needs for primary pupils and (b) additional needs for secondary pupils, for each local authority; [87017]

(5) what figure was used in the calculation of net in-commuters and day visitors of each non-metropolitan district council in non-metropolitan areas. [87021]

Mr. Leslie: The figures for the number of children of recipients of working families tax credit and disabled person's tax credit used in the additional education needs for both primary and secondary pupils are from the August 2001, November 2001, February 2002 and May 2002 releases, as published by the Inland Revenue.

For reasons of confidentiality, data on children of working families tax credit recipients are combined with children of disabled person's tax credit recipients by the Inland Revenue, and are therefore not available separately. The combined figures are used within the provisional Local Government Finance Settlement.

The same data are used for both (i) additional needs for primary pupils and (ii) additional needs for secondary pupils.

The total number of working families and disabled person's tax credit recipients, in each authority, together with the other information requested (and all the data used in calculating the provisional Local Government Finance Settlement) are on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website within "Table 1" of the data section. http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/0304/tabs034.htm

HOME DEPARTMENT

Aerosol Spray Paint

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he intends to take to ban sales of aerosol spray paint to children across the UK. [86424]

Mr. Denham: The Government take the problem of graffiti very seriously and are examining ways in which it they can reduce the problem. The London Local Authorities Bill, which is currently before Parliament, would clamp down on the sale of spray paints to under 18 year olds within the London area. We are looking carefully at whether we should adopt this approach nationally as part of the Anti-Social Behaviour Bill.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-social behaviour orders have been in force in each month since their introduction. [86182]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 December 2002]: An anti-social behaviour order (ASBO) is a civil order that has been available to the police and local authorities since April 1999. ASBOs are granted for a minimum period of two years.

From 1 April 1999 to 31 May 2000, data on the number of ASBOs issued was collected by police force area. From 1 June 2000, official statistics on the number of ASBOs issued are based on quarterly returns from Magistrates' Courts Committees (MCCs).

Available information in the table shows the number of notifications received by the Home Office of ASBOs issued from 1 April 1999 up to 30 June 2002 (latest available) and by duration of order given since June 2000. We do not collect information on the number of ASBOs in force at any given period, and cannot estimate it reliably from the data in the table.

We are aware that the numbers of ASBOs made locally have been consistently under reported in returns made by magistrates' courts and are considering how reporting can be improved.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long on average it takes to introduce an anti-social behaviour order. [86427]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 December 2002]: A survey of anti-social behaviour order (ASBO) monitoring forms indicated that the court process was taking on average 13 weeks. To improve the effectiveness of ASBOs and reduce delays, legislative changes have been made under the Police Reform Act 2002 and new guidance published. Courts may now make an interim order to protect the community from the start of the court process, and criminal courts may make orders on conviction, thereby avoiding the need for a separate court process and making better use of court time. In addition, orders may now also cover a wider area, and from 1 April 2003, county courts will be able to make orders when dealing with other civil action.

We will continue to review implementation of these orders with a view to considering whether they can be further streamlined.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide temporary accommodation for asylum seekers within the Daventry district; and if he will make a statement. [87120]

Beverley Hughes: Daventry is not currently a dispersal area for asylum seekers who need accommodation. Asylum seekers without accommodation will be provided with emergency accommodation while their application for support is assessed. The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) does not have any current plans to use Daventry as either a dispersal area or for the emergency accommodation of asylum seekers.

Urgent accommodation has had to be found to cater for the arrivals from Sangatte. As part of this exercise NASS did consider a site (the Landmark hotel) in the Daventry district. In the event a decision was taken not to use the site for this or any other purpose at this time.

NASS needs to keep its accommodation needs under continual review. While I cannot say that the area will never be used to accommodate asylum seekers I can say that we have no present plans to do so.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it a policy of the Government to require all asylum seekers to comply with a medical examination; and if he will make a statement. [87556]

Beverley Hughes: We do not believe that it is necessary to require all asylum seekers to undergo a medical examination as a matter of policy although development of the new policy initiatives introduced by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act will effectively introduce screening to all those who attend an induction centre.

Once they are fully operational we intend that all new asylum applicants who go to an induction centre on arrival will undergo basic health screening. A pilot screening programme started at the Dover induction centre this summer. The evaluation of this pilot has not yet been completed. Immigration officers are obliged, under the terms of the immigration rules, to refer for medical examination anyone who mentions health or medical treatment as a reason for coming to the United Kingdom or who appears not to be in good physical or mental health. Furthermore those seeking leave to enter the United Kingdom for a period of more than six months should normally be referred.

Asylum Seekers (Support)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of applicants per week who, from 8 January 2003, will no longer be eligible for support as a result of section 55 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002; what steps he will take to monitor the number of in-country asylum applicants refused National Asylum Support Service assistance as a result of section 55 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002, whose claim for asylum is subsequently refused on the grounds of non-compliance; and if he will make a statement. [85820]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 10 December 2002]: Based on an analysis of recent intake it is estimated that, from 8 January 2003, 700 applicants per week (ie an average of about 100 per day) would fall into the category of people who could no longer be eligible for support as a result of section 55 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 (the 2002 Act) unless they could show that they had made their asylum application as soon as reasonably practicable after entering the United Kingdom.

From 8 January 2003, there will be detailed internal monitoring of the numbers refused National Asylum Support Service support as a result of section 55 of the 2002 Act. This information will be used to track each case through to service of the initial decision on the asylum application and to monitor the number subsequently refused on the grounds of non-compliance.

Child Safety Orders

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many child safety orders have been in place in each month since their introduction. [86178]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 December 2002]: Two child safety orders were issued in the areas in which they were piloted between September 1998 and June 2000.

Child Curfew Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local child curfew schemes were in force in each month between (a) October 1998 and July 2001 and (b) August 2001 and the latest month for which figures are available. [86181]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 December 2002]: No applications have yet been received to establish a local child curfew scheme under section 14 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. Some local authorities and police forces have considered the possibility, but concluded that other measures should be taken to tackle relevant local problems.

Class A Drugs (Teenagers)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many teenagers have tried class A drugs in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the north-east of England and (c) the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East. [86499]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The 2001–02 British Crime Survey estimates that 11 per cent. of 16 to 19 year-olds in England and Wales have tried a class A drug. The equivalent estimate for the north-east of England is 14 per cent. The difference between theEngland and Wales estimate and the north-east estimate is not statistically significant. These data are not available at constituency level.

The drug use, smoking and drinking among young people in England in 2001 survey estimates that six per cent. of school children aged between 11 and 15 years old have tried a class A drug. No geographical breakdown is available for this age group.

Community Beat Officers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community beat officers are working in the London Borough of Wandsworth. [86825]

Mr. Denham: This information is not collected centrally.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local authorities contributed to the cost of recruiting, training and equipping local neighbourhood special constables for duty in their area in each year since section 2 of the Police Act 1996 came into operation. [86916]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 12 December 2002]: This information is not collected centrally.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he intends to reply to the letter forwarded to him, dated 17 October 2002, from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Burham Fajax; [86657]

(2) when he intends to reply to the letter to him, dated 17 October 2002, from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Burham Fatah. [87662]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 13 December 2002.

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 28 October regarding a constituent, ref. 22821/2. [86873]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 12 December 2002]: My noble Friend (Lord Filkin), wrote to my right hon. Friend on 11 December 2002.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Broxbourne will receive a reply to her letters of 14 August, 11 September, 7 November and 5 December relating to her constituent, Mr. Mohamed Mady. [87006]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to the hon. Member on 16 December 2002.

County Support Officers

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if county support officers will be issued with (a) body armour, (b) radios and (c) other forms of officer safety equipment; if they will undergo (i) officer safety training and (ii) first aid training; who will supervise the CSOs; whether additional training in supervision will be provided to officers assuming this responsibility; who will complete CSO annual appraisals; if they will form part of the service PDRs; who will be responsible for CSO professional development; and who will be required to check and monitor reports generated by the CSOs; [86809]

(2) if there will be a facility for the services of a county support officer to be dispensed with if the required standards are not achieved; if there will be grading within the CSO infrastructure; who will be responsible for CSO complaints and discipline; what arrangements have been made for CSO transport; if the CSOs will have their own drivers; and who will deal with administration in connection with CSOs; [86808]

(3) who will brief and de-brief county support officers; if they will be posted operationally with police officers; who will be assuming responsibility for discharging a duty of care towards CSOs; what impact he estimates additional supervision will have on

(a) sergeants and inspectors; where CSOs will be based; what educational standards are necessary for recruitment to CSO recruitment; what medical and health standards are required; if CSOs will be required to attain a set level of fitness; what the requirements are with respect to previous convictions; what the content is of the CSO training programme; who will be delivering the CSO training; where it will be delivered; and if he will make a statement. [86810]

Mr. Denham: Chief officers can designate persons employed by their police authority as Community Support Officers (CSOs) under section 38 of the Police Reform Act 2002 when they are satisfied that the person is a suitable person to effectively carry out the functions for the purposes of which he is designated and that he has received adequate training in the carrying out of those functions. Issues such as the deployment, equipment, and supervision arrangements for CSOs are operational matters and are determined by chief officers with knowledge of the local areas where they will deploy CSOs. A chief officer can also remove a designation if he considers that the conditions for designation are no longer met.

CSOs are a new addition to the extended policing family. We are aiming to have 1,200 CSOs deployed nationally in 27 forces by 1 April 2003. Once the lessons from the deployment of the first batches of CSOs become clear the Secretary of State, following consultation with the Association of Police Authorities and the Association of Chief Police Officers, will issue a Code of Practice under section 45 of the Police Reform Act to which chief officers must have regard, to set out good practice in relation to some of these matters.

Crime (Cleveland)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the crime statistics for the area covered by the Cleveland police in each of the last five years. [86399]

Mr. Denham: Numbers of crimes recorded by the police, broken down by police force, are published annually. Details for the years from 1997 to 2000–01 have been published in successive editions of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales", which are available in the Library. The figures for 2001–02 have been included in a new publication, "Crime in England and Wales 2001–02" (Home Office Statistical Bulletin 7/02), which was published in July this year, and which is also available in the Library.

Crime (Teesside)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Government initiatives have been put in place in Teesside to bring down crime. [86498]

Mr. Denham: A total of £3,404,361 is being provided to Teesside Crime Reduction Partnerships for crime reduction initiatives in Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Stockton, Redcar and Cleveland during 2002–03.

Crime reduction initiatives which are currently being taken forward are the Safer Communities Initiative (£231,204), Closed Circuit Television (£782,650), Small Retailers in Deprived Areas (£120,000), Reducing Domestic Violence (£389,385), Street Wardens Initiative (£712,712), Neighbourhood Wardens Initiative (£376,550), Communities Against Drugs (£611,300), Reducing Burglary Initiative (£248,300) and Partnership Development Fund (£188,560). In addition, there are two New Deal for Communities areas at Middlesbrough and Hartlepool, each spending over six million on crime reduction initiatives over the lifetime of the scheme. Cleveland Police have also received £300,000 for 2002–03 to fund 40 Community Support Officers.

Departmental Offices

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what timber has been used at the construction site of the new Home Office building at 2 Marsham Street; who supplied this timber; and what evidence the supplier gave that it came from legal and sustainable sources. [83927]

Beverley Hughes: As the former towers are still being demolished no construction works have so far been undertaken on the Home Office's new building at 2 Marsham Street. Foundation works are scheduled to start in December.

While the timing of timber purchases is not yet known the contract management arrangements will provide information to the Department about what timber has been purchased and to ensure that it is sourced from suppliers in a legal and sustainable way.

Drug-related Crime (Teesside)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of crime in Teesside is deemed to be drug-related. [86458]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Recorded crime figures include statistics on drugs offences, such as possession, and on acquisitive crimes, such as burglary, but do not record whether the latter are related to an offender's drug habits.

However, the New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring (NEW-ADAM) research programme, which involves interviewing and drug testing those arrested by the police, confirms a link between drug misuse and crime, although the conclusions do not relate specifically to Teesside. Analysis of the data from the first eight sites in the survey, collected during 1999–2000, shows that 65 per cent. of arrestees provided a urine sample that tested positive for one or more illegal drug. The analysis also shows that up to 29 per cent. of arrestees tested positive for opiates (including heroin) and/or cocaine (including crack).

As a guide to the proportion of crime that is drug-related, analysis of the NEW-ADAM self-report data indicates that while only 21 per cent. of non-drug using arrestees reporting having previously offended in the past 12 months, this figure rises to 75 per cent. for those arrestees who use heroin and/or cocaine/crack. Moreover, while users of both heroin and cocaine/crack represented just under one quarter of all arrestees interviewed, they were responsible for more than three-fifths of all the illegal income reported.

In support of this, 55 per cent. of arrestees who reported using one or more drugs in the last 12 months and committing one of more acquisitive crimes, acknowledged a link between their drug use and their offending behaviour. This proportion rose to 78 per cent. for arrestees who said they had used heroin and cocaine/crack.

Family Support Grant

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money his Department has allocated to awards for family support grant; under what headings applications are being considered; how much funding is allocated under each heading; and if he will make a statement. [87143]

Beverley Hughes: The Family Support Grant is currently worth a total of £5.8 million a year. The Home Office has allocated up to £1.265 million to make new awards under the Family Support Grant starting in 2003–04. As in previous years there are three strands.

The first strand is for national, regional or local voluntary organisations seeking to deliver innovative projects for parenting support—£440,000 has been allocated.

The second strand is for national, regional or local voluntary organisations wishing to further develop and replicate previously successfully completed Family Support Grant funded work. It must focus on either fathering and/or parenting teenagers as funded in the first or second Family Support Grant rounds (1999–2000 and 2000–2001). £440,000 has been allocated.

The third strand is for voluntary organisations for work with black and minority ethnic parents specifically to help them with their parenting skills. To be eligible the work must focus either on supporting refugee parents with their parenting and/or supporting parents who are struggling with parenting their teenagers. £385,000 has been allocated. In addition, up to £55,000 will be available to provide extra support to the newly funded organisations given that they are likely to be less experienced than those applying for the other two strands, and to enable shared learning.

Each grant is worth up to £55,000 per annum for up to three years. This is a rise from the previous annual maximum of £50,000.

The closing date for applications was 10 December. These are still being processed but there are approximately 300 applications, with the majority applying under the first and third strands. Decisions will be announced no later than mid March 2003 and if it is possible to notify applicants any earlier this will be done.

The Family Support Grant also give score funding to Parentline Plus for its helpline; to the National Family Parenting Institute and to Home Start.

The balance is for continuation funding for those organisations funded from the previous two rounds.

Fireworks

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the anti-social behaviour associated with fireworks around 5 November this year. [83634]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 5 December 2002]: We are concerned about the nuisance and noise associated with fireworks. We have set up a monitoring exercise involving nine Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships (CDRPs) to focus on best practice and to identify clearly the number and scale of the problem caused. This commenced on 23 October and will run until 15 January in order to take into account 5 November, New Year and other festivals. At the end of the exercise we will analyse the findings and place the results in the Library.

Hard Case Support

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications he has received for hard case support over the last year; and how many have been successful. [86565]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is not available.

Hornchurch

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out, including statistical information relating as directly as possible to the constituency, the effect on the Hornchurch constituency of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [85081]

Mr. Denham: Detailed information on the impact of Home Office policies across the full range of responsibilities is set out in Home Office annual reports. A copy of the most recent report, Home Office Annual Report 2001–2002, is available in the Library. Information on recorded crime and policing is also published.

The impact of Home Office policies and actions is not normally examined by constituency and the statistics which the Department collects cannot be matched in the way requested although set out are examples relating to the Hornchurch constituency or the immediate locality, as follows:

Hornchurch benefits from projects which cover the wider area of Havering. The Havering Drugs Action Team is receiving £566,000 this year from a combined Home Office and Department of Health fund to develop and extend local drug treatment services. These funds will rise to £924,000 by 2005–06. Separately the current "Don't Buy Crime" campaign is raising awareness about purchasing stolen goods. This is part of the Home Office's "Safer Communities Initiative" under which £72,565 has been allocated to Havering for 2002–03.

One recent initiative specifically affected Hornchurch: a London Regional Transport close circuit television (CCTV) scheme called the "Hewkeye Project", in which CCTV cameras and associated equipment provided coverage of a station car park. The project was a joint venture involving London Regional Transport, the British Transport Police and local partnerships. Forty-six other car parks in the London region also benefited from the scheme. The package is intended to reduce incidences of motor vehicle crime and the fear of crime for car park users and passengers.

Essex was one of 27 police forces which successfully bid for funding for community support officers and in the year ending 31 March 2002 the Metropolitan Police Force strength had increased by over 1,300 officers compared with the previous 12 months.

More generally, all of the policies of the Home Office will impact on the residents of Hornchurch to a greater or lesser extent. For example:

The level of Class A drug abuse by under 25-year-olds has stabilised and we are increasing the emphasis on treatment as a response to drug abuse generally;

The interim target of 60 per cent. of all asylum applications being decided within two months has been met;

Vehicle crime is down 8.8 per cent. from levels in 1998–09.

There have been no escapes by Category A prisoners since 1995.

Information on the Home Office and its policies is also published on its website www.homeoffice.gov.uk

Immigration

Mr. Portillo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons will be admitted to the UK under the special arrangements covering people previously accommodated at Sangatte. [87508]

Beverley Hughes: 1,018 people have been brought to the United Kingdom under these arrangements and Sangatte is now empty.

Mr. Portillo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits (a) have been and (b) will be issued to persons formerly accommodated at Sangatte and admitted to the UK under the recently negotiated special arrangements. [87509]

Beverley Hughes: Iraqis from Sangatte have been given a visa which permits them to work; 899 of these visas had been issued.

Iraqi Asylum Seekers

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account he has taken of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office document "Saddam Hussein: Crimes and human rights abuses" in determining asylum applications from Iraqis; how many Iraqis await determination of their applications; what the (a) current average wait and (b) 20 longest waits for determination for present Iraqi asylum seekers; how many such asylum seekers are (i) in jail and (ii) in detention; how long each one has been there; whether he plans to change his Department's policy as a consequence of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office report; and if he will make a statement. [86230]

Beverley Hughes: As with all asylum applications, Iraqi cases are considered on their individual merits under the terms of the 1951 UN Convention, and in the light of up to date information from a wide variety of sources, including information from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

We continue to monitor events in Iraq closely. We will keep under review our handling of asylum applications in light of any changes in country conditions.

Information on how many Iraqis are awaiting determination of their asylum applications, and the length of time they have been outstanding, is only available by examination of individual case files at disproportionate cost.

Published statistics on immigration detention are issued on a quarterly basis. The latest available data on asylum seekers held in detention in the United Kingdom solely under Immigration Act powers are for 28 September 2002 and are as follows:

Iraqi asylum seekers held solely under Immigration Act powers on 28 September 2002

By place of detention
Removal centres/immigration short term holding facilities	10
Prison Service establishments	5
Total	10
By length of detention
Less than 1 month	10
Between 1 and 6 months	5
Total	10

Notes:
Figures are rounded to the nearest five with * denoting 1 or 2. Figures may not sum due to rounding.
1. Persons detained solely under Immigration Act powers who are recorded as having sought asylum at some stage.
2. Length of detention information relates to current period of detention; where persons have been transferred to and subsequently from Oakington Reception Centre, excludes time in detention prior to the transfer from Oakington.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the outcome was of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held in Brussels on 28 and 29 November; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [85856]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: My hon. Friend (Lord Filkin) and the noble Baroness Scotland of Asthal represented the United Kingdom at the Justice and Home Affairs (JHA) Council in Brussels on 28–29 November.

The A points were approved as in document PTS A 62 (14754/02) (a copy of which has been placed in the Library) with the exception of item 16. Ministers signed the Protocol to the Europol Convention agreed at item 4.

The presidency advised on progress in implementing the Seville European Council conclusions, presenting a report on action taken to combat illegal immigration and human trafficking and on management of the external border. Member states urged the Commission to produce its overdue report on financial resources for repatriation, border management and migration projects. The Commission explained that the financial resources had to come from the current financial perspective, which required re-evaluation of existing commitments within the JHA and External Relations budgets, but that national expenditure would need to remain a significant source of funding.

The Council adopted negotiating mandates for the Commission to pursue readmission agreements with Turkey, Albania, Algeria and China. The aim will be to agree arrangements with those countries for the return of their nationals who have entered the EU illegally. Over lunch, Ministers also discussed the application of the readmission provision in the Cotonou agreement. This would allow member states to approach African Caribbean and Pacific areas countries bilaterally to ask them to take back their nationals.

The Council discussed the time limits to be applied for determining responsibility for an asylum claim in the regulation establishing the criteria and mechanisms for determining the member state responsible for examining an asylum application lodged in one of the member states by a third-country national (Dublin II). The presidency concluded that member states would have one week in which to accept or reject a compromise package comprising a time limit of one year for responsibility on the basis of illegal entry across the external frontier and five months for tolerated illegal presence in a member state. The Council agreed that the latter criterion should apply only to asylum seekers illegally present after the entry into force of the regulation. The Council also agreed to a minutes statement addressing the possible future inclusion in the regulation's scope of applicants for subsidiary protection.

The Council held a brief discussion of Articles 1–19 of the Council directive on minimum standards for the qualification and status of third-country nationals and stateless persons as refugees or as persons who otherwise need international protection concerning the definition of a refugee and those entitled to subsidiary protection. However, two member states maintained reservations on the text.

With the exception of one member state, Ministers agreed to amend Article 16 of the directive laying down minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers in member states in line with a United Kingdom proposal allowing for the refusal of support to asylum seekers making late applications. The one other remaining reserve on the text was lifted following a change to Article 11 concerning access to labour markets.

The Council also agreed a statement declaring the European Free Trade Areas and Accession States (from the date of signature of the Accession Treaties) to be safe third countries for the purposes of asylum.

The Council adopted a Community programme on the return of third country nationals to source countries and a programme intended specifically to address returns to Afghanistan. The Council also took note of Council conclusions agreed by the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 18 November concerning the integration of immigration policy into the Union's relations with third countries. Lord Filkin welcomed the conclusions as a positive first step but called for the monitoring of returns projects to ensure that they were effective.

The Council agreed a package of provisions on child abduction for inclusion in the regulation concerning jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments in matrimonial matters and in matters of parental responsibility. These were based on retention of existing Hague Convention arrangements with additional rules where a non-return order has been issued under the 1980 Hague Convention on Child Abduction. In order to encourage other member states to accept the compromise, Baroness Scotland proposed the creation of a strict timetable to initiate custody proceedings in the home court following a non-return order.

Consequently, member states were also able to agree the Council Decision authorising the member states, in the interest of the European Community, to sign the Convention on jurisdiction, applicable law, recognition, enforcement and co-operation in respect of parental responsibility and measures for the protection of children.

The Council agreed to revise the negotiating mandated for the draft agreement between the European Union and United States of America on judicial co-operation in criminal matters and on extradition.

The Council discussed a presidency compromise package intended to address member states' outstanding reservations on the proposed offences in the Framework Decision combating racism and xenophobia. Lord Filkin, with four other member states, agreed that proposal struck the right balance between punishing racist and xenophobic acts and protecting freedom of expression. However, the remaining member states were divided in either expressing fundamental problems with the scope of the instrument or wanting to go substantially further, in particular in reducing the threshold for criminal liability.

The presidency sought agreement to its compromise proposal regarding the abolition of the dual criminality requirement in the Framework Decision on the application of the principle of mutual recognition to financial penalties. This would enable member states to maintain dual criminality for a transitional period of up to five years. Although this was acceptable to the majority of delegations, including the United Kingdom, five member states maintained reservations.

Two member states maintained reservations on the proposed penalties for trafficking in small quantities of drugs in the Framework Decision laying down minimum provisions on the constituent elements of criminal acts and penalties in the field of drug trafficking.

Two member states also maintained reservations on the scope of the offences of active and passive corruption in Article 2 of the Framework Decision on combating corruption in the private sector.

Under Any Other Business the presidency emphasised the importance of securing an agreement between Europol and the United States of America on the exchange of personal data. The Commission also asked the Council to consider its proposal for a Council Decision on financing certain activities carried out by Europol to fight terrorism. The latter point would be considered at the December JHA Council.

National Alert Rating

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the national alert rating for each public sector was in each year since 1997. [85642]

Mr. Denham: For reasons of security it would not be appropriate to comment on the states of alert operated across the various sectors.

Official Travel

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total budget of (a) his Department and (b) its agencies is for official travel in 2002–03. [84931]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 3 December 2002]: On current estimates the Home Office expects to spend £14,920,000 on official travel in 2002–03. The estimated expenditure of the agencies is as follows:

Forensic Science Service	1,949,000
Her Majesty's Prison Service	9,640,000
United Kingdom Passport Service	1,327,000

The above figures include the cost of subsistence allowance which cannot be identified separately without disproportionate cost. The Prison Service figure includes the travel and subsistence cost of prison staff escorting prisoners. The cost of escorts for asylum seekers is not included as they are provided by the private sector.

Police Appointments

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recruitment and deployment practices exist for the appointment of a police borough commander in a London Borough; and if he will make a statement. [85678]

Mr. Denham: The appointment of a police borough commander to a London borough is an operational policing matter that falls under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Police Transfers

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of, and how many, police officers transferred out of each police force in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [83370]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 27 November 2002]: The tables show (i) the numbers of officers transferred from each force, (ii) the proportion of force strength represented by these transfers, (iii) the numbers of officers transferred in to each force and (iv) the net result for each force of this transfer activity in the last three years.

[1] As of April 2000, the Metropolitan Police force was reduced in size by a transfer of responsibility for policing some areas to the surrounding forces of Surrey, Hertfordshire and Essex. The effects of the Metropolitan Police boundary changes on 1 April 2000 were incorporated into the police funding formula and the overall transfer between the forces was in terms of financial resources, not of officers.

Prince of Wales (Gifts)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what powers, and on whose authority, the security services intercepted the conversation between Harold Brown and Jan Havlik about the model of an Arabian ship given as a wedding present to their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales by the Emir of Bahrain; and if he will make a statement. [86184]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 December 2002]: The policy of successive governments is to neither confirm nor deny allegations as to whether a particular individual is or has been subject to an interception warrant under part I of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000.

Social Security Benefits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that the question and advice about social security benefits that appears on the back of ordinary death certificates is printed on the back of death certificates provided by coroners' offices. [86603]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 10 December 2002]: We have been considering with the Department for Work and Pensions how best to ensure that timely information about such benefits can be drawn to the attention of the bereaved. I am afraid that coroners' interim certificates of the fact of death are not suitablefor this ppurpose, but I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

States of Alert

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the states of alert which are operated by government establishments, and the criteria which apply in each case. [86447]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary gave to the hon. Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Marsden) on 25 November 2002, Official Report, column 106W.

Truant Children

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times in each month since its introduction police have used their powers under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 to remove truant children to designated places. [86180]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The information is not held centrally. Police forces are not required to inform the Secretary of State when using the powers provided by section 16 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 to pick up truants in public places and return them to school or other designated place.

We have encouraged the police and local education authorities to undertake truancy sweeps on a regular basis, based on an assessment of local truancy problems. We are also making use of truancy sweeps as part of our efforts to tackle street crime. A co-ordinated programme of truancy sweeps during May this year in the street crime areas saw over 12,000 pupils stopped in 900 sweeps.

Drugs Strategy

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which targets have been (a) abandoned, (b) retained and (c) newly adopted following the updated drug strategy; and how progress on targets is to be monitored and reported. [86536]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We have not abandoned our targets. Following a review of the Drug Strategy, we concluded that the targets covered the right areas but, as the Home Affairs Committee noted, in some cases they were aspirational. We need targets which are challenging but achievable and which drive an emphasis on tackling problematic drug use and on reducing the harm caused by drugs.

The new targets are set out in the list. The targets are monitored and delivered by Departments working closely together, although each target has a lead Department which co-ordinates delivery. These are indicated in the list.

We will continue to report publicly on our progress through general reports on the strategy and through specific statistical bulletins. As with previous targets, more detailed information on how the new targets will be measured will be set out in technical notes available on departmental websites. The Department of Health Technical Note is already on their website at http://www.doh.gov.uk/psa/index.htm. Other technical notes will be published shortly.

Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets from the previous spending review (SR2000) and the corresponding new targets from this latest spending review (SR2002).

Young People (Home Office lead)

SR2000 target: reduce the proportion of people under the age of 25 reporting the use of class A drugs 25 per cent. by 2005 and by 50 per cent. by 2008

New target: reduce the use of class A drugs and the frequent use of any illicit drug among all young people under the age of 25 especially by the most vulnerable young people

Tackling Supply: (Her Majesty's Customs and Excise lead)

SR2000 target: reduce the availability of Class A drugs by 25 per cent. by 2005 and 50 per cent. by 2008

New target: reduce the availability of illegal drugs by increasing:

the proportion of heroin and cocaine targeted on the UK which is taken out;

the disruption /dismantling of those criminal groups responsible for supplying substantial quantities of class A drugs to the UK market; and the recovery of drug-related criminal assets.

And the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has also set a target to:

Contribute to the reduction of opium production in Afghanistan, with poppy cultivation reduced by 70 per cent. within five years and elimination within 10 years.

Drug related crime: (Home Office lead)

SR2000 target: reduce the levels of repeat offending among drug misusing offenders by 25 per cent. by 2005 and 50 per cent. by 2008

New target: reduce drug-related crime, including as measured by the proportion of offenders testing positive for arrest

Treatment: (Department of Health lead)

SR2000 Target: Increase the participation of problem drug users in drug treatment programmes by 55 per cent. by 2004 and by 100 per cent. by 2008.

New target: Increase the participation of problem drug users in drug treatment programmes by 55 per cent. by 2004 and by 100 per cent. by 2008, and increase year on year the proportion of users successfully sustaining or completing treatment programmes.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places are available on government—unded drug rehabilitation programmes; and how many will be made available as a result of the Updated Drugs Strategy. [86539]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Since 1997 the number of treatment services in England has increased by a third to 715. Under the Updated Drug Strategy, the National Treatment Agency will continue to work to increase the number and capacity of all treatment services to meet the target of doubling the number of people in structured treatment to 200,000 a year by 2008.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what part the concept of indefinite remedial care and harm minimisation for individuals using illegal drugs or prescribed substitutes will play as an alternative to rehabilitation and abstinence under the Updated Drug Strategy. [86540]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The primary goal of all treatment is abstinence while recognising that some drug misusers may require longer-term support to achieve this. Approaches, such as prescribing methadone or diamorphine as a substitute for illicit opiates, have proven benefits for certain individuals and for society, particularly in terms of stabilising the individual, and reducing injecting behaviour and criminal activity.

The Updated Drug Strategy also contains as a key element the target of reducing drug-related deaths by 20 per cent. by 2004—often the final tragic result of years of risky patterns of use and poor health. Improving the basic health of drug misusers benefits them and the wider community. Programmes will focus on the key risks to health, reaching out on to the street and other places to target drug misusers in crisis.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what breakdowns are available for each of the four headings in the direct annual expenditure table on page 64 of the Updated Drugs Strategy document. [86543]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The following initiatives will be among those funded from the additional expenditure being injected into the Drug Strategy.

Drug Treatment

An expansion of the volume and range of treatment provision including treatment in adult Prisons.

Protecting Young People

The Positive Futures programme;

Outreach workers for young people;

Expansion of treatment and care both in the community and in custodial facilities;

Arrest referral and community treatment for young people;

Community sentences for young people; and Drug workers in juvenile custodial facilities.

Safeguarding communities.

The expansion of drug testing for those arrested for certain offences;

The introduction, on a pilot basis, of a presumption against bail for those arrested for certain offences who test positive and decline treatment; The expansion of Drug Treatment and Testing Orders and the introduction of generic community sentences; Consolidation and improvements in the quality of the Arrest Referral initiative; and

The Introduction of a comprehensive programme of throughcare and aftercare for those in and leaving treatment, including those leaving prison.

The amount spent on each initiative may vary from year to year as an initiative is rolled out and as the actual as opposed to estimated costs are established.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the access to drug detox and rehab programmes of drug addicts (a) within the criminal justice system and (b) outside of it; and if it is an aim of the Updated Drug Strategy to achieve equality of access. [86544]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Treatment works. It leads to reductions in both drug use and offending. We want to ensure that all those in need of treatment have access to it, whether it is through the community or criminal justice system.

The Updated Drug Strategy focuses on getting problematic drug users into treatment. Filling gaps in provision, reducing waiting times and using every opportunity presented by the criminal justice system will ensure this target is met.

Mr. Gary Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Government has to monitor average persistence of prescribed (a) diamorphine and (b) methadone use per individual under programmes supported by the Updated Drug Strategy. [86545]

Mr. Streeter: Under the Updated Drug Strategy, the treatment target has been extended not only to monitor the number of drug misusers entering treatment services, but also to monitor the proportion of users successfully sustaining or completing treatment programmes. This will include drug misusers on diamorphine or methadone prescribing programmes. Performance against the treatment target will be monitored by the National Drug Treatment Monitoring System.

TRANSPORT

Ecological Cars

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why ecological cars licensed prior to March 2001 do not benefit from the lower road tax applicable to vehicles in this class registered post March 2001. [87114]

Mr. Jamieson: In order to introduce a VED scheme based on carbon dioxide CO_2 emissions (in turn, based on information obtained during the EU Type Approval test) it was necessary to develop systems to enable emissions information to be held on the vehicle register at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA). It was also necessary to allow time for motor manufacturers and dealers to make changes to their IT systems to accommodate the new system. Although CO_2 information has been available for most new cars registered since 1997, it would have been major and very costly bureaucratic exercise to collect CO_2 information retrospectively.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer took these factors into account in setting 1 March 2001 as the date when the scheme should take effect. Whatever date the Chancellor had set, apparently identical vehicles registered either side of that date might have paid different VED rates.

A further reason for choosing the date took into account the effect on the second hand car market. The March 2001 date coincided with the introduction of the "Y" registration prefix letter and accordingly would make for a clear indication of what vehicles were, and which were not taxed under the CO_2 scheme. That was particularly important as we expect and intend that the scheme to have a strong impact on incentives in the second hand market.

Since CO_2 emissions data are not readily available for vehicles registered before 1 March 2001 these cars are taxed on the basis of their engine capacity as a rough indicator of CO_2 emissions. There are now around 9 million cars in the lower band of the engine size scheme (set at under 1549 cc) benefiting from a rate of £105, a reduction of £55 per annum on the standard rate.

10-year Transport Plan

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce his investment decisions on projects envisaged under the 10 year transport plan; if he will publish a timetable for the implementation of each project; and what proportion of the funding under the 10 year transport plan will be spent on subsidised bus services. [R] [85161]

Mr. Jamieson: The plan provides an overarching funding framework and it included some illustrative outputs to show the scale and type of projects that could be delivered. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport made a further announcement about transport investment to the House on 10 December, 2002.

A303 (Construction Works)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the timetable is for construction of works on the A303 near Stonehenge; what the cost is; what works are proposed; what changes there have been to the original proposals; what assessment has been carried out of the impact of the works; what representations have been received; and what discussions have taken place. [86093]

Mr. Jamieson: The proposed timetable for the A303 Stonehenge Improvement is:

Publication of draft orders: spring 2003

Public inquiry : late autumn 2003

Decision: late 2004

Start of works (subject to the above) 2005

Completion 2008

The current estimated cost of the scheme is £183 million (excluding development and land costs.) The scheme is a 10.8 km long improvement of the A303 between Amesbury and Berwick Down, upgrading the single carriageway to a dual carriageway, providing a bypass for the village of Winterbourne Stoke and taking the road in a tunnel past Stonehenge. The scheme estimate is based on a 2.1 km bored tunnel.

The assessment of the impact of the works is ongoing. The details in the form of an environmental statement will be published in the spring. There will be a public exhibition and anyone will be able to comment, support or object to the proposals.

To date there have been a variety of views expressed, particularly on the type and length of tunnel that needs to be built. There have also been numerous discussions with partners and stakeholders over the planning and development of the scheme. All those views are being taken into consideration.

Abandoned Vehicles

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to require the last registered keeper of a motor vehicle to pay the costs of dealing with its abandonment. [87493]

Mr. Jamieson: Abandoning a motor vehicle is currently a criminal offence attracting a maximum penalty of a fine of £2,500, three months' imprisonment or both. When a vehicle is abandoned, the local authority that deals with it has the power to recover the cost of removing and disposing of the vehicle from the keeper.

Local authorities can seek information about the keeper of the vehicle from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA). The DVLA has recently made a successful bid under the Invest to Save Programme to fund an electronic link to local authorities to enable them to seek that information more quickly and efficiently. That link is currently being rolled out to local authorities, following a successful pilot in Sussex.

The 2002 Finance Act contained outline powers to establish a system of continuous registration, which will ensure that keepers of vehicles remain responsible for licensing that vehicle until such time that DVLA has been properly notified of its disposal. This will ensure that it is much more difficult for keepers of vehicles to evade their responsibilities to dispose of vehicles properly, or to evade meeting local authority costs when a vehicle is abandoned. We are currently considering how this legislation will be implemented and will make an announcement in due course.

Air Traffic (Scotland)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many aircraft departed from (a) Edinburgh, (b) Glasgow and (c) Prestwick airports in each month since January 2000, broken down by aircraft type. [87167]

Mr. Jamieson: An analysis by aircraft type is not readily available. Information for all aircraft is as follows:

Air Transport

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Tom Brake) on 9 December 2002, Official Report, columns 32–33W, on the future development of air transport, how many (a) questionnaires and (b) written letters were received in response to the consultation from Scotland by (i) 30 November and (ii) 10 December. [87168]

Mr. Jamieson: The breakdown of responses received in response to the consultation about Scotland and logged up until the 30 November and 10 December.

Aircraft Emissions

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much carbon dioxide is produced on average by an individual aircraft per mile travelled, broken down by aircraft type. [87185]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not readily available. Some information on CO_2 emissions for different aircraft types, based on British Airways fleet of 1997–98, is given on pages 285–6 of Aviation and the Global Atmosphere, published by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change in 1999.

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to which bodies his Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87399]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office today.

Aviation Fuel (Taxation)

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase revenues from taxation of aviation fuel; and what recent studies he has commissioned of the effect on air passenger numbers. [86898]

Mr. Jamieson: Decisions on taxation are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. As announced in his pre-Budget report, the Government will discuss with stakeholders the most effective economic instruments for ensuring that, where justified, the industry limits or reduces its contribution to climate change, local air quality and noise pollution. Any decision to tax fuel used for international aviation would be subject to international agreement under the Chicago Convention. And EU Directive 92/81/EEC, on the harmonisation of the structures of excise duty on mineral oils, prohibits levying duty on most aviation fuel.

An analysis published in Air Traffic Forecasts for the United Kingdom 2000 (May 2000, pages 19–20) indicates that an environmental fuel tax introduced in 2006 and increased by 10 percentage points every year for the next nine years until the tax were 100 per cent. of fuel costs in 2015 would reduce passenger demand by 10 per cent. by 2020.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by him or his predecessor and (b) by Ministers in his Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87346]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Alexander) today.

Railway Rolling Stock

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what types of, and how much, new rolling stock have been ordered in each year since 1994 by each train operating company. [86548]

Mr. Jamieson: The following table provides the required information.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many railway rolling stock leases involving Mark 1 passenger carriages are in existence; and in respect of each lease, what is (a) the name of the rolling stock company owning the vehicles and (b) the name of the train operating company leasing them; how many Mark 1 vehicles are covered by that lease; and what is the date to which the train operating company is committed to leasing the vehicles; [86549]

(2) how many railway rolling stock leases involving Mark 1 passenger carriages there are; and in respect of each lease, which rolling stock company owns the vehicles; which train operating company leases them; how many Mark 1 vehicles are covered by that lease; and what the date is to which the train operating company is committed to leasing the vehicles. [86552]

Mr. Jamieson: There are 1,741 Mark 1 vehicles leased through 19 leases as follows:

ROSCO: Angel Trains

Number of vehicles: 600

Number of leases: 5

Allocation to lessee: South West Trains (0), South Central Trains (324), Connex South Eastern (276)

ROSCO: Portebrook Leasing

Number of vehicles: 621

Number of leases: 10

Allocation to lessee: South West Trains (195), South Central Trains (224), Connex South Eastern (202)

ROSCO: HSBC

Allocation to lessee: South West Trains (380), South Central Trains (60), Connex South Eastern (80)

The dates to which train operating companies are committed to leasing the vehicles are commercially confidential. However, in general terms, leases are being extended up to 31 December 2004 where necessary.

Station Improvements (North Wales)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funds he has allocated for rail track and station improvements in the last three years; and how much of this funding has been spent in North Wales. [87155]

Mr. Jamieson: Most public funds for railways are channelled through franchise support payments and cannot be allocated to specific expenditure. The Strategic Rail Authority has recently awarded over £2.4 million of funding from its Rail Passenger Partnership scheme for the 'Inform Cymru' project, providing customer information systems at stations along the Cambrian Line.

Transport Police

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional funding has been made available since 11 September 2001 to the Chief Constable of British Transport Police to assist with the policing of the London Underground system. [87100]

Mr. Jamieson: The British Transport Police (BTP) Committee sets the budget for the force and the users of the BTP, such as London Underground, the train operating companies and Network Rail, provide the funding.

The BTP have advised me that LUL's contribution to the BTP's budget in 2002–03 increased by 4.5 per cent. on the £30.9 million paid in 2001–02. It was announced on 1 July 2002, Official Report, column 115W, that my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Transport and the Home Secretary were providing £1.36 million of central funds to the BTP to support their participation in the Street Crime Initiative in London.

Trust Ports

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department has taken following the classification by the Office for National Statistics of major trust ports as public bodies. [87558]

Mr. Jamieson: We have been working with the Office for National Statistics to identify the implications of this classification.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Bow Street Magistrates Court

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) how many hours the night session at Bow Street Magistrates' Court has operated; and how many cases have (a) been disposed of at first hearing and (b) been remanded over to a later date; [82096]

(2) what the cost of operating the night session at Bow Street Magistrates' Court has been since its inception. [82097]

Yvette Cooper: The consultation report has just been received by ministers The Department is still completing its consideration and analysis of the findings and I hope to be able to write to the hon. Member with the figures requested shortly.

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department to which bodies the Lord Chancellor's Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87394]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister for the Cabinet Office today.

Boundaries Review

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress with the review of policies and processes to be adopted during the fifth general review of parliamentary constituencies and the review of Assembly electoral regions by the Boundary Commission for Wales. [85619]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

In carrying out the fifth general review of parliamentary constituencies and Assembly electoral regions in Wales, the Boundary Commission for Wales will publish provisional recommendations for groups of constituencies, following the rules on the redistribution of seats set out in Schedule 2 of the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986. Provisional representations will be publicly available and interested parties will have one month from their publication in which to make representations.

Local inquiries will be held if representations objecting to the proposals are received from an interested local authority or from a body of 100 or more electors. Inquiries will be conducted by Assistant Commissioners who will report to the Commission.

Following receipt of reports, the Commission may decide to modify their revised recommendations before submitting their final proposals to my. right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, the procedure for publication and inviting representation is again repeated. The report containing the Commission's final recommendations relates to all constituencies for Wales. No separate reports are submitted on any group of constituencies.

Midnight Courts Pilot

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the midnight courts pilots in Manchester and London (a) commenced and (b) terminated; how many defendants were dealt with by each court; how many were sentenced on the evening of their appearance; and how many were remanded or bailed to a future date. [84300]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 2 December 2002]: The consultation report has just been received by ministers. The Department is still completing its consideration and analysis of the findings and I hope to be able to write to the hon. Member with the figures requested shortly.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by the Lord Chancellor and (b) by ministers in the Lord Chancellor's Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87351]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government has also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

Detailed information requested in respect of UK travel is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

HEALTH

Prions

Mr. Paul B[illegible]stow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what[illegible]sessment her Department has made of the risk of[illegible]ions being transferred to meat for consumption[illegible] through blood and (b) by cutting equipment in[illegible]oirs.[Transferred] [86071]

Ms Blears: [illegible]ood Standards Agency advises me that the risk o[illegible]ns being transferred to meat for consumption is cu[illegible]ntly estimated to be low. Specified risk material (SRM) controls cover those parts of animals considered most likely to harbour any transmissible spongiform encephalopathy (TSE) infectivity. The TSE regulations require that SRM neither enters the food chain nor comes into contact with any other animal material while in the slaughterhouse.

Ongoing research underway includes investigation of different parts of a bovine animal beyond the currently defined SRM, and their response to an experimental challenge of BSE infected feed. This has not indicated to date that muscle tissue would itself become infected.

The Agency is, in addition, undertaking research to evaluate the risk of prions being inadvertently transferred to meat at abattoirs, and possible ways through which risk can be reduced. This work in progress includes the examination of alternative cutting techniques for removal of spinal column. Results will be published once the work has been completed.

EU Directives (Food Supplements)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the effects of the proposed EU directives on nutritional supplements and herbal remedies on (a) employment, (b) profit, (c) the number of small firms and (d) sales in the health food industry; what licence fees will be required for licensing each product; and what costs will be charged for testing each batch; [83841]

(2) what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive on employment in the retail sector; what representations he has received on the issue from (a) the National Association of Health Stores, (b) Consumers for Health Choice, (c) Holland and Barrett Retail and (d) general nutrition centres; and if he will make a statement; [84213]

(3) whom he has recently met from the natural health specialist retail sector and its consumers to discuss the Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive; what views those individuals expressed to him; and what action he intends to take. [85086]

Ms Blears: Directive 2002/46/EC on Food Supplements was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 12 July 2002 and must be implemented into Member States' national legislation by 31 July 2003. The Food Standards Agency is currently consulting on draft implementing Regulations.

In the short-term the EU food Supplements Directive is unlikely to have any effect upon employment, profit, the number of small firms or sales in the health food industry.

In the longer-term, the impact of the directive will depend upon progress in adding vitamin and minerals and their sources to the lists of permitted nutrients in the Directive and upon developments in the setting of maximum limits for vitamins and minerals in food supplements. The Food Standards Agency is arguing the case for these maximum limits to be based on thorough scientific risk assessments so that there is no unnecessary restriction on the range of products that can be marketed.

We have received a substantial number of representations from the National Association of Health Stores, Consumers for Health Choice, Holland and Barrett and General Nutrition Centres about the proposed Directive on Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products. The main thrust of the representations is to express strong opposition to, or serious concerns about, the proposed Directive on Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products and to express the view that the proposals would threaten viability, profits and jobs in the health food sector, particularly among independent stores. They fear that the Directive will lead to a substantial reduction in consumer choice and have expressed the view that the proposals are over-regulatory in terms of the scope of the Directive and the likely costs of meeting the various requirements. They indicate their belief that there is no evidence that products in question are unsafe or dangerous.

Ministers have met representatives of the natural health specialist retail sector on a number of occasions. Most recently, my noble Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (the Lord Hunt of Kingsheath) met a representative from the National Association of Health Stores on 21 November and representatives of Consumers for Health Choice, Holland and Barrett and General Nutrition Centres on 28 November. He also attended a Consumers for Health Choice Parliamentary reception on 4 December.

The main regulatory burdens arising from the Directive, for example in relation to the cost of preparing dossiers and applying for registrations, would fall on manufacturers. At meetings with Ministers representatives from a wide range of United Kingdom trade associations representing manufacturers of herbal remedies and health foods have told us that that they believe the Directive will lead to greater consumer confidence and greater stability in the market and have requested that the Government should support the initiative while seeking to achieve maximum flexibility. The Herbal Forum which represents ten UK manufacturers' trade associations, covering the health food, herbal remedies, ethnic medicines and aromatherapy sectors wrote to my noble Friend on 18 November to support the case for appropriate regulation in order to ensure that the public is properly protected against inferior quality products which the current system can allow onto the market. The forum indicates that it appreciates the need for the Directive while identifying a number of areas of concern that it wishes to see addressed in European negotiations or in implementation at national level.

The proposals remain under negotiation, and there are wide differences of view within the herbal sector about the possible impact of the Directive. It is therefore problematic to make reliable estimates of the kind requested in relation to the health food sector. However, our overall assessment remains that it will be possible for a very wide range of herbal remedies to be brought to the market under the Directive as currently drafted. We also share the view put to us by many people in the sector that the proposed systematic approach to standards of quality, safety and information are likely to enhance public confidence and the future prosperity of the sector. Moreover, if in negotiations we achieve the ability to extend the principle of simplified registration to an additional range of products which currently require a full marketing authorisation, in particular traditional herbal remedies with added nutrients, this is likely to lead to increased opportunities for both manufacturers and retailers and a significant expansion in consumer choice as compared with the current position in the UK.

We intend to continue to engage positively in the ongoing European negotiations on the Directive, seeking to ensure the maximum flexibility, consistent with the protection of public health. In negotiations on the Directive, and in any subsequent implementation, we will also seek to contain the regulatory impact, and we welcome the stated intention of the Herbal Forum to work constructively and closely with the Medicines Control Agency to achieve this objective.

At this stage of negotiations on the Directive it is not yet possible to make estimates of costs of registering products. The cost of testing finished products before release onto the market is a matter for the relevant licence holders and, if they choose to purchase the service from a third party, this is for negotiation between the user and supplier of such services.

Anatomy Act

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the application of the Anatomy Act 1984; and if he will make a statement. [86591]

Mr. Lammy: A comprehensive review of the law relating to human organs has been undertaken. Consultation has taken place through the report, "Human Bodies, Human Choices", published in July 2002.

We expect to legislate when parliamentary time allows.

Autism (Good Practice Guidelines)

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to monitor progress in implementing his Department's good practice guidelines in respect to autism. [84503]

Jacqui Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Ivan Lewis) at the Department for Education and Skills, on 9 December 2002, Official Report, column 96W.

Care Homes

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics he collates on the (a) abuse and (b) neglect of residents in (i) private care homes, (ii) local authority care homes and (iii) NHS hospitals. [86507]

Jacqui Smith: Statistical data on the incidences of abuse or neglect of residents in care homes or inpatients in national health service hospitals is not collected centrally.

Local councils are required to keep clear and accurate records of complaints or allegations of abuse. They should be kept in such a way that they create statistical information as a by-product.

Child Protection

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for the introduction of legislation to change the child protection system following the inquiry into the death of Victoria Climbie. [83217]

Jacqui Smith: We expect to receive Lord Laming's report into the circumstances that led to the death of Victoria Climbie later this year or early next year. The Government will consider the report's recommendations fully, before deciding what, if any, action, which might include legislation, needs to be taken as a result.

Drug Rehabilitation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many drug rehabilitation centres treat addicts of (a) cocaine and (b) heroin. [86397]

Ms Blears: There are 715 drug treatment services in England that treat addicts of cocaine and heroin.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of drug rehabilitation was in each of the last five years; and how much was spent per person treated in (a) England, (b) the North East of England and (c) the constituency of Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland. [86398]

Ms Blears: This information is not available centrally. There are 138 drug treatment residential rehabilitation services in England, providing over 3000 bedspaces within the drug and alcohol residential rehabilitation sector. The cost per week, per patient, varies from around 300 to around 1000 for a placement within a medical/clinical facility.

There is no information at present on community rehabilitation programmes, although work on unit costs is being developed by the National Treatment Agency.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of those receiving drug treatment are private patients. [86696]

Ms Blears: This information is not available centrally.

In England, during the year 2000–2001 the overall number of drug users reported as being in treatment was around 118,500.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are undergoing drug treatment, broken down by drug action team area. [86691]

Ms Blears: Information on the numbers of drug misusers in contact with drug treatment agencies in England, broken down by drug action team area of treatment, is given in table 11 of the Statistical Bulletin, Statistics from the Regional Drug Misuse Databases on drug misusers in treatment in England, 2000–01—http://www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0133.htm. This document is available in the Library.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what menu of treatments he requires to be available in each drug action team area. [86693]

Ms Blears: The overall menu of treatment services that residents of a drug action team (DAT) area should have access to, located either within the DAT area or located outside, is as follows:

Open access services:
- Advice and information services
- Harm reduction services

Structured community based services:
- Community prescribing—specialist service
- Community prescribing—general practitioners
- Structured counselling
- Structured day programmes
- Aftercare

Residential services:
- In-patient detoxification
- Residential rehabilitation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many former drug addicts there are, broken down by (a) treatment method and (b) type of drug use. [86694]

Ms Blears: This information is not available centrally.

Recent research evidence demonstrates that around half (47 per cent.) of drug users who have gone through residential programmes, and more than a third (35 per cent.) of those from methadone programmes are still abstinent from opiates at four to five years. More than a third (38 per cent.) of all the residential clients were also abstinent from all six illicit target drugs (illicit heroin, non-prescribed methadone, non-prescribed benzodiazepines, crack cocaine, powder cocaine, amphetamines) at four to five years.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of ex-drug addicts who have undergone treatment are drug free. [86699]

Ms Blears: Recent research evidence demonstrates that around half (47 per cent.) of drug users who have gone through residential programmes, and more than a third (35 per cent.) of those from methadone programmes are still abstinent from opiates at four to five years. More than a third (38 per cent.) of all the residential clients were also abstinent from all six illicit target drugs (illicit heroin, non-prescribed methadone, non-prescribed benzodiazepines, crack cocaine, powder cocaine, amphetamines) at four to five years.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many former drug addicts have remained drug free for (a) over one year and (b) over five years following treatment. [86700]

Ms Blears: Recent research evidence noted that:

The percentage of residential clients who were abstinent from illicit opiates (heroin and illicit methadone) was around 50 per cent. at one year. Abstinence rates from stimulants (all forms of cocaine and amphetamines) was around 68 per cent. at one year. Abstinence from crack cocaine was around 82 per cent. The percentage of clients treated in community methadone treatments who were abstinent from illicit opiates at one year was around 22 per cent. Abstinence rates from stimulants (all forms of cocaine and amphetamines) was around 64 per cent. at one year. Abstinence from crack cocaine was around 79 per cent.

These reductions in illicit drug use were generally maintained throughout the four to five year follow-up period. Almost half (47 per cent.) of the residential, and more than a third (35 per cent.) of those from the methadone programmes were still abstinent from opiates at four to five years. More than a third (38 per cent.) of all the residential clients were abstinent from all six illicit target drugs (illicit heroin, non-prescribed methadone, non-prescribed benzodiazepines, crack cocaine, powder cocaine, amphetamines) at four to five years.

Harefield Hospital

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve cardiac surgery facilities at Harefield Hospital and when they will be operational. [86433]

Mr. Hutton: The Royal Brompton and Harefield National Health Service Trust has planned the replacement of a catheter laboratory and two cardiac operating theatres at Harefield Hospital. The former will be in operation by July 2003 and the latter by May 2003.

Heroin

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from heroin overdoses there were in (a) 2001 and (b) 2002. [82268]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Mann dated 16 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question asking how many deaths from heroin overdoses there were in a) 2001 and b) 2002. (82268)

The latest available figures for deaths related to drag poisoning[1] in England and Wales are for 2000. The number of deaths in that year where heroin or morphine[2] was mentioned on the death certificate was 926.[3];

[1]selected using the following codes from the International Classification of Diseases Ninth Revision:

292 (drug psychoses)

304 (drug dependence)

305.2–305.9 (nondependent abuse of drugs)

E850-E858 (accidental poisoning by drugs, medicaments and biologicals)

E950.0-E950.5 (suicide and self-inflicted poisoning by solid or liquid substances)

E980.0-E980.5 (poisoning by solid or liquid substances, undetermined whether accidentally or purposely inflicted) where heroin or morphine was also mentioned on the death certificate.

E962.0 (assault by poisoning—drugs and medicaments)

[2] As heroin breaks down in the body into morphine, the latter is often detected at post mortem. For this reason, all deaths mentioning heroin or morphine have been included.

HIV

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he plans to take to counter the increase in cases of HIV; and what extra resources will be made available to improve awareness of HIV and the need for better sexual health practices, with particular reference to younger people. [85672]

Ms Blears: The aims of the sexual health and HIV strategy published last year include reducing the transmission of HIV and sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and reducing the prevalence of undiagnosed HIV and STIs. The strategy sets a goal to reduce newly acquired HIV and gonorrhoea infections by 25 per cent., by the end of 2007.

The Department has allocated an extra £47.5 million towards implementation of the strategy. This includes £4 million for the new sex lottery awareness campaign about preventing STIs, including HIV, which targets young adults aged 18 to 30 years. This complements the teenage pregnancy awareness campaign, which also highlights the importance of condoms in preventing STIs.

Homeless People

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the report by Dr. Sian Griffiths, commissioned by the Rough Sleepers Unit, on primary health care provision for homeless people has been published. [81749]

Mr. Hutton: The paper 'Addressing the health needs of rough sleepers' was published by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on Wednesday 11 December 2002.

Hospices

Mr. Lindsay Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding via the NHS has been given to support (a) St Catherine's Hospice and (b) Derian House Hospice. [84062]

Mr. Lindsay Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to provide additional funding via the NHS to (a) Derian House Hospice and (b) St. Catherine's Hospice. [84063]

Ms Blears: During 2002–03, the Chorley & South Ribble Primary Care Trust (PCT) provided recurrent funding of £427,000 to St. Catherine's Hospice and 11,000 to Derian House Hospice.

In addition, some non recurrent funding has recently been made available across Central Lancashire for which £40,000 will be allocated to hospices in Chorley, South Ribble and Preston. In the development of the local delivery plan, the PCT is considering increasing its investment in hospice services in 2003–04. However this will be dependent on other priorities.

Imported Poultry

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the FSA has taken to identify imports of turkeys from Brazil that have been treated with antibiotic furazolidine; and whether all poultry imported in 2002 from Brazil has been treated with furazolidine. [86935]

Ms Blears [holding answer 12 December 2002]: Since October 2002, all imports of Brazilian turkey and other poultry meat have been tested for nitrofuran antibiotic residues. Furazolidone has not been detected in any sample.

Inter-country Adoptions

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the current backlog is of cases of inter-country adoptions being dealt with by his Department. [85528]

Jacqui Smith: The Department of Health is currently taking approximately five months to process inter-country adoption applications received from local authorities and voluntary adoption agencies. This involves comprehensive checking of all the papers received to ensure that they are in the format required by the country of origin and that the various legalisation and authentication procedures have been correctly carried out. The Department process every case as quickly and efficiently as they are able so that all children can have a safe and smooth transition to their new life in the United Kingdom. This processing time has increased following a significant increase in the complexity of cases and UK adopters applying to new countries.

In addition to processing applications, the Department also has responsibility for:

providing information and assistance to prospective adopters and professionals in the social care field;

on inter-country adoption procedures and how the relevant pieces of UK legislation on adoption should be applied in practice;

the production of fact sheets giving information on how to adopt from overseas countries, which prove to be an invaluable tool for both adoptive parents themselves and also the social workers carrying out home study assessment; handling a continuous stream of telephone inquiries and letters from adopters wanting to inquire about how their adoption application is progressing; general inquiries about both domestic and inter-country adoption; and providing urgent advice to entry clearance officers overseas and the Home Office about whether all the required documents are in place to be able to issue entry clearance to the UK, and on whether a court in the UK would be likely to make an adoption order after the family have returned.

A number of initiatives are being put in place to improve processing times including: Saturday working to target outstanding cases; the recent recruitment of an additional caseworker; and a change in processing for Northern Ireland cases allowing them to be managed direct by the Department of Health and Social Services Public Safety, therefore cutting their overall processing time.

Mental Health

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting times were for (a) children and (b) adults suffering from mental health problems to receive treatment in each year since 1997. [82701]

Jacqui Smith: The estimated mean waiting times for first outpatient appointments following general practitioner referrals to child and adolescent psychiatry and other mental health specialties, between 1996–97 and 2001–02, are shown in the table. At end March 1997 there were 600 and 1,370 patients waiting over 26 weeks for a first outpatient appointment for child and adolescent psychiatry and other mental health specialties respectively. The equivalent figures for March 2002 were 13 and 52.

Mean waiting time[1] (in weeks) for first outpatient appointment.

	Child andadolescent psychiatry	Other MH specialities[2]
1996 to 1997	10.4	6.3
1997 to 1998	10.1	6.1
1998 to 1999	10.6	6.0
1999 to 2000	10.0	6.1
2001 to 2002	10.3	6.1
2001/2	10.8	6.6

[1] The means should be interpreted with caution because they are estimated from the total number of patients seen within 4, 9,13, and 26 week timebands
[2] Other MH specialties includes the following: mental illness, forensic psychiatry, psychotherapy, and old age psychiatry.

Department of Health form QM08

Mid-Essex Hospital Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the mid-Essex hospital trust area were waiting for in-patient treatment on the latest date for which figures are available; and how many were waiting on 31 March 1997. [87140]

Mr. Lammy: The total number of patients waiting at mid-Essex hospital services national health service trust at the end of October 2002 was 9,675. The total number of patients waiting at the end of March 1997 was 8,391.

MMR

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the take-up of (a) MMR and (b) separate vaccinations for measles, mumps and rubella was in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [86032]

Ms Blears: The uptake rates of MMR in the last 12 months in the United Kingdom is shown in the table.

Quarter	Percentage uptake
July to September 2001	84.2
October to December 2001	84.0
January to March 2002	83.8
April to June 2002	84.3

Note:
Uptake rates for single measles, mumps and rubella vaccinations are not routinely collected.

MRI Scans

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued in respect of waiting times for MRI scans; and what the average waiting time is in (a) England and (b) North Staffordshire. [85673]

Ms Blears: We do not collect waiting times for a magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scan, nor has any central guidance been issued. The length of time that a patient may have to wait for any scan is dependent on their clinical condition. Emergency cases need to be seen immediately. Other cases will be carried out as quickly as possible, dependent on the clinical priority of all the remaining patients waiting to be scanned.

Where an MRI scan forms part of the diagnostic process for a patient urgently referred with suspected cancer, this will be covered by the target of a maximum two months wait from urgent referral to first treatment, which will be rolled out for all cancers by the end of 2005.

To increase the capacity of diagnostic services, funding has been made available for the provision of new and replacement scanners, including a replacement scanner at North Staffordshire. By 2004, approximately 100 MRI scanners will have been provided through central purchasing programmes.

Nurses (North Essex)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are for nurses in the North Essex Mental Health Partnership; and how many approved nursing posts there are. [86510]

Mr. Lammy: The number of nurse vacancies at North Essex Mental Health Partnership national health service trust is shown in the table. Information on the number of approved nursing posts is not collected centrally.

Vacancies in NHS trusts by DHSC and North Essex Mental Health Partnership NHS trust, qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff (excluding health authority staff)

	3 month vacancy rate (percentage)	3 month vacancy (number)	Staff in post (whole-time equivalent)	Staff in post (headcount)
England (excluding HA staff)	3.1%	8,390	265,720	329,980
Midlands and Eastern	2.5%	1,860	72,170	90,190
North Essex Mental Health Partnership NHS trust	2.2%	20	700	790
London	6.1%	2,750	45,250	55,150
Northern	2.0%	1,730	85,420	103,080
Southern	3.3%	2,050	61,910	80,460
Special health authorities	0.9%	10	970	1,090

Key Notes:
1. Three-month vacancy information is as at 31st March 2002.
2. Three-month vacancies are vacancies which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more, (whole-time equivalent).
3. Three-month vacancy rates are three-month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three-month vacancies plus staff in post.
4. Three-month vacancy rates are calculated using staff in post from the Vacancy Survey, March 2002.
5. Staff in post data is from the Non-Medical Workforce Census, September 2001.
6. Staff in post data excludes staff employed by health authorities, as vacancy information was only collected from trusts, PCTs and Special Health Authorities.
7. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest ten.
8. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.
Other Notes:
9. Due to rounding, totals may not equal the sum of component parts.
10. Due to rounding, calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.
11. Figures may not match previously published data due to a different method of rounding used on the staff in post data.

Prison Health Services

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 3 December 2002, Official Report, col. 748W, on prison health services, if the increased funding is ring-fenced for NHS services within prisons. [86964]

Jacqui Smith: Detailed decisions on the allocation of the increased funding announced for prison health services have not yet been finalised.

Restaurant Menus

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information restaurants and take-away food outlets are required to publish in relation to the presence of genetically modified foods and food products in the meals they supply; how they are able to find out about such a presence in (a) their ingredients and (b) the food which the animals which produced it were fed on; what the penalties are for non-compliance with these requirements; which enforcement authorities are responsible for ensuring compliance; how many prosecutions have been brought for failing to comply with the regulations; what the outcome was in each of those cases; and what estimate he makes of the total cost to date to (i) industry in implementing and (ii) public funds in enforcing this legislation. [85833]

Ms Blears: Current labelling regulations require food sold to the final consumer or to mass caterers to be labelled as genetically modified if an ingredient contains novel genetic material (DNA or protein). There are no requirements to label products from animals fed GM feed. In the United Kingdom, these requirements also extend to food sold in catering establishments where information on the extent to which GM ingredients are used is provided to customers on demand.

Enforcement of the Genetically Modified and Novel Food (Labelling) (England) Regulations 2000 is a matter for the local authorities, with the penalty on conviction under these regulations being a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale. Parallel arrangements apply in other of parts of the UK. Compliance checks are usually carried out as part of routine premises inspections and no specific costs are recorded for the enforcement of these regulations. There have been no prosecutions to date. No details of the actual costs incurred by the hospitality industry have been received in recent consultations, but the total cost to the catering industry was estimated at £1 to £2 million in the regulatory impact assessment for the Genetically Modified and Novel Food (Labelling) (England) Regulations 2000.

Smallpox Vaccine

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the side effects from smallpox vaccinations are. [85635]

Mr. Hutton: Full details of the side effects of vaccination and contraindications to vaccination are given in the Department's draft smallpox plan available at http://www.doh.gov.uk/epcu/cbr/boil/smallpoxplan.htm

Severe side effects that could occur in anyone included generalized vaccinia and progress vaccinia and post-vaccination encephalitis. However these side effects were more likely to occur in those with any degree of immuno-suppression or in pregnant women and their offspring. Eczema vaccinatum was a very serious side effect in those with active skin lesions at the time of the vaccination. Post vaccination encephalitis could also occur in anyone.

The overall risk of severe complications following vaccination is low but they could be fatal. Complications occurred more frequently in persons receiving their first dose of vaccine, and among very young children.

Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent estimate he has made of the total registration cost for a product under the Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive; [85795]

(2) if he will make a statement on the cost to manufacturers of the testing of each batch of products under the Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive; [85797]

(3) what estimate he has made of the cost of completion of an individual dossier to support an application under the Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive. [85796]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) today and on 5 December 2002, Official Report, column 967W.

Vaccination

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his plans to extend the vaccination of children in the UK. [86035]

Ms Blears: The existing childhood immunisation programme has been extremely effective in eradicating diseases that previously killed and disabled large numbers of children. For example, polio vaccination has eliminated polio for more than 15 years from this country. MMR has virtually wiped out congenital rubella syndrome and has prevented any child deaths from acute measles for 10 years.

The impact of the childhood programme is reviewed regularly. Changes to programme are only considered following a careful assessment of all of the evidence by the expert advisory body the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation. No decisions have yet been made concerning extending the programme.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list take-up rates of vaccinations generally available through the NHS for each of the past five years. [86033]

Ms Blears: The information available about uptake of immunisations, primarily childhood immunisations and the numbers of vaccinations given in England is contained in the Statistical Bulletin "NHS Immunisation Statistics, England: 2001–02". A copy of the bulletin is in the Library and can also be found on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0218.htm.

Data were not collected on a routine basis for influenza immunisation before 2000–01. In that year, uptake among the age target group of people over 65 years of age was 65 per cent., across England and improved to 68 per cent., across England in the following year, 2001–02. Data are not yet available for the end of the programme for 2002–03.

Woodhill Prison

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding Milton Keynes PCT received in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 1999–2000 in respect of the prison population at Woodhill. [86965]

Jacqui Smith: Milton Keynes Primary Care Trust (PCT) received specific funding of 50,000 in 2001–02 and 108,000 in 2002–03 to support the development of improved mental health services for the prison population at Her Majesty's Prison Woodhill.

In each year the PCT, and previously the health authority, received funding for the secondary care of that part of its population classified by the Office for National Statistics as normally resident in HMP Woodhill. This funding comprised part of the general resource allocation for the PCT and was not separately identified.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding Milton Keynes PCT will receive in repect of Woodhill Prison as a result of the increased national funding. [86966]

Jacqui Smith: Primary care trusts (PCTs) will not immediately assume financial responsibility for prison health services as a result of the transfer of Departmental budgetary responsibility for these services to the Department from April 2003. Future allocations to PCTs in respect of local prison populations have not yet been calculated, but in most cases the resources allocated will be significantly greater than current prison service expenditure on health care in the relevant prisons.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether remand prisoners in Woodhill Prison are included in the funding calculation for Milton Keynes PCT. [86967]

Jacqui Smith: Remand prisoners will be taken into account in future funding calculations for Primary Care Trusts.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding Milton Keynes PCT received in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 1990–2000 for upgrading health facilities within Woodhill Prison. [86968]

Jacqui Smith: The prison service is responsible for the maintenance of health care facilities at Her Majesty's Prison Woodhill. Accordingly, no funding was allocated to Milton Keynes Primary Care Trust, or to its predecessor, Buckinghamshire Health Authority, for upgrading health facilities within HMP Woodhill during the three years in question.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Deaths in Custody

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the report on deaths in custody which was consulted upon last year; and if he will make a statement. [86115]

The Solicitor-General: In May 2002 the Attorney General issued a consultation paper on the prosecution process in cases arising from a death in custody. During May and June he received many thoughtful responses, including the views expressed by those who attended a seminar which he held in May. The Attorney General had originally hoped to make a statement before the House rose in July, but was compelled to conclude that to do justice to this difficult exercise in the light of further developments following another case, the issues would need further work. He continues to be engaged on the project and expects to be able to publish a statement in the New Year.

Emergency Services (Hoax Calls)

Mr. Heath: To ask the Solicitor-General how many individuals suspected of hoax calls to the emergency services have been referred for prosecution to the Crown Prosecution Service since 22 November. [85176]

The Solicitor-General: Two individuals have been charged in relation to hoax calls made during the first fire fighters strike which began on 13 November 2002.

Since 22 November 2002, three individuals suspected of making hoax calls to the emergency services have been referred to the CPS by the police.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Rugby World Cup

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what representations she has received from the governing bodies of (a) Welsh and (b) Scottish Rugby Union in respect of the English Rugby Football Union's bid to host the Rugby World Cup in 2007; [86930]

(2) if she will make a statement on the English Rugby Football Union's bid to host the Rugby World Cup in 2007; [86926]

(3) what assessment her Department has made of the likely (a) economic benefit to the United Kingdom and (b) benefit to amateur rugby of hosting the Rugby World Cup in 2007. [86928]

Mr. Caborn: This Department fully supports the English Rugby Union's very strong bid for the 2007 Rugby World Cup. The RFU has already demonstrated its ability to host major events by providing first class facilities, organization and hospitality as co-host of the 1991 and 1999 Rugby World Cups.

To date this Department has not received any representations from the Welsh and Scottish Rugby Unions in respect of the bid.

It is anticipated that the UK would benefit from the additional tourism that this event would bring. The Rugby Football Union has commissioned an independent assessment of the potential economic impact of the 2007 Rugby World Cup from Bone Wells Associates. The assessment estimates that the tournament would bring approximately 175,400 visitors to the UK, spending approximately £100 per day over an average of 14 days. Hosting a major sporting event of this size would also provide UK companies with a number of opportunities for commercial sponsorship and investment. The Rugby Union is working on its own assessment of the economic impact of the 2007 World Cup and should make the results available after the final bids have been submitted on 15 January 2003.

The Rugby Football Union's bid document predicts that the 2007 Rugby World Cup will generate substantially enhanced income streams for investment in the development of grass roots rugby.

Sports Events (Hosting)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department takes to ensure that all United Kingdom sport can benefit from the hosting of international sports events by an individual home nation. [86929]

Mr. Caborn: The sporting benefits of hosting major international sports events are not easily quantified. The economic benefit to the United Kingdom as a whole of individual Home Nations hosting such events is clear—not least, because spectators from overseas often combine their visits to events held in the Home Nations with visits to other areas and Nations of the UK.

It is also clear that the hosting of major events by individual Home Nations generates benefits in terms of sporting prestige to the whole of the UK. However, it is not clear how the Government could ensure that such benefits accrue directly to sport in other parts of the country.

Sports Governing Bodies (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost has been to her Department of providing financial assistance to sports governing bodies preparing bids to host international championships since 1997. [86927]

Mr. Caborn: The provision of financial assistance to governing bodies for the preparation of bids for major international events is the responsibility of UK Sport or, in the case of the Football Association's bid for the 2006 World Cup, of Sport England.

No payments have been made by the Department to governing bodies to assist in the preparation of such bids since 1997. Direct bid-related expenditure by the Department in that period has consisted only of 20,000 to cover the travelling costs of the Prime Minister's Special Envoy in his work in support of the 2006 World Cup bid.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Visitor Centre

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the honourable Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission if the Commission will examine the case for locating a new parliamentary visitor centre outside the precincts of the Palace of Westminster. [87378]

Mr. Kirkwood: Yes. The House of Commons Commission has considered the feasibility study produced by the consultants Haley Sharpe, and has asked them to carry out further studies of possible sites off the Parliamentary Estate. In the New Year the Commission will consider these studies, together with the views of the Modernisation and Finance and Services Committees, the Domestic Committees, The Speaker's Advisory Committee on Works of Art, the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association United Kingdom Branch, the Inter-Parliamentary Union British Group and individual hon. Members. A final decision would need to be agreed with the authorities of the House of Lords.

PRIME MINISTER

Lend-Lease (Second World War)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister how much debt arising out of the Second World War US/UK lend/lease programme remains outstanding; what recent discussions he has had with President Bush on this issue; whether he has sought its cancellation; and if he will make a statement. [87760]

The Prime Minister: The Government intends to meet its obligations under the 1945 Agreement by repaying the United States Government in full the amounts lent in 1945. Therefore no representation to the United States Government has been made.

For details of the loans, I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Economic Secretary gave to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Dr Spink) on 28 February, Official Report, columns 1437–9W.

SCOTLAND

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list for her Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87700]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999 and thus the department had no targets arising from the Comprehensive Spending Review 1998.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Civil Servants

Chris Ruane: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many civil servants are employed by her Department; and how much money was spent by her Department in the last 12 months, broken down by local authority area. [87177]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on the location of civil servants is not available in the format requested, except at disproportionate cost. Information on the number of civil servants is provided in Table D of Civil Service statistics 2001, published in June 2002. Information on the breakdown of Departmental expenditure by local authority area is not available.

Public Appointments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many public appointments he has made, other than judicial appointments, since 1 June 2001. [85050]

Ms Rosie Winterton: 407 non-judicial Ministerial public appointments were made to the Lord Chancellor's non-departmental public bodies from 1 June 2001 to 31 October 2002. This figure includes re-appointments.

CABINET OFFICE

Public Appointments

42. Mr. Brady: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the programme of work of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. [85943]

Mr. Alexander: The Commissioner for Public Appointments, Dame Rennie Fritchie, regulates, monitors, advises and reports on ministerial appointments to public bodies within her remit. Her work and advice are highly regarded and respected by the Government.

Government Websites

43. Barbara Follett: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans his Department has to harmonise Government website addresses. [85945]

Mr. Alexander: As outlined in my answer to my hon. Friend in June all central Government Departments use the .gov.uk domain name.

A Domain Naming Approvals Committee oversees the approval of every domain name request. Requesting Departments and the Committee are steered on eligibility by guidelines and standard conventions.

The Office of Government Commerce (managers of the .gov.uk domain name) and the Office of the e-Envoy have agreed to establish a working party and early in the new year will conduct a formal review of the naming guidelines and how they are applied.

E-Government

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to support progress in e-government delivery of the Government's targets for public services. [85939]

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to support progress in using e-government to deliver Government targets for public services. [85942]

Mr. Alexander: In support of our commitment to radical public service reform, we are investing £6 billion over the next three years in e-enablement.

This includes, for example a new commitment to extend broadband connectivity within our education system and major IT enablement in the national health service.

Regulatory Impact Unit

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many employees work in the Regulatory Impact Unit. [87606]

Mr. Alexander: As at 2 December 2002 the Regulatory Impact Unit employed a total of 59 staff. This figure is rounded to full time equivalents.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87690]

Mr. Alexander: The Department published progress against all its outstanding PSA targets in its departmental report 2002 (CM5429) published in June 2002. The Department's autumn performance report 2002 (CM5732) is due to be published and presented to the House shortly.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Warm Front Programme

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proposals she has for publicising the Warm Front Programme to those in receipt of a designated benefit. [86970]

Mr. Morley: Warm Front is the Government's main programme to provide assistance to households in the private sector in England through the provision of a range of measures including heating and insulation to those in receipt of certain benefits.

Warm Front is administered by two Scheme Managers—TXU Warm Front Ltd. and the Eaga Partnership. The Scheme Managers have responsibility for marketing and publicising the scheme and in doing so work in partnership with many organisations. These include local authorities, targeting recipients of council tax and housing benefit, local health and social services providers and other groups in the charity and voluntary sectors.

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are being taken to improve the performance of the Government's warm front scheme. [86679]

Mr. Morley: Warm front is the Government's main programme to provide assistance to households in the private sector in England through the provision of a range of measures including heating and insulation to those in receipt of certain benefits. Since its launch in June 2000, warm front has provided assistance to over 400,000 households.

We are currently carrying out a review looking at the effectiveness and impact of warm front including consideration of the operation of the scheme including the eligibility criteria and range of measures offered.

Agricultural Waste

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to publish draft regulations on agricultural waste. [87224]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 December 2002]: We are preparing the draft regulations necessary to apply the provisions of the Waste Framework Directive to agricultural waste. A Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) is also being prepared. On completion, the draft regulations and RIA will be issued for consultation with the farming industry and other interested groups. A firm date for publication of the consultation paper has not yet been set but our aim is to publish it early in the new year. I will ensure that a copy of the consultation paper is sent to the hon. Member when it is issued.

Animal Welfare Bill

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale), on 26 November 2002, Official Report, c.230–31W, on the Animal Welfare Bill, if she will list those organisations that she or her officials have met to discuss the issue of pheasants in the proposed Animal Welfare Bill; and if she will make a statement on the balance of views of those organisations. [86123]

Mr. Morley: The organisations that have expressed views on the rearing of pheasants and were invited to the stakeholder meetings on the Animal Welfare Bill include:

Animal Defenders
British Association for Shooting and Conservation
Compassion In World Farming
Farm Animal Welfare Council
Game Conservancy Trust Game Farmers Association
League Against Cruel Sports
National Gamekeepers Organisation
RSPCA
Union of Country Sports Workers

A number of other organisations have given their views on pheasant rearing and husbandry in response to the consultation on the bill.

I am satisfied that I have received a balanced range of views.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people received more than £1 million in payments from the Common Agricultural Policy in the last year for which information is available. [86434]

Mr. Morley: In the 12 months ending June 2002, four claimants received more than £1 million each in direct grants and subsidies under the Common Agricultural Policy in England. The payment of direct grants and subsidies in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland was the responsibility of the devolved authorities in that period. In addition, 130 claimants throughout the UK each received payments in excess of £1 million as part of the market support measures of the CAP, such as export refunds, for which traders as well as farmers are eligible. The figures exclude any compensation received for animals slaughtered during the FMD crisis for reasons of disease control or animal health. We are unable to identify the total payments received by any individual or business making applications using more than one name.

Diversification

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 20 November, Official Report, column 157W, on diversification, when the research study will be published. [85365]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 December 2002]: The research study is nearing completion and it is expected that the report will be published early in 2003.

Farmers' Markets

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to promote farmers' markets. [87410]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The Government does recognise that farmers' markets can bring benefits for both producers and consumers. In support of this, there is provision under the England Rural Development Programme and the Agricultural Development Scheme for grants for activities such as the establishment of farmers' markets.

More specifically, to encourage the development of farmers' markets we have:

written to all Local Authorities drawing their attention to the benefits which farmers' markets can bring; provided funding towards the National Association of Farmers' Markets' training and marketing programme and their accreditation scheme;

sponsored the Local Government Association Guide on Farmers' Markets;

and provided funding to help with the re-launch of farmers' markets following the foot and mouth crisis.

Food Prices

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average (a) farmgate and (b) retail price was of (i) one kilogram of (A) beef, (B) lamb, (C) pork, (D) chicken, (E) turkey, (F) bacon, (G) dessert apples, (H) potatoes, (I) tomatoes, (J) cauliflower and (K) peas, (ii) one pint of (A) milk, (B) cream and (C) yoghurt, (iii) one dozen eggs and (iv) one litre of (A) English wine and (B) brandy in (1) 1980, (2) 1985, (3) 1990, (4) 1995 and (5) 2000, distinguishing between (I) organic and (II) conventionally produced foodstuffs. [86309]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 December 2002]: The farmgate and retail prices of conventionally grown foodstuffs, where available, are shown in table 1. Prices are not collected for English wine or brandy. Small quantities of cream and yoghurt are sold at the farmgate direct to consumers at retail prices. The amount of processing taking place between farmgate and retail varies from commodity to commodity; an indication is given in the table. Farmgate prices include produce destined for highly processed food, which is normally lower quality and sells at a lower price. Changes to the level of processing over time will impact on the trends shown within the table.

Prices of organically produced food are only available for 1998 onwards. Indications of farmgate prices in 2000 are shown in table 2, where available, as provided by the Soil Association. There are no retail prices available.

Fish Quotas

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the EU's plans for white fish quotas and their effects on the UK. [87013]

Mr. Morley: The cuts in total allowable catches proposed for 2003 by Commissioner Fischler would correspond, in fisheries which are of critical interest to the UK industry, to a reduction of 80 per cent. in fishing effort on cod and haddock and of 75 per cent. on whiting. I do agree that we cannot ignore the scientific advice that radical action is needed to prevent the collapse of the cod stocks, but the action proposed would have a devastating effect on our fishing industry. I am determined to negotiate an alternative approach which will give sustainable fishing opportunities to our industry, while still respecting the scientific advice and leading to stock recovery.

Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further consideration she has given to the recommendation of the report of the Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries Review Group; whether legislation is planned to bring these reconciliations into law; and if she will make a statement. [87141]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 129W.

I can confirm that the Government intend to introduce proposals for new salmon and fresh water fisheries legislation to implement the agreed changes when parliamentary time permits.

EU Fisheries Council

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on (a) the outcome of the EU Fisheries Council Meeting on fish quotas for 2003 and (b) the effect it will have on Northern Ireland's fishing fleet. [87099]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Total allowable catches and quotas for 2003 are due to be determined at the meeting of the Council of Ministers which started on the 16 December. The Council is likely to last for several days, and I will of course be happy to comment on the outcome when it is known.

Fixed Assets

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total value is of the fixed assets held by her Department, its agencies, non-departmental public bodies and public corporations. [85010]

Margaret Beckett: The total value of the fixed assets held by DEFRA, its agencies, NDPBs and public corporations is £2,625,564,000 (as detailed in the table):

Fluoridation

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans there are to fluoridate water supplies in the UK; and what health risks have been identified with fluoridation. [86305]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

We consider that decisions to fluoridate a water supply should be taken locally. We are seeking to ensure that, where a local community wishes to consider this option, they have easily accessible and reliable information on the effects of fluoridation. The only risk that has been identified is that of dental fluorosis or flecking or mottling of the teeth which, where it is judged to be cosmetically unacceptable, can be treated by dental polishing or, in extreme cases, by veneers.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultation has taken place with relevant groups regarding the fluoridation of water supplies in the UK; and if she will make a statement on her assessment of the impact of fluoridation on oral health. [86307]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

We funded research projects undertaken by the University of York in 1999–2000 and the Medical Research Council in 2001–02, aimed at strengthening the evidence base on fluoridation. Steering groups including consumers, people sceptical about the benefits of fluoridation, doctors, toxicologists and dentists contributed to these projects. The reports concluded that fluoridation achieves a 14.6 per cent. reduction in dental decay and that further research is needed to improve our understanding of this beneficial effect.

Illegal Food Imports

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what quantities of illegal imports of food were found in each of the last three years, broken down by port of entry. [86931]

Mr. Morley: A central database of illegal animal product seizures notified to Defra was set up in April 2001. The database holds details of seizures of illegal imports of products of animal origin, including foodstuffs.

Import Controls

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) airports and (b) seaports there are, broken down by region at which her Department has responsibility for import controls. [86576]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 December 2002]: Responsibility for setting policy on import controls at all airports and seaports for animals and plants and their products, and live fish from non-EU countries, lies with Defra and the devolved administrations.

As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced in the House on 6 November, responsibility for anti-smuggling controls is to transfer to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, as soon as is practicable. Currently the responsibilities for execution and enforcement of import controls are as set out below.

The State Veterinary Service, part of Defra, is responsible for executing checks and enforcement of the rules at border inspection posts (BIPs) through which only those products referred to in Annex I of Council Directive 92/118/EEC which are not intended for human consumption; or live animals are introduced into the UK. There are 16 BIPs approved for this purpose—five airports and six seaports in England, and two airports and three seaports in Scotland.

Each local authority is responsible for executing the import checks rules within its area for products of animal origin other than those products mentioned above. These are carried out at approved BIPs as set out below:

England	18 ports	5 airports
Wales	1 port
Scotland	4 ports	1 airport
Northern Ireland	1 port	1 airport

Local authorities are also responsible for enforcing the import rules in their areas, whether they include BIPs or not.

Responsibility for checks to protect plant health of imported plants and plant produce lies with Defra's Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate at all airports and seaports in England and Wales.

Insecticides

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what regulations prevent gardeners from manufacturing home-made insecticides for use in their own gardens; and if she will make a statement. [86487]

Mr. Morley: All pesticides used in this country, including those used in domestic gardens, must first be approved by Ministers. Approval is then only granted provided thorough scientific evaluation shows that they can be used safely.

I am, however, aware that there are some gardeners who like to use home garden remedies to protect their plants. The Department does not however condone the promotion of such use either by individuals, organisations or the media.

Landfill

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) number and (b) total size is of planned landfill sites in the United Kingdom; and when each is expected to begin operations, broken down by region. [85893]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 11 December 2002]: Waste Strategy 2000 recognises that landfill will still have a role to play in any sustainable waste management system, but that it will be a much smaller role.

Local authorities should take into account the landfill diversion targets required by the landfill directive to reduce the landfilling of biodegradable waste across the United Kingdom by around two-thirds in line with the timetable set out in the directive (i.e. by 2016, should the UK decide not to take advantage of the final four-year derogation) and the recycling and recovery targets set out in WS2000.

Information on the number of planned landfill sites is not available centrally.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the viability of enforcing greater use of (a) biodegradable plastic bottles and (b) plastic bottles which can be crushed down once empty. [86022]

Mr. Meacher: Substitutes for plastic made from potato starch have been developed and are being used for some types of packaging by some retailers. Such material is entirely biodegradable and can be composted.

A number of companies are marketing degradable plastics technology and products manufactured from these materials. These new materials are based on modified plastics manufactured from mineral oil and still have to be sent for recycling after use. We do strongly support the development of biodegradable plastics made from non-fossil sources, providing these will actually be composted and not sent to landfill.

Plastic bottles which can be crushed down once empty are useful, particularly in terms of saving space in household bins. We are looking at ways to encourage this.

Ministerial Speeches

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what speeches (a) she and (b) Departmental ministerial colleagues have made since 23rd July to external organisations, stating in each case whether the speech is publicly available; and if she will place in the Library copies of those speeches not hitherto publicly available. [82852]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 27 November 2002]: All Defra Ministers make a number of speeches every week and so it would only be at disproportionate cost that a fully comprehensive list could be assembled. However a list has previously been placed in the library of the House which shows the principal keynote speeches made by DEFRA Ministers from 7 June 2001 to 1 June 2002. Some of these are available on the DEFRA website (as are other, more minor speeches) and, where possible, the others are available upon request although generally not in an 'as delivered' format.

Recycling (Agricultural Waste)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what basis she provides funding to assist a business in England proposing to recycle agricultural film waste; and what account she will take of recycling facilities in Scotland when reaching such a decision. [87219]

Mr. Meacher: We do not provide funding specifically for the development of schemes to recycle agricultural film waste. The Rural Development Service may consider funding under ERDP for a particular scheme on the basis of an application put to them. All relevant factors would be taken into account in considering any application that is made, including recycling facilities in Scotland.

Animal Welfare (Sows)

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Department has made of the effect on expectant and nursing sows of being kept in farrowing crates; and whether the Government plans to ban the use of farrowing crates. [86583]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 December 2002]: We have, for a number of years, funded research directly or indirectly related to the welfare of the sow and her piglets, from farrowing to weaning. Part of this research has been directed towards determining which aspects of confinement in farrowing crates could, potentially, cause frustration in pregnant and lactating sows. A key issue emerging is that changes in farrowing systems to improve sow welfare can frequently have an adverse effect on the welfare of the piglets. As a result, we are not yet able unreservedly to recommend free-farrowing systems for widespread commercial adoption.

Our research, and that of others, continues. Our aim is to reach a position where it is possible to avoid the close confinement of all sows.

Sustainable Energy

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Department of Trade and Industry on promoting sustainable energy sources; and if she will make a statement. [87133]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is in regular contact with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on a wide range of matters that affect the business of both their Departments. Sustainable energy sources are amongthe issues that have been discussed at those meetings.

Water Supplies

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are in place to ensure that medication cannot be administered in the UK's waters supplies. [86306]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Regulations 25–28 of the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 (as amended) require water undertakers to only use substances and products in the treatment and supply of drinking water which have been approved by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. She is advised by the Committee on Products and Processes for Use in Public Water Supply, which is an advisory non-departmental public body.

TRANSPORT

West Coast Main Line

12. John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to improve rail links to the west of Scotland. [85912]

Mr. Jamieson: The west coast upgrade will increase the frequency of InterCity services to Glasgow from September 2004 and reduce journey times.

Bus Services

13. Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent changes have (a) recently taken place and (b) are planned to bus subsidies provided by his Department. [85913]

Mr. Spellar: We have recently extended Bus Service Operators Grant (formerly called fuel duty rebate) to many community transport services and introduced a 100 per cent. fuel duty rebate on biodiesel. We are considering ways of applying this grant to scheduled coach services in 2003–04 in return for half-fare concessions for older and disabled passengers. Our Bus Subsidy Review is considering whether any further changes to subsidy mechanisms will help to achieve our policy objectives for bus services, which include increasing patronage, modal shift and promoting social inclusion.

14. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what conclusions he has reached on the future use of fuel duty rebate to support public bus services. [85914]

Mr. Jamieson: Our Bus Subsidy Review is currently considering whether any changes to fuel duty rebate will help to achieve our policy objectives for bus services, which include increasing patronage, modal shift and promoting social inclusion. The review will report its conclusions to Ministers by February 2003.

20. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what response he will be giving to the report of the Commission for Integrated Transport on Public Subsidy for the Bus Industry. [85920]

Mr. Jamieson: We welcome the report of the Commission for Integrated Transport on Public Subsidy for the Bus Industry. We will consider our response as part of my Department's Review of Bus Subsidies.

22. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people used buses in England in the last year for which figures are available. [85922]

Mr. Jamieson: In 2001, according to data from the National Travel Survey, 58 per cent. of household residents in England used local buses at least once a year and 27 per cent. used them at least once a week.

Bus passenger journeys in England increased by one per cent. in 2001–02 compared to 2000–01, with £3.8 billion journeys in all.

Rail Services (Wales)

15. Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Strategic Rail Authority regarding the Wales rail franchise, and in particular the service on the Cambrian coast line. [85915]

Mr. Spellar: I, and other departmental Ministers, meet the chair and chief executive of the Strategic Rail Authority on a regular basis; and discuss a range of issues.

19. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) to discuss rail services (a) to and (b) within Wales. [85919]

Mr. Jamieson: I, and other departmental Ministers, meet the Chairman and Chief Executive of the Strategic Rail Authority on a regular basis and discuss a range of issues.

Capital Investment

16. Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on projected future levels of capital investment under the (a) Department for Transport and (b) Strategic Rail Authority 10-year plans for (i) railways, (ii) roads, (iii) multimodal studies and (iv) local transport. [85916]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport is today publishing a progress report on the 10-year investment plan. As well as describing the considerable progress that has been made during the first 18 months of the 10-year plan, this will also set out our plans for investment in all transport modes for the remainder of the decade.

Airport Development

17. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact on Sutton Coldfield of the proposed airport expansion at (a) Birmingham airport and (b) Rugby. [85917]

Mr. Jamieson: The potential impacts of Midlands' airport development options have been assessed against a range of local and national indicators, including economic benefits and environmental costs.

In general terms, development at Birmingham airport may result in increased aircraft noise for Sutton Coldfield, but could also generate additional jobs. The Rugby option assumes the closure of Birmingham,so the converse is likely to be true.

Cliffe Airport

21. Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to consult residents in southern Essex in relation to the proposals to build a new airport at Cliffe. [85921]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport announced to Parliament on 28 November 2002 that the consultation on airports capacity will be extended until we have consulted on proposals in respect of Gatwick. My right hon. Friend made it absolutely clear to the House that it is open for anyone in the country to respond to the consultation.

Those who have already responded to the consultation will be able to amend, add to, or replace their response having considered the new document. We will set out our plans for the remaining stage of the consultation process, including how to inform respondents, when we publish the further consultation paper in the new year.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 2002 (ref 86522) if he will explain his plans for the consultation process in the new year to the public meeting on Canvey Island. [87286]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 16 December 2002]: As I set out in my previous answer to the hon. Member on 9 December 2002, Official Report, columns 29–30W, we will set out our plans for the remaining stage of the consultation process when we publish the further consultation in the new year.

Air Safety and Security

23. Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on plans to improve safety (a) at airports and (b) on board aircraft. [85923]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government, the Civil Aviation Authority and the aviation industry as a whole work together at all times to maintain the present high safety and security standards at UK airports and on board aircraft using our airports. These standards are monitored and further improvements made wherever appropriate.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve security checks on aircraft crews; and if he will make a statement. [87503]

Mr. Jamieson: Under arrangements being brought in next year, UK aircrew will be subject to five-year reference and criminal record checking. We have already ordered that a study be carried out into the benefits to security of conducting additional checks on crews, balanced against the practicalities of undertaking them. This study will be completed early in the New Year.

Railway Stations

24. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of the upgrading of railway stations following Railtrack's entering receivership. [85924]

Mr. Jamieson: Railtrack's arrangements for upgrading railway stations relate to like for like replacements. These have not been affected by Railtrack being taken into administration. The Strategic Rail Authority operate several schemes with other partners to improve the quality and facilities at stations.

Regional Transport Strategies

25. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps is he taking to ensure that transport strategies support regional economic regeneration. [85925]

Mr. Jamieson: Our national planning policy guidance on regional planning clearly states that Regional Transport Strategies, produced as part of Regional Planning Guidance, should inform and support the Regional Economic Strategies being developed by Regional Development Agencies.

My Department is committed to working closely with RDAs, in conjunction with Regional Planning Bodies, in the development of these strategies and in identifying transport improvements that will support economic regeneration in all regions. Last week, for instance, we announced a major package of improvements to tackle congestion on the country's strategic highway network, helping to support business competitiveness.

27. Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the Government's decision on the options for improving the link between the M6 and the M56. [85927]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of States response to the West Midlands to North West Multi Modal Study recently instructed the Highways Agency to provide further advice on alternative options for improving connections between the M6 and the M56. That advice is expected early in 2003, following which he will consider his decision.

Transport Costs

28. Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications for his transport policy of the relative changes in the cost of travelling by (a) car, (b) rail and (c) bus since 1997. [85928]

Mr. Jamieson: Development of policies in the 10-year plan has been informed by extensive modelling using the National Transport Model and its forebears. This modelling takes account of the best data we have on how demand for different transport modes varies with respect to the overall cost of using those modes.

Airports (Transport Links)

29. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his assessment is of the priorities for improvements in public transport to airports in the south-east of England. [85929]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government are committed to improving access to airports by public transport. This is a key component in the ongoing consultation on "The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom". Comments received will be considered carefully before final decisions are taken on the policies for the air transport White Paper, to be published next year.

Road Deaths

30. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his strategy to reduce the number of deaths on the road. [85931]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government are fully committed to meeting or beating its casualty reduction targets for 2010 as set out in "Tomorrow's roads—safer for everyone". Total deaths and serious injuries in 2001 were 15 per cent. down from the baseline for the 40 per cent. target reduction. Child deaths and serious injuries in 2001 were 27 per cent. down from their baseline—and thus over halfway towards their 50 per cent. target reduction.

Aviation Industry (Environmental Impact)

31. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the work his Department is undertaking to reduce the environmental impact of the aviation industry. [85932]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department for Transport on behalf of the United Kingdom is a leading participant in international bodies dealing with the environmental impact of the aviation industry, including the Committee on Aviation Environmental Protection (CAEP) of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

For example, the phase-out of most 'Chapter 2' jet aircraft, completed in March 2002, has produced significant reductions in noise around mature airports. The UK has been and remains at the forefront of states pressing for stringent certification rules for both noise and atmospheric emissions.

Trunk Roads

32. Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received on the state of trunk roads. [85933]

Mr. Jamieson: I regularly receive representations from a wide range of organisations and individuals on the state of trunk and local roads.

Manchester Metrolink

33. Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the next phase of the Manchester tram system to be open. [85934]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friend announced his confirmation of funding approval for the third phase of Manchester Metrolink on 10 December. It is expected to be fully operational by 2010.

Norwich/Liverpool Street Rail Line

34. Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the capacity of the Norwich to Liverpool street rail line. [85935]

Mr. Jamieson: On 6 November the Strategic Rail Authority confirmed their intention to create a new "Greater Anglia" franchise, combining the services of the three current operators into Liverpool street. Provision of capacity into London Liverpool street will be a key issue for the new franchise to address.

Road Improvements (Yorkshire)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will include the provision of a bypass on the A614 for the village of Middleton-on-the-Wolds in the further studies on road improvements in Yorkshire, announced on 10 December 2002. [87383]

Mr. Spellar: Any proposal for a bypass for the village of Middleton-on-the-Wolds would be for the local highway authority, to promote through its Local Transport Plan. The proposal would then be considered on its merits.

Fatal Accidents (School Children)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the Environment Secretary in the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the implications of the recent fatal accidents involving school children travelling home from school on a scheduled bus service. [87384]

Mr. Jamieson: It would be inappropriate to meet the Environmental Secretary in the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the implications of the fatal accident near Cowbridge on 3 December 2002 in the immediate future, while there is an on-going Police investigation into it. I am not aware of there having been any other recent fatal accidents involving school children on scheduled bus services.

General Lighthouse Authorities

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the (a) role, (b) terms of reference and (c) annual budget of (i) the Trinity House Lighthouse Authority and (ii) The Commission for Irish Lights in each year since 1997. [87597]

Mr. Jamieson: The role and terms of reference of the General Lighthouse Authorities (GLA) are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 as amended. This requires them to provide marine aids to general navigation in their respective areas, adjacent seas and islands. The Trinity House Lighthouse Service is the GLA for England, Wales and the Channel Islands and Gibraltar. The Commissioners for Irish Lights is the GLA for Northern Ireland. Under the Republic of Ireland Merchant Shipping Act 1894 as amended, CIL is also the GLA for the Republic. The GLAs deliver services in accordance with international standards agreed by the International Association of Marine Aids to Navigation and Lighthouse Authorities. All three GLAs submit annual Corporate Plans for approval by the Secretary of State.

The annual budget spend from 1997/98 to 2002/03 is set out in the table.

	Trinity House Lighthouse Service	Commissioners of Irish Lights
1997–98	29,187	13,775
1998–99	29,362	13,401
1999–2000	28,587	13,701
2000–01	30,364	15,077
2001–02	30,203	16,168
2002–03	31,998	16,034

M25

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the full report on the assessment by the Transport Research Laboratory of the controlled motorway project on the M25. [87268]

Mr. Jamieson: A full report on the assessment of the controlled motorway project on the M25 is expected to be placed in the Library in late autumn 2003.

Rail Services (Northern England)

Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to improve the rail services between Liverpool and Manchester serving parts of the Wigan borough; [87245]

(2) when he expects the Strategic Rail Authority to publish the structure of the franchise to run rail services in the north of England. [87242]

Mr. Jamieson: Wigan is currently served by the First North Western franchise. The SRA is planning to combine services currently operated by First North Western and Arriva Trains Northern to form new Transpennine Express (TPE) and Northern franchises. TPE will run inter-city services across the north, including between Liverpool and Manchester. Northern will operate rural and urban services. The SRA expects to issue documentation about the structure of the Northern franchise early in 2003.

Information about the franchise replacement programme and the composition of franchises can be found on the Strategic Rail Authority's website at www.sra.gov.uk

Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation he plans to have with hon. Members on the structure of the new franchise for services and stations in the north of England. [87640]

Mr. Jamieson: It is primarily for the Strategic Rail Authority to determine the structure of franchises. As a matter of course, the Authority consults during the replacement process—including with local authorities, Passenger Transport Executives, RegionalAssemblies and the Rail Passengers Committees.

Railways (Arson)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidences of arson on the railways there were in each year since 1995, broken down by (a) train operating company and (b) line. [87629]

Mr. Jamieson: The Health and Safety Executive's Annual Report on the safety record of the railways in Great Britain contains details of arson on the railways. Copies are available from the House Libraries. The 2001–02 report will be published on 18 December 2002.

The HSE is unable to provide information on the train operating company and line involved in arson incidences, as these details are not recorded as part of the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, 1995 (RIDDOR).

Road Transport

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made in implementing the Government's 10-year transport plan in respect of road transport. [85918]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of State is today publishing a progress report that sets out the progress that has been made with road transport. A copy of the report will be placed in the House Library.

Road Maintenance

Mr. Rendel: If he will make a statement on the role of his Department in tackling the backlog of road maintenance on the road network. [85926]

Mr. Jamieson: There is no backlog in maintenance on the motorway and trunk road network.

The Government are committed to halting the deterioration in local road condition by 2004, and to eliminating the backlogs in carriageway, footway, bridge and street lighting maintenance by 2010. Over £30 billion for local road maintenance is being provided over the timescale of the 10 Year Transport Plan, 23 per cent. more in real terms than the previous 10 years.

Maritime Control Agency

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the seagoing qualifications and experience, including period in command of vessels on international voyages, of each individual named on the job structure accompanying the Maritime Control Agency's Business Plan 2002–03 and Forward Look. [87566]

Mr. Jamieson: It would be inappropriate to list individual civil servants and their qualifications. However, of the individuals named on the organisational chart accompanying the MCA Business Plan 2002–03, there are:

six who hold a Master Mariners Certificate and have served on ships trading internationally;

five who have a degree in Naval Architecture;

eight who are Qualified Marine Engineers; and two who served in the Royal Navy.

Between them they have approximately 150 years of seagoing experience.

Tramways

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the requirements placed on potential operators of light tramway systems in obtaining a licence to operate on little-used railway branch lines with special reference to the Stourbridge to Stourbridge Junction line. [87307]

Mr. Jamieson: Where a light rail or tram scheme is proposed which would need to share track access with the heavy rail network, it will need to satisfy the requirements of relevant railway group standards (save in the case of the Great Central Railway). Where the line is no longer used for heavy rail, however, HMRI would be the sole approval body as with other tramway schemes.

I understand that it is proposed that the Parry People Mover will operate on shared track between Stourbridge junction and Stourbridge town centre. For this to be permissible it would need to meet Railway Group standards.

British Transport Police

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with train operating companies on additional funding for British Transport Police since 11 September 2001. [87101]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 16 December 2002]: There have been no discussions between the Secretary of State for Transport and the train operating companies, but the Secretary of State has discussed policing matters with the Chief Constable of the British Transport Police.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many uniformed officers are deployed to police the London Underground system. [87102]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The deployment of the British Transport Police (BTP) is an operational matter for the Chief Constable. The BTP have advised me that they have budgeted for a total of 471 officers within their London Underground area, and that 413 of these are allocated to uniformed duties. 383 uniformed officers are currently deployed to police the London Underground.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

HIV/AIDS

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress she has made with HIV/AIDS education within African school curriculum projects supported by her Department. [87170]

Clare Short: DFID is working with development partners to ensure that HIV is mainstreamed throughout education systems, plans and interventions in all African countries where we are providing education support. This includes working directly with Ministries of Education to ensure that school curricula address HIV and AIDS in a manner that is gender-sensitive and relevant to students.

We are also making progress by piloting targeted school-based HIV prevention programmes—the Nigeria Extended Life Planning Education Project is one such initiative.

DFID is also supporting innovative programmes in Southern Africa, using multiple media such as radio drama, pamphlets and cartoon books to communicate about HIV prevention. We are supporting Soul City on a regional initiative to provide materials on HIV/AIDS to all 12 to 16-year-olds in Botswana, Namibia, Lesotho and Swaziland.

Republic of the Congo

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funds the Government of the Republic of Congo has made available for (a) prevention and (b) treatment of HIV/AIDS. [87169]

Clare Short: We have no current information on the level of funding being made available by the Government for the prevention and treatment of HIV/AIDS.

Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many meetings she has had with (a) companies, (b) governments and (c) new governmental organisations regarding the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative since the World Summit on Sustainable Development. [87212]

Clare Short: The Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative team hosted the first UK stakeholders' meeting on 26 November. Forty participants attended with approximately equal representation from extractive companies, investors, international agencies, NGOs and other UK Government departments.

Many other bilateral meetings have taken place with other Government officials, companies and NGOs to raise awareness of the initiative. In addition, the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative was presented at the launch workshop of the World bank's research into the Governance of Natural Resources, held in Paris, 9–10 December.

An international meeting will take place on 11–12 February to draw in wider, international support for the initiative and to discuss the substance of mechanisms to make transparency a reality. This will be followed by a ministerial-level conference in April 2003.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Dawson) of 2 December 2002, Official Report, column 530W, if she will list the principles underpinning the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative. [87221]

Clare Short: The draft principles adopted by the stakeholders meeting which we hosted on 26 November are as follows:

We recognise that revenues from natural resources should be an important engine for economic growth, social development and poverty eradication, but, if not managed properly, can create negative economic and social impacts.

We recognise that the benefits of resource extraction occur as revenue streams over many years and that, although highly price dependent, a public understanding of current and future revenue streams would help inform the choice of appropriate and realistic development options.

We support the principle and practice of accountability for the stewardship of revenue streams—from their receipt to their eventual end use.

We are committed to honest, legal and transparent behaviour.

We support the principle and practise of financial transparency—as a necessary condition for good governance.

We believe that a comprehensive, consistent and workable approach to the disclosure of payments and revenues is required.

In seeking solutions, we believe that all stakeholders have important and relevant contributions to make—including host and home governments, multilateral organisations, regulatory agencies, financial and lending organisations, non-governmental organisations and industry.

We commit to develop effective mechanisms to achieve transparency of payments and revenues in the extractive industries. This will entail disclosure by oil, gas and mining companies of tax and non-tax payments to host country governments and government-linked entities, and transparency by governments over revenues from this sector. We encourage other Governments, national and multinational extractive companies and other interested parties to join us to develop effective and lasting solutions.

Burundi

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department has taken to support the Transitional Government of Burundi since November 2001. [87148]

Clare Short: We are supporting the full implementation of the Arusha agreement on Burundi and the Transitional National Government, including through financial support for the peace facilitation process and for the costs of the South African security deployment in Burundi. We continue to work energetically in the international community including at the recent Donors Round Table Conference in Geneva to carry forward the Arusha agreement. We are playing an active role in encouraging international financial institutions to re-engage in Burundi, and are increasing our development assistance—including a $1 million contribution to the Burundi Multidonor Debt Trust Fund. We have posted a full-time DFID representative to Bujumbura to facilitate this increased activity.

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department will be taking to support the recent peace agreement between the Transitional Government of Burundi and rebel group the FDD and to encourage peace talks between the Transitional Government of Burundi and rebel group the FNL. [87149]

Clare Short: We are actively engaged with our international partners in considering how we should respond to the proposed African Mission to support the Dar es Salaam ceasefire agreement with the FDD. We are also in discussion with the Transitional National Government on their security sector reform needs to support the agreement. We are working closely with the FCO and international partners to help the facilitation efforts of the South Africans, Tanzanians, Ugandans and Gabonese to continue efforts to get the FNL to sign the ceasefire.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what correspondence she has had with the Government of Burundi regarding alleged human rights violations against children held in detention centres; and if she will make a statement. [87171]

Clare Short: I have not had any correspondence with the Government of Burundi on this issue. According to the latest statistics published by UNICEF and Libejeun (a local NGO) there are currently 199 children in Burundian prisons.

Conditions appear to be well below international minimum standards. However, considerable improvements have been noted by Amnesty International and the ICRC over the last two to three years in prisons where ICRC have been paying monitoring visits and installing water and sanitation equipment. We are providing financial support to the ICRC programmes in Burundi and elsewhere in the Great Lakes. Our embassy continues to monitor the situation.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the Final Report of the UN Panel of Experts on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources and Other Forms of Wealth of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [87050]

Clare Short: We broadly welcome the final report of the UN Panel of Experts, which contains some important recommendations aimed at ensuring that the Democratic Republic of Congo's natural resources are used for the benefit of all its people. However we believe that it contains significant inaccuracies and some allegations on which there is no evidence. We and other members of the Security Council have asked for further information from the panel on the claims contained within it. The panel's mandate expired when it submitted its final report, and there is currently no mechanism or process in place to take forward their work. We are working on a draft Security Council Resolution to resolve this administrative problem.

Sexual and Reproductive Health

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her Department's budget was spent on (a) reproductive health and (b) HIV/AIDS in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [87052]

Clare Short: Figures for HIV/AIDS related activities which includes reproductive health activities, for the last three financial years are set out in the table.

HIV/AIDS activities as percentage of DFID bilateral programme

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
HIV/AIDS related expenditure	75.7	124.9	206.6
Annual bilateral programme	1,323.9	1,414.8	1,506.2
Percentage of total programme	6%	9%	14%

The above data combine projects that have been marked against the Reproductive Health Services and HIV/AIDS policy markers. Increasingly, DFID is helping to tackle HIV/AIDS within the context of large sexual and reproductive health programmes and sustainable health systems development. In these circumstances, it is often difficult to attribute spend to particular aspects of sexual and reproductive health. For example, provision of condoms serves the dual purposes of HIV/AIDS prevention and protection against other sexually transmitted infections as well as family planning. We strongly believe that a cross-sectoral approach to tackling HIV/AIDS is essential if we are to be successful. The International Development Committee share this view. This does, however, pose problems of attribution.

Education

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contributions to the Education for All action plan she expects to make in the next five years. [87431]

Clare Short: Our forecast support for basic education amounts to £1.3 billion over the next five years, either through education sector support or direct budget support. Of this, about £500 million will go to Africa and £800 million to Asia. A substantial proportion will go to low income countries included within the Fast Track Initiative, notably to the five high population countries with large numbers of children out of school (India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nigeria, DRC) which the Government successfully pressed to have included in the initiative. These spending figures are forecasts, not targets or commitments, and depend on agreeing high quality programmes with our partners.

Ethiopia

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the total volume of food aid (a) her Department and (b) the EU has delivered to Ethiopia in 2002; and on what dates that food arrived in Ethiopia. [87476]

Clare Short: My Department has provided 4,887 Mts of food aid through the World Food Programme and 6,400 Mts through Save the Children (UK) in 2002. In both cases, food was drawn down from the Emergency Food Security Reserve (EFSR) and distributed immediately following our commitment. Both organisations subsequently purchased food locally. WFP paid back into the EFSR in September and SC(UK) will complete repayment this week.

We understand that the EU has so far provided 99,800 Mts of food aid in 2002. Of the 99,800 Mts, 22,800 Mts was delivered through the World Food Programme. We are told that it is difficult to produce actual delivery dates as the 99,800 Mts was purchased locally. A further 22,800 Mts will be delivered by the end of December. DFID contributes almost 20 per cent. of the cost of EU assistance.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what volume of food (a) her Department and (b) the EU has pledged to Ethiopia for 2003; and when she expects these food deliveries to arrive in Ethiopia. [87477]

Clare Short: In addition to the 11,287 Mts of food aid we provided in 2002, we have just approved the provision of 2,577 Mts of supplementary food aid through CARE International for 2003 for 286,300 vulnerable people in East and West Hararghe zones. It is expected that this will be delivered in the first two months of 2003. We are keeping the situation in Ethiopia under continuous review and are considering the provision of further food aid for 2003.

On 9 December, in response to the December Emergency Appeal, the European Union announced the provision of 260,000 Mts of food aid for Ethiopia in 2003. We understand that they expect that this will be delivered in March-April 2003. DFID contributes almost 20 per cent. of the cost of EU assistance.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the level of Ethiopia's food deficits for the first quarter of 2003. [87478]

Clare Short: In the Joint UN/Government of Ethiopia Appeal, which was launched on 7 December, it was indicated that the food needs for Ethiopia in the first quarter of 2003 would be 410,809 MT.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was discussed at the meeting of the EU's General Affairs and External Relations Council on 9 and 10 December regarding Ethiopia. [87479]

Clare Short: Ethiopia was not discussed at the GAERC on 9–10 December despite it being on the agenda. However, in response to the Government of Ethiopia/UN Appeal on 9 December the Commission announced a new emergency food aid programme worth £70 million, which is equivalent to 260,000 metric tonnes of cereals.

Gambia

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on recent levels of malnutrition among children in Gambia. [87172]

Clare Short: The most recent figures for levels of malnutrition in The Gambia that we are aware of, come from a nutritional survey carried out in October 2002 by the World Food Programme (WFP), in collaboration with other agencies, in 29 villages. This found levels of acute malnutrition among children surveyed to be 11.2 per cent. Children in the age group between 12 and 23 months were found to be worst affected.

Landmines (Angola)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what impact she estimates landmines are having on humanitarian efforts in the Mavinga region of Angola. [85878]

Clare Short: On 2 December, a vehicle belonging to Medicins Sans Frontieres (MSF) working on an emergency relief project in the southeastern region of Mavinga, funded in part by DFID, was blown up by a mine resulting in the deaths of 7 people, and the wounding of 6 others. As a result of this tragic incident, MSF have stated their intention to reduce their humanitarian activities in the area—one of the worst affected in Angola. Relief agencies in Angola state that landmines continue to restrict the delivery of humanitarian assistance.

According to the UN Office for the Co-ordination of Human Affairs (OCHA), Angola is one of the most heavily mined countries in the world. As many as 70,000 Angolans are believed to have lost limbs as a result of landmine explosions. My Department has allocated US$ 459,000 to UNDP for a project aimed at improving the effectiveness of mine action through strengthened coordination and planning at the provincial level in Angola. We will also be contributing 19.7 per cent. of the €6 million which the EC has recently made available for mine action in Angola. This includes 5 million for a variety of mine-clearance agencies.

Nigeria

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the fairness of political party registration in Nigeria; and what impact the registration of political parties in Nigeria has made on the country's transition to democracy. [87173]

Clare Short: The Supreme Court ruling of 21 November 2002 upheld the Independent National Electoral Commission's (INEC) right to set guidelines for the registration of political parties, but held that these guidelines could not impose requirements in excess of those set out in the constitution. As a result, 22 new political parties have now been registered, bringing the total to 28. Though the initial ruling by INEC was exclusive, the court system was used to good effect by the excluded parties to ensure a much broader participation. Thus, while the courts ruled that INEC was not 'fair' to have excluded parties in the first place, the system as a whole can be judged to have been fair.

The registration of the additional parties will cause administrative difficulties, but it could have a beneficial impact, allowing more people to become involved in politics, and could increase the likelihood that parties will form on issue-based platforms. However the full impact of the registration of 22 new parties is yet to be felt. My Department is working closely with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to monitor developments.

Primary Education

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which countries increased funding for primary education over the next five years will be spent and how; and how much of this will be spent in World bank Fast Track countries. [87569]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie on 18 November 2002, Official Report, columns 15–16W).

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list for her Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87698]

Clare Short: My department publishes progress against all our outstanding Public Service Agreement targets in our Departmental Report (published in April 2002) and our Autumn Performance Report (published in October 2002). These are available at www.dfid.gov.uk.

Sub-Saharan Africa (Health Care)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money was spent on healthcare services per person last year in sub-Saharan Africa. [87088]

Clare Short: Latest figures available in the World Bank's publication "World Development Indicators 2002, Table 2.15 Health expenditure, services and use" shows $41 of health expenditure per capita in Sub Saharan Africa. This includes public and private health expenditure, plus for some countries, external sources (mainly foreign assistance).

DEFENCE

Ambulances

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ambulances are available to each armed service; and how many of these are air conditioned. [87685]

Dr. Moonie: The Army and the Royal Marines have 768 battlefield ambulances (BFA) and 68 armoured ambulances. At present, all the armoured ambulances, and 43 of the BFA are fitted with air conditioning units (ACU). Units are also able to convert the FV 432 and BV 206 vehicles for use as ambulances as and when appropriate. These are not air conditioned.

The RAF has 28 BFA and 55 trauma management vehicles for crash rescue on airfields. These are not air conditioned.

In addition to ambulances, the Ministry of Defence has 109 coaches with an ambulance role, which are not air conditioned.

Ammunition

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what types and tonnage of ammunitions were brought into the United Kingdom by his Department in the last 12 months. [86564]

Dr. Moonie: During the past 12 months, the following types of ammunition have been brought into the United Kingdom as a result of overseas procurement:

7.62 mm BALL, 21 mm Rocket System, 21 mm Training System, 0.5 4B/IT, 338 inch (various), 12.7 mm IMP, 5.56 mm AP, 9 mm (various), 66 mm, Goalkeeper FMPDS, 14.5 mm Artillery Training L21A1 (Charge), 40 mm Grenades (various), Enhanced Performance Grenade, 60 mm Mortar Bombs.

I am withholding information regarding the tonnage of ammunition brought into the United Kingdom in accordance with Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Cyprus (Christmas Mail)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what delays he expects to occur with the forces' Christmas mail to Episcopi in Cyprus. [87637]

Dr. Moonie: No delays are expected to any mail posted by the published "latest posting" dates, which were 6 December for parcels and 16 December for letters and packets.

D-Day

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for UK involvement in celebrations to mark the 60th anniversary of D-Day in Normandy; and if he will make a statement. [87036]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 31 October 2002, Official Report, column 881W, to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin).

Dalton Barracks

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 19 November 2002, Official Report, column 36W, what the regular staff complement of officers and ranks at the Dalton Barracks in Oxfordshire is; how many deaths have been reported in and around the barracks since 1990; and what is the numerical breakdown of these deaths by cause. [86050]

Mr. Ingram: There are some 1,500 military personnel currently based at Dalton Barracks, Abingdon, with three Close Support Regiment and 4 General Support Regiment Royal Logistic Corps. Available records indicate that there have been four deaths at Abingdon since 1990. I am unable to release details of the cause of death in each case, as this may lead to the identification of individuals and compromise service personnel confidentiality. I am therefore withholding the information under Exemption 12 (Privacy of an Individual) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Defence Diversification Agency

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inquiries have been received by the Defence Diversification Agency since its inception; how many of these were received through its Scottish office; how many led to a successful outcome; and if he will make a statement. [86386]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Diversification Agency, now in its fourth year of operation, has received some 2,653 inquiries, of which 198 were from Scotland. All inquiries were successfully processed with about 50 per cent. leading to follow-up technology/knowledge transfer.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Scottish firms have had negotiations with the Defence Diversification Agency in each year since its inception; and if he will make a statement. [86393]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Diversification Agency has had dealings with some 200 companies through its Scottish offices. The listing of these companies by date of inquiry, where we have such a record, is set out in the table.

Defence Procurement

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total expenditure was on procurement by each of the services in the last year for which figures are available; and how much of the procurement budget for each was spent in Scotland. [86001]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 1 February 2002, Official Report, column 601W. The latest figures for "Sea", "Land", "Air" and "other" are still those for 1998–99. Ministry of Defence systems have been changing following the introduction (inter alia) of Smart Acquisition (formerly Smart Procurement) and the move from cash accounting to resource accounting and budgeting (RAB). Consideration has moved from recording and analysing inputs to the armed forces to providing capability. The latest DPA Accounts (HC13 dated 28 November 2002) show that under RAB in the financial year 2001–02, the following resources were expended:

FY 2001–02	£ million
Total expenditure	4,766
Strategic deployment	1,376
Strike	1,587
Manoeuvre	1,134
Information superiority	669

In addition to these sums, the Defence Logistic Organisation provides support to the front line.

These categories are not broken down into spend in regional areas.

Departmental Staff

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) military personnel and (b) civil servants there are in his Deparment, broken down by region. [87152]

Dr. Moonie: The available information is given in table 1 below showing the position for the United Kingdom Regular Forces as at April 2002. For consistency table 2 shows Civilian Personnel as at April 2002 and in addition the latest information as at October 2002.

Table 1 UK regular forces[2] by country and Government office region (GOR) as at April 2002 (all services)

	Number
United Kingdom	171,340
By Government Office Region
England[1]	141,720
North East	1,310
North West	1,520
Yorkshire and the Humber	13,760
East Midlands	7,510
West Midlands	6,710
Eastern	18,460
London	6,670
South East	49,990
South West	35,790
Wales	2,290
Scotland	14,250
Northern Ireland[4]	7,660
Unknowns[4]	5,420

Notes:

[1] All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

[2] Figures are for UK Regular Forces, both trained and untrained, located in the UK. They therefore exclude Gurkhas, Full-time Reserve Service personnel, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Regiment and mobilised reservists.

2,291 Gurkhas deployed in the United Kingdom at 1 April 2002.

1,986 Full-time Reserve Service Personnel at 1 April 2002

3,645 Personnel in the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment at 1 April 2002.

[3] Naval Service personnel on sea service are included against the local authority containing the home port of their ship.

[4] The detailed figures have been compiled from unit statistics related to unit postcodes. For some units postcode information is either unavailable or inappropriate. These units include personnel who are known to be in Northern Ireland, so these have been added to the Northern Ireland total. The others are in the 'Unknowns' row.

El Alamein Memorials

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial support was given to UK veterans attending memorials in North Africa for the 60th anniversary of the battle of El Alamein; and if he will make a statement. [87037]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence provided support to the Eighth Army Veterans' Association (EAVA) to commemorate the battle and a service of thanksgiving was held in Westminster Abbey on 30 October; the MOD organised and funded the service. Two other events were also supported by the Department: a Commonwealth service to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the battle (held at the Commonwealth War Cemetery, El Alamein) and an international service (at the Italian War Memorial, near El Alamein). No financial assistance was given to veterans to visit Egypt.

Executive Agencies

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expenditure was of each defence agency (a) in total and (b) in Scotland in the last available year; how many staff were employed by each agency (i) in total and (ii) in Scotland in that year. [86385]

Dr. Moonie: Information on expenditure by Defence agencies is contained in the annual report and accounts of each agency, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Information on the number of staff employed by each agency is set out in the table:

Staff employed by each agency (April 2002)

Firefighters' Strike

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make an assessment of the range of equipment and clothing held by his Department to determine whether it enables it to (a) provide cover for services withdrawn by the fire brigades and (b) conduct firefighting operations for which it is responsible. [87859]

Mr. Ingram: The Armed Forces have been supplied with suitable and adequate equipment and clothing to provide the agreed level of fire cover in the event of industrial action being taken by local fire brigades. When not in use the responsibility for such equipment rests with the Office of my right hon Friend the Deputy Prime Minister.

The Defence Fire Services are also supplied with and maintain all the necessary equipment and clothing to conduct those operations for which they are primarily responsible.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what his present estimates are for (a) the full costs and (b) the additional costs incurred by his Department in planning for and providing military personnel and equipment to cover for services withdrawn by the fire brigades; and what elements his Department has taken into account in calculating its costs incurred in providing such services; [87856]

(2) what the arrangements are for his Department to recover from the authorities responsible for the provision of such services its costs in providing services withdrawn by the fire brigades; and when he expects his Department to receive the repayments due to it from other authorities in respect of its costs in providing services withdrawn by the fire brigades. [87857]

Mr. Ingram: It is too early to make even the broadest of estimates of how much the military assistance will cost at this stage, because the costs incurred during the actual strike periods have yet to be fully captured through the Ministry of Defence's central cost reporting system, and because we have no relevant historical examples to predict from. This prevents the Department from making any accurate costs estimates beyond those associated with the initial purchase of the urgent operational equipment necessary to equip the services.

In that regard, in the run up to the strike we incurred costs of around £8 million on purchasing major items of equipment such as protective clothing, breathing apparatus and hydraulic cutting equipment.

Under the rules that apply to operations of this sort, the Ministry of Defence will recover from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) the additional costs that are incurred in providing military assistance, ensuring that the operation is cost neutral so far as the defence budget is concerned.

We expect to receive repayment for the additional costs incurred thus far by the defence budget on this operation once they have been reported, scrutinised and notified to the ODPM.

Iraq

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the Common European Security and Defence Policy in the conflict with Iraq. [87311]

Mr. Hoon: As the Government have stressed repeatedly, no decisions have been taken with regard to military action in Iraq. Military action there is neither imminent nor inevitable. The European Security and Defence Policy allows the EU to launch military operations where NATO as a whole is not engaged. Any European Security and Defence Policy operation would be within the scope of the Petersberg tasks, which are defined in the EU Treaty as: "humanitarian and rescue tasks, peace-keeping tasks and tasks of combat forces in crisis management, including peacemaking".

Kuwait

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many troops have been deployed in Kuwait in each month since September 2001; and if he will make a statement. [85372]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The number of armed forces personnel serving in Kuwait undergoes regular minor fluctuations as working practices and establishment requirements are generated or reviewed, and deployments start or finish for training, liaison and defence diplomacy purposes. The figures given are taken on or near the mid-month point.

Year	Number
September 2001	471
October 2001	525
November 2001	497
December 2001	482
January 2002	501
February 2002	517
March 2002	502
April 2002	494
May 2002	504
June 2002	497
July 2002	480
August 2002	470
September 2002	588
October	493
November	626

The numbers for September and November this year are higher than average because in both months Royal Engineers deployed to Ali Al Salem air base to undertake various necessary building works.

Networked Capabilities

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations have been made with the US Department of Defense on the development of network centric capabilities compatible with those being developed by the US. [85657]

Dr. Moonie: We are continuously engaged in consultation and co-operation with the United States to support the development of compatible (both technically and doctrinally) networked capabilities. Consultation takes place at a departmental level, between United Kingdom and US services and at individual project level.

Naval Procurement

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much (a) has been spent on naval procurement in each of the last five financial years and (b) is scheduled to be spent on naval procurement in each of the next five years. [84379]

Dr. Moonie: Figures for the amount the Ministry of Defence spent on defence equipment procurement for the years 1996–97 to 2000–01 were published by the Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA) in "UK Defence Statistics" (copies of which are available in the Library of the House).

Until 1998–99, this publication contained a split of the equipment procurement total by amount spent in each of four environments entitled "sea", "land", "air" and "other". This division did not however necessarily match the particular end destination of the equipment; for example not all "sea" equipment was for use by the Navy—programmes such as the Nimrod Maritime Aircraft came under "sea". "Other" referred to equipment not specific to a particular environment.

Changes in accounting practice meant that it was not been possible to produce an environment split on a consistent basis after 1998–99. However, for the two years 1999–2000 and 2000–01, it has been possible to produce illustrative estimates of the split for the "sea" environment using data from the MOD (cash) central ledger. Comparable data are not available beyond 2000–01 due to the introduction of resource accounting and budgeting.

Equipment procurement expenditure and that for the "sea" environment— VAT inclusive at current prices

million

	Net equipment procurement	Of which: Sea equipment procurement
1996–97	9,100	2,190
1997–98	9,003	2,142
1998–99	9,889	2,319
1999–2000	9,715	*2,233
2000–01	10,008	*2,211

Notes:

1. All figures are inclusive of VAT, which cannot be recovered by the Department.
2. Sea equipment is not only used by the Navy.

Source:

UK Defence Statistics 2002 apart from those marked with a *, which are illustrative estimates drawn from the MOD (cash) central ledger.

The Ministry of Defence does not use categories such as "naval procurement" when producing plans as to possible future spend on equipment for the armed forces. Focus is instead on capability. Some information, including the estimated cost, of a number of major projects, including the future carrier, astute submarine and the Type 45 destroyer, is however published each year in the National Audit Office's "Major Project Report". The 2002 report was published on 4 December.

Nuclear Weapons Tests

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many former British service people and military medical auxiliaries have been identified from (a) research conducted by or on behalf of his Department and (b) medical statistical data compiled by the former medical division of the Department of Social Security as suffering from the conditions (i) duodenitis and (ii) duodenal ulcer associated with or caused by exposure to irradiation from British atmospheric nuclear tests. [87581]

Dr. Moonie: No specific analysis of the incidence of these medical conditions among those who participated in the British atmospheric nuclear tests has been carried out on behalf of the Ministry of Defence. In the 1993, National Radiological Protection Board report NRPB-R266, entitled "Mortality and Cancer Incidence 1952–1990 in UK Participants in the UK Atmospheric Nuclear Weapon Tests and Experimental Programmes", deaths from duodenal ulcer and duodenitis were included in the category, "other diseases of the digestive system", and are shown in Table 6.10 of the report. The table shows a total of 46 deaths in this category in the cohort of test participants up to the end of 1990.

No medical statistical data have been compiled by the former medical division of the Department of Social Security of nuclear test veterans suffering from these conditions associated with, or caused by, exposure to irradiation from British atmospheric nuclear tests.

Overseas Personnel

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel are serving overseas; and if he will make a statement. [87686]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to tri-service publication 6: "Global Location of Service Personnel" (TSP 6), a copy of which is held in the Library of the House and is updated on a quarterly basis.

Far East Prisoners of War

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the children of the Far East Prisoners of War (COFEPOW) in respect of the wish of the COFEPOW organisation to promote a memorial and cultural building at the National Arboretum in Staffordshire. [87498]

Dr. Moonie: I have responded to a number of letters from hon. Members whose constituents, as members of COFEPOW, have expressed an interest in this subject.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make an ex gratia payment to far eastern ex-civilian prisoners of war whose great grandparents were born in the UK. [87779]

Dr. Moonie: The eligibility criterion for the ex gratia payment scheme in relation to former civilian internees held by the Japanese during World War II is that either they, or at least one of their parents or grandparents, should have been born in the United Kingdom. We have no plans to extend the criterion back another generation.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what major (a) variations and (b) delays there have been to the Private Finance Initiative contract for (i) the Electronic Messaging Service (Armymail) and (ii) TAFMIS (IT), since the contracts were signed; what has been the cost of the changes and delays; whether the partners in the PFIs were required to meet these costs; and if he will make a statement; [87579]

(2) what major variations and delays there have been to the Private Finance Initiative contract for (a) the RAF Fylingdales (power), (b) RAF Lyneham Sewerage, (c) the medium support Helicopter Aircrew Training facility, (d) the DFTS, (e) the Electronic Messaging Service (Armymail) and (f) the Joint Services Command and Staff College, since they were signed; what has been the cost of the changes and delays; whether partners in the PFI were required to meet these costs; and if he will make a statement. [87799]

Mr. Ingram: As this information is not held centrally, officials are working with the individual project teams to collate the data required, which may take some time to complete. I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

QinetiQ

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the proposed savings over 25 years by QinetiQ in respect of test and evaluation services are broken down by (a) site and (b) expense category. [87135]

Dr. Moonie: The total savings contractually agreed with QinetiQ for the duration of the Test and Evaluation contract are expected to be in the order of £685 million at current prices. QinetiQ's plans for Aberporth, Llanbedr and West Freugh have already been announced and the associated savings are provided in the table. The figures cannot be broken down by each individual expenditure category without disproportionate costs being incurred.

£ million

	Saving
Site	Manpower	Other	Total
Aberporth	86	41	127
Llanbedr	60	90	150
West Freugh	93	70	163

Information on savings at other sites is currently commercially sensitive.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 5 December, Official Report, column 85WS, on QinetiQ, if he will set out the calculation of the adjustments made in the assets and liabilities of QinetiQ prior to setting its sale price; if he will set out the final conditions to which reference is made; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the Carlyle Group bid to become a strategic partner in QinetiQ. [87551]

Dr. Moonie: As outlined in my statement of 5 December, Official Report, column 85WS, the transaction values QinetiQ at around 500 million. As is conventional, this valuation was done on a debt-free/cash-free basis. The actual receipt to the Ministry of Defence will therefore be adjusted to take account of a number of factors including: any debts owed by the company, any liabilities for which provision currently exists in the accounts, any cash held by the company and working capital to the extent this is above/below the company's normal level. The precise details of the adjustments are commercially sensitive.

As is normal in any major transaction there are a number of conditions that must be satisfied between signing and formal completion. These include: laying before Parliament of a Departmental Minute describing any contingent liabilities from the transaction; receipt of EC commission merger clearance; local authority searches and other legal issues relating to property and confirmation of the purchaser's financing arrangements. Certain other conditions exist but as these are commercially sensitive I am withholding them in accordance with Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

I am also withholding a copy of The Carlyle Group bid in accordance with Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

RAF (Flying Charges)

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the hourly RAF charge is to Government Departments for flying with 32 (The Royal) Squadron in (a) BAe 125 and (b) BAe 146 aircraft, broken down into (i) engineering and airframe costs, (ii) costs incurred for handling, landing and navigation services at civil airports, (iii) fuel and (iv) crew subsistence costs. [86953]

Mr. Ingram: The following table shows the breakdown of the hourly charge to Government Departments for flying with the BAe 125 and BAe 146 aircraft of 32 (The Royal) Squadron:

£ per hour

	BAe 125	BAel46
Engineering and airframe	374	681
Handling, landing and navigational services at civil airports	122	91
Fuel	196	559
Crew subsistence	27	197
Other	21	46
Total	740	1,574

Note:
VAT is added to the BAe 125 charge for internal United Kingdom flights.

Since 1999, this Government has published on an animal basis the overall cost of all Ministers visits overseas and a list of Cabinet Ministers' visits overseas costing more than £500. The list makes clear when RAF flights have been used and the cost of such travel is included in the published overall annual cost. Copies of the lists are in the Libraries of the House.

All travel is conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

RAF Fylingdales

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment was made in the preparation of the analysis of the security of an upgraded RAF Fylingdales, in paragraphs 80–83 of his Department's discussion paper on missile defence, of whether an enhanced Fylingdales facility would present a more attractive terrorist target. [87539]

Mr. Hoon: We keep the terrorist threat to all military installations under constant review. We do not consider that the upgrading of RAF Fylingdales for missile defence purposes will significantly change any terrorist threat to the facility.

RAF Reserve

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 9 December, Official Report, column 17, what plans he has to bring the training and mobilisation of the RAF reservists together with those of the Army, Royal Navy and Royal Marines at the Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre, Nottingham. [87220]

Dr. Moonie: Although opportunities for harmonisation are kept under review, there are currently no plans to bring the training and mobilisation of RAF reservists together with those of the Royal Navy, Royal Marines and Army at the Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre, Nottingham. Volunteer members of the Reserve Air Forces are mobilised as individuals through the RAF station on which they are based, and where the necessary personnel and pay documentation is already held. In this way, mobilisation and the task of additional training, if required, is absorbed within existing resources. This also allows the reservist to be trained alongside any regular RAF personnel deploying on the same operation.

Recruitment (Health Criteria)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which health conditions automatically disqualify applicants for a career in the armed services; what the recruitment criteria are for those with poorer eyesight; whether glasses are permitted as correctional treatment; what proposals there are to change the recruitment criteria so that people with a non-serious or mild asthma condition can have a career in the armed services; and if he will make a statement. [87369]

Dr. Moonie: The principle applying to health conditions is that new entrants must be fit to serve anywhere in the world, in all environments and in locations where medical care may be limited or remote and medical resupply uncertain, or impossible. Many conditions, especially those controlled by medication or other intervention, which may not limit civilian employment are, nonetheless, incompatible with military service.

The following conditions make a person unsuitable for enlistment:

Chest disorders

Asthma, wheeze or asthma symptoms (and treatment) during the previous four years. Chronic lung disease (e.g. emphysema, bronchiectasis and cystic fibrosis). Active tuberculosis (TB).

Back problems

Spinal surgery (including internal fixation or fusion). Recurrent low back pain. Spina bifida.

Bone or joint problems

Meniscectomy within the last year. Surgical repair of a knee cruciate ligament. Lower limb fractures with internal fixation still in place. Loss of a limb. Complete loss of a thumb. Total loss of either big toe. Any degree of clubfoot (including past surgery). Chronic joint diseases (e.g. ankylosing spondylitis, psoriatic arthritis, rheumatoid arthritis and gout). Reiter's disease in last five years. Osteochondritis dissecans.

Eye disorders

Chronic eye diseases (e.g. glaucoma, keratoconus, retinitis pigmentosa). Squint surgery in last six months. Corneal problems (e.g. corneal graft and recurrent corneal ulcers). Loss or dislocation of eye lens. Cataract or cataract surgery. Detached retina.

Ear disorders

Presence of eardrum ventilation tubes or grommets. Current perforation of eardrum. Chronic ear diseases (e.g. cholesteatoma).

Abdominal problems

Chronic abdominal diseases (e.g. Crohn disease and ulcerative colitis). Kidney disorders (e.g. horseshoe kidney, polycystic kidney disease and kidney stones). Donation of a kidney in last two years. Kidney disease in last two years.

Neurological disorders

Epilepsy or more than one seizure/fit after the age of five. Single seizure/fit in the last four years. Multiple sclerosis.

Skin problems

Malignant melanoma or skin cancer within last two years. Active skin disease (e.g. eczema and widespread psoriasis).

Pregnancy

Current pregnancy or childbirth in the last three months.

Chronic blood disease

Sickle cell disease. Congenital spherocytosis. Thalassaemia. HIV seropositivity/AIDS. Carriers of hepatitis B or C. Past history of leukaemia or malignant lymphoma.

Psychiatric problems

Schizophrenia. Obsessive-compulsive disorder. Alcohol or drug dependence. Post-traumatic stress disorder.

Other conditions

Loss of spleen (splenectomy). Transplanted organs. Severe allergic reactions and/or anaphylaxis requiring adrenaline injection precautions. Nut allergy. Circulation problems (e.g. raynaud's phenomenon or disease). Diabetes. Diseases (e.g. glandular or hormonal) requiring long-term medication or replacement therapy.

This list is not exhaustive. An application may be rejected due to other medical conditions which are subject to the discretion of Service Medical Authorities.

Applicants with vision corrected by glasses or contact lenses are generally acceptable. However, certain trades and professions require more stringent standards. For example, drivers requiring a Type 2 licence have to meet DVLA standards. Higher standards still are applied to pilots and other technical military roles.

As detailed in the list only individuals who have been free of asthma symptoms for a minimum period of four years will be able to join the armed forces. Notwithstanding this, medical entry standards are continuously reviewed against any new developments within medicine with supporting evidence and/or research being considered. Nevertheless, we have no plans to change the present medical entry standards relating to asthma.

The armed forces are responsible employers and aim to meet the requirements of the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974. This means that they must ensure that recruits are not put at increased risk of injury or illness during their service due to a pre-existing medical condition.

Reserves Hardship Fund

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to increase the monetary ceiling of the Reserves' Hardship Fund. [87060]

Dr. Moonie: Reservists called out into permanent service may apply for financial assistance in the event that their military salary is less than their earnings in civilian life. This assistance is paid in the form of a Reserve Standard Award (RSA). RSA is paid in banded rates that are related to a Reservist's rank. The current rates are set out in the Reserve Forces (Call-out and Recall) Financial Assistance Regulations (Statutory Instrument 1997/309). Work is in progress to raise the current bands to reflect the increases in inflation since these were brought into effect, and provide for automatic adjustment in line with inflation. It is currently planned to introduce the revised regulations early in 2003. Reservists are also eligible to apply for a Reserve Hardship Award (RHA) if the RSA alone would cause his/her dependents hardship. There is no ceiling for RHA payments.

Sponsored Reserves

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the role will be of the sponsored reserves; and if he will make a statement. [87687]

Dr. Moonie: The sponsored reserves concept involves a service normally provided in peacetime under contract by civilian staff employed by a contractor being provided on operations by staff drawn from the contractor's civilian workforce who have volunteered to become sponsored reservists. It envisages letting contracts for services on condition that the contractor maintains in his workforce an agreed element of staff who will have volunteered to become sponsored reservists. Should it be necessary to do so, these sponsored reservists would be called-out and serve alongside the armed forces. Their role as sponsored reservists is to continue to provide the contracted support services to the armed forces in an operational environment. They receive appropriate military training in peacetime to equip them to deliver the support required when called out for operations. The details of the individual roles of sponsored reservists will be reflected in their civilian employment contract and the contracts between the employer and the Ministry of Defence.

Submarines

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total spending has been on the programme to re-fit Britain's nuclear submarines; and how much has been spent on each submarine. [87584]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he plans to take in response to the National Audit Office report on submarine refitting at Devonport. [87765]

Mr. Ingram: The report, while acknowledging that lessons for future projects have been identified by the Ministry of Defence, made a number of further recommendations. These are being considered in detail and, where appropriate, will be applied to MOD projects.

West Freugh Airfield

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many employees at West Freugh Airfield and Range were employed by (a) the Ministry of Defence, (b) QinetiQ and (c) other contractors on 24 July. [87136]

Dr. Moonie: The following staff were employed at West Freugh on 24 July 2002: 24 from the Ministry of Defence; 141 from QinetiQ; and five from another contractor (SERCo Aerospace).

Wind Farms

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many objections to (a) offshore and (b) onshore wind farms his Department has lodged with relevant planning authorities. [86639]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has lodged four formal objections with planning authorities for onshore wind farms and no formal objections for offshore wind farm development.

Anti-TNF Drugs

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many rheumatoid arthritis patients in Northern Ireland are on consultants' waiting lists to assess their condition for the prescription of anti-TNF drugs; and how much funding is available for the prescription of anti-TNF drugs in Northern Ireland. [86949]

Mr. Browne: There is no waiting list for rheumatoid arthritis patients awaiting assessment for anti-TNF drugs. However, as of December 2002, there are approximately 260 patients who have already been assessed as likely to benefit from anti-TNF therapy, but have not yet begun this form of treatment.

Currently, some £1.14 million is employed by health and social services boards and trusts specifically for anti-TNF drugs. An extra £3 million was recently made available to boards and has been made recurrent, in recognition of the exceptional cost of new, effective but highly expensive drug therapies including anti-TNF drugs. Following the Secretary of State's budget announcement on 11 December 2002, further funding will be made available when requirements have been agreed with service providers.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessments are being carried out to ascertain the effectiveness of anti-TNF drugs; and what the timetable is for anti-TNF drugs to be made more widely available. [86950]

Mr. Browne: All patients on drug treatments are regularly monitored and treatment regimens are reviewed to assess effectiveness and possible side effects. Further funding for acute services was announced in the Secretary of State's Budget statement on 11 December 2002. Some of this will be made available for patients who could benefit from anti-TNF and other specialist drugs treatments and also for the infrastructure required to support these treatments. I expect anti-TNF drugs therefore to become more widely available next year.

Asbestos Leakage (SEELB Building)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Health and Safety Executive statement of fact and the full report into asbestos leakage at the SEELB HQ building, Dundonald will be published. [86924]

Jane Kennedy: I have been advised that the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland (HSENI) will communicate the findings of its investigation directly to all parties involved in this incident before the end of December 2002.

Armed Forces (Welfare Support)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures the Government have introduced to support the families of (a) UDR and (b) RIR soldiers murdered by terrorists. [85683]

Dr. Moonie: I have been asked to reply.

There are a number of measures to support the families of members of the Ulster Defence Regiment (UDR) and the Royal Irish Regiment (R IRISH). Widows/widowers may be compensated under two schemes, the Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) and the War Pensions Scheme (WPS). In addition, the R IRISH have a unique, stand alone Regimental Welfare Organisation that is specifically structured to provide dedicated welfare support to its bereaved families. This welfare structure, which is directly funded by the Ministry of Defence, links into the various agencies that provide support to the rest of the Army.

Apart from Government support, there are two regimental benevolent funds in operation, the UDR Benevolent Fund and the R IRISH Benevolent Fund. The aims of both funds are the same, namely to provide help and support to the families and soldiers of the regiment, former soldiers and their families and the bereaved families of those soldiers or former soldiers killed as a result of terrorist action.

Rates

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will calculate what revenue would be generated in Northern Ireland by increasing (a) domestic regional rate, and (b) non-domestic regional rate by one percentage point above current levels. [86647]

Mr. Pearson: The revenue generated by increasing the domestic regional rate by 1 per cent. would be £1.2 million and the revenue generated by increasing the non-domestic regional rate by 1 per cent. would be £2.1 million.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87699]

Mr. Pearson: All targets set in the context of the 1998 CSR relate to responsibilities devolved to the Northern Ireland Executive in December 1999. The CSR targets were superseded from 2001–02 onwards by the Executive's Programme for Government which sets priorities, objectives and targets for the Northern Ireland departments.

Wind Farms

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the grid references are of the location of the landfall for the proposed offshore wind farm at Tunes Plateau; if Coleraine, Limavady, Londonderry and Moyle local authorities will be consulted on the proposed development of the wind farm; and if he will make a statement on the planning process for the proposed development. [87305]

Mr. Pearson: It is not possible to provide grid references of the location of any landfall for the Tunes Plateau offshore wind farm because a wide range of potential options are still being considered from an engineering and environmental perspective. No decision on any potential landfall can be made until completion of the following studies:

NIE's wind farm connection feasibility studies;

Ornithology and ecology studies (covering both marine and onshore elements);

Geotechnical and geophysical studies (covering both marine and onshore elements);

Marine and onshore archaeology studies; and Coastal processes and seabed assessments.

Coleraine, Limavady, Londonderry and Moyle councils were fully consulted during completion of the scope for the environmental impact assessment and will continue to be consulted as further information about the impact of this project comes to light.

Any developments relating to wind farms which require planning permission will be processed in accordance with current planning procedures; and policies in relation to public advertisement, neighbour notification and council consultation will apply. To date the Department of the Environment has not received such an application.

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the source and amount of grants provided to the proposed offshore wind farm development at Tunes Plateau; and what the expected long-term savings to the electricity consumer in Northern Ireland through the proposed development of a wind farm at Tunes Plateau will be. [87288]

Mr. Pearson: A private sector consortium comprising B9 Energy, Renewable Energy Systems and PowerGen are carrying out, at their own expense, extensive feasibility studies into the possible development of an offshore wind farm at Tunes Plateau. The project has pre-qualified with the Department of Trade and Industry to be considered for assistance from the UK offshore wind Capital Grant Scheme to ensure that grant aid could be provided from that fund if the development proceeds and it proves necessary.

The precise nature and size of any offshore wind farm will emerge following the conclusion of the feasibility assessment that is currently ongoing. Until the completion of the feasibility assessment no precise calculations can be made about the volume of electricity that might be generated from the project. Calculations of long-term savings in electricity costs could only be made in the context of certainty regarding the final design of, and output from, the project and taking into account factors such as the costs of grid connection, the alternative costs of electricity from other sources and fossil fuel prices (which are subject to fluctuation).

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the (a) life span, (b) financial costs and (c) environmental impact of decommissioning offshore wind farm sites. [87289]

Mr. Pearson: The design life of offshore wind turbines and infrastructure assets is typically considered to be 20 to 25 years.

Capital costs for offshore wind farms are of the order of £1,000,000/megawatt (MW) installed. This will vary considerably from site to site according to the foundation designs employed, the depth of water at the site and other aspects of the nature of the project site. The report, "Assessment of Offshore Wind Energy Resources", commissioned jointly by the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment and the Department of Public Enterprise in the Republic of Ireland, estimated that costs per installed megawatt (MW) (excluding decommissioning) for typical projects around the island of Ireland ranged from £840,000 to £1,080,000.

There has not yet been an off-shore wind farm decommissioned anywhere in the world, it is not therefore possible to accurately determine the costs of decommissioning.

The environmental impact of decommissioning an offshore wind farm is very site-specific and directly related to the foundation options employed during construction.

However the actual environmental impacts of offshore wind farms including impacts associated with decommissioning have been assessed in the report "An Assessment of the Environmental Effects of Offshore Wind Farms" completed by the Environmental Technology Support Unit in 2000 for Metoc (ETSU/W35/00543/RP, 2000).

TREASURY

Customs and Excise (Agency Agreements)

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a list of the agency agreements in place between HM Customs and private companies. [83450]

John Healey: HM Customs and Excise hold and maintain a list of agency agreements with Intellectual Property Right holders to fulfil their obligations under EC Regulation 3295/94 as amended by EC Regulation 241/1999.

The disclosure of this information would prejudice the enforcement operations of HM Customs and Excise in tackling groups and organisations committed to counterfeit, pirating or patent infringing activities. Exemptions 4 and 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information apply.

Annuities

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change his policy on annuities; and what plans he has to give people buying annuities more (a) choice and (b) flexibility. [86943]

Ruth Kelly: As promised in the pre-Budget report, the Inland Revenue consultation document on simplification of the taxation of pensions published today, alongside the pensions Green Paper, contains proposals to expand choice and flexibility in the annuities market.

Congestion Charging

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 26 November, reference 81821, what information he estimates is necessary in order to make an estimate of the cost. [84489]

John Healey [holding answer 2 December 2002]: To estimate the cost of tax relief information would be needed about the amount of the user charges incurred for each year which qualified for tax relief and about the tax position of those claiming relief.

Inflation Target

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends to review the Monetary Policy Committee's inflation target. [86674]

Mr. Boateng: Under the Bank of England Act 1998, the Treasury is required to specify the inflation target each year. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer last reviewed the remit for the Monetary Policy Committee at the time of the Budget in April.

Inland Revenue (Large Business Office)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the revenue collected by the Large Business Office in each of the last five fiscal years was (a) tax, (b) interest and (c) penalties; and if he will make a statement. [87210]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue does not keep a separate record of the total revenue attributable to taxpayers whose affairs are handled by the Large Business Office.

National Insurance Records

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 27 November, Official Report, column 315W, on CR74, why (a) 3.5 million national insurance records were no longer needed, and (b) 1.3 million records required further checking; and how long the 3.5 million national insurance records that were no longer needed were in circulation after the date on which they should have been withdrawn. [86706]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue keeps more than one record for a customer when the circumstances warrant it, but processes are in place to check and keep records updated as part of normal customer service. National insurance records were not affected by CR74. The exercise simply brought together the information on separate tax records relating to individual taxpayers and created a single tax record for them. As a result, a total of 3.5 million records were no longer needed. 1.3 million records require further checking to confirm that the correct National Insurance Number is being used. It is not possible, except at disproportionate cost, to find out how long records existed before being brought together as part of CR74.

Savings Directive

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 12 December 2002 (Ref. 87201), if he will give the reasons why Bermuda was not included in the list of dependent or associated territories agreed at the Feira European Council for the purposes of the Savings Directive. [87853]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 12 December 2002, Official Report, column 475W).

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87703]

Mr. Boateng: The Department publishes progress against all its outstanding PSA targets in its departmental report (Cm 5425 June 2002) and autumn performance report (Cm 5665 Dec 2002) published after the announcement of the Spending Review.

Tax Credits (Leigh)

Andy Burnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people will be eligible to claim (a) child tax credit and (b) working tax credit in the Leigh constituency; and what he estimates the total annual financial budget will be to Leigh of each of these measures. [87243]

Dawn Primarolo: Nine out of 10 families with children will be eligible for the child tax credit, to be introduced in April 2003.

Estimates of the number of families with children expected to benefit from (a) the child tax credit and (b) working tax credit by Government Office Region are shown in the table below.

Thousands

Government Office Region	Number of families expected to benefit from the child tax credit	Number of families expected to benefit from the working tax credit
North East	290	70
North West and Merseyside	750	210
Yorkshire and the Humber	540	150
East Midlands	380	90
West Midlands	500	130
Eastern	460	90
London	700	130
South East	670	140
South West	470	130

Thousands

Government Office Region	Number of families expected to benefit from the child tax credit	Number of families expected to benefit from the working tax credit
Wales	320	80
Scotland	430	90
Northern Ireland	220	50
Total	5,750	1,350

Thalidomide

Ross Cranston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many beneficiaries of the Thalidomide Trust live in (a) West Midlands and (b) the Dudley MBC. [87375]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Animal Rights Activists

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what steps the Government have taken to protect medical research companies against the actions of animal rights activists. [87984]

Ms Hewitt: The Government are determined that animal rights extremists will not prevent companies carrying out legitimate business in the UK and that these companies will be protected from intimidation and harassment. In recognition of the exceptional circumstances Huntingdon Life Sciences Group plc have found themselves in, the DTI has previously agreed to provide banking facilities for Huntingdon Life Sciences Group plc. The DTI is now extending its support to facilitate the provision of insurance services to Huntingdon Life Sciences Group plc on a worldwide basis. Both these actions have been taken to secure Huntingdon Life Sciences Group plc from the harm caused by the criminal intimidation and assault being directed at its employees, including their families and friends, and also those of its suppliers, customers and other companies. Huntingdon Life Sciences Group plc is a world-leading provider in the highly regulated area of essential research, development and toxicological testing services for the pharmaceutical, biotechnology and chemical industries. Any commercial damage to these industries or their supporting services, like Huntingdon Life Sciences, would have a very serious impact on UK scientific and medical research. The DTI is not using commercial insurance companies or brokers at this time and is providing insurance through its own resources.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact of the New Electricity Trading Arrangements on the CHP sector. [86198]

Mr. Wilson: The most recent data on CHP output can be found in the DTI and National Statistics Publication, the "2002 Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics". This states that 'good quality' CHP electricity output in 2001 had declined by 17 per cent. on the level recorded in 2000 and that the annual growth rate of installed capacity slowed to about 0.8 per cent.

May I also refer my hon. Friend to the Government's response of 4 April 2002 to the consultation on NETA and smaller generators and to Ofgem's review of the first year of NETA, where the impact of NETA on CHP is discussed in the chapter concerning smaller generators.

I am also concerned about the impact on manufacturing investments to the energy sector. The forthcoming Energy White Paper will give the opportunity to discuss these issues in more depth.

Consumer Credit Act

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the annual cost was in England and Wales of trading standards activity on consumer credit and finance and the enforcement of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 in each year since 1997. [86971]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The trading standards activities of local authorities are funded through the revenue support grant, and the allocation of resources to individual trading standards functions is a matter for each local authority to determine. It is therefore not possible to state the annual cost in England and Wales of trading standards activity on consumer credit and finance and the enforcement of the Consumer Credit Act.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what the annual costs of the OFT were in relation to the implementation of its activities under the Consumer Credit Act 1974, in each year since 1997; [86973]

(2) what the annual income generated for the Office of Fair Trading was from licensing of organisations under the Consumer Credit Act 1974, in each year since 1997. [86972]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Office of Fair Trading's income from its licensing activities under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 for each of the last five financial years was:

1998–99: £4,088,375
1999–2000: £3,801,851
2000–01: £3,406,593
2001–02: £3,846,120

During the same period, the annual costs to the OFT of its functions under the Act were:

1997–98: £3,829,503
1998–99: £4,063,273
1999–2000: £4,128,732
2000–01: £4,565,000
2001–02: £5,379,415

Debt

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the annual costs to public funds were of (a) Citizens Advice Bureaux and (b) money advice centres, in relation to individuals in debt in (i) England and Wales and (ii) the UK in each year since 1997; what proportion of these costs relate to (A) consumer credit and finance and (B) creditor organisations licensed under the Consumer Credit Act 1974. [86974]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Individual Citizens Advice Bureaux (CABx) are not funded by Central Government. Each local CAB is a separate independent charity funded usually by local authorities, charitable trusts etc.

DTI funds both the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux (NACAB) and Citizens Advice Scotland (CAS). NACAB and CAS provide both focus and support for the work of the CAB Service in England, Wales and Scotland. NACAB and CAS also provides training services and IT support to CABx, and is responsible for setting the standards of membership for the service. DTI expects to provide NACAB with grant-in-aid funding of £17.1 million, and CAS with grant-in-aid funding of 2.8 million in this financial year.

In addition, £14.55 million is paid for money advice to individuals in debt in the UK.

DTI (jointly with Treasury, Scottish Executive and the Lord Chancellor's Department) provide £1.15 million to fund the National Debtline Pilot. Between 1 March and 10 December 2002, it has helped 18,403 clients. Of these, 90.9 per cent. of calls were from England and Wales, with the remainder being from Scotland and Northern Ireland;

The Legal Services Commission (LSC) spent £9.9 million in 2001-02 on payments to not-for-profit organisations providing money advice in England and Wales; and

The Scottish Executive are supplying £3 million per annum to provision front line specialist money advice across Scotland. They are also providing an additional £500,000 per annum for provision of central support for the sector (i.e. training/ secondary advice/common standards etc).

Due to the way in which the figures are collected, it is impossible to give a meaningful breakdown of what proportion of funding is used in relation to consumer credit and finance, and creditor organisations licensed under the Consumer Credit Act 1974.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what action the Government is taking outside the UN to ascertain information regarding the alleged breaches of the OECD guidelines on multinational enterprises by UK companies referred to in the UN Panel of Experts' report on resource exploitation in the DRC; [85630]

(2) what the response was from the UN to the Government's request for information from the UN Panel of Experts on the illegal exploitation of natural resources of the DRC regarding the alleged breach of OECD guidelines for multinational enterprises committed by UK companies; [85748]

(3) what information has been requested by the Government from the UN Panel of Experts of resource exploitation in the DRC regarding the alleged breach of OECD guidelines by United Kingdom companies; and on which (a) individuals and (b) companies information has been requested; [85749]

(4) when the Government first requested information from the UN Panel of Experts on the illegal exploitation of natural resources of the DRC regarding alleged breaches of the OECD guidelines for multinational enterprises committed by United Kingdom companies as listed in Annex III of their report; and to whom this request was made. [85747]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We are seeking more information from the UN panel before considering what action we might want to take.

The UK, along with other members of the Security Council, has asked for more information on the claims made in the Panel's latest report. We have asked specifically for information on the allegations made against UK companies and nationals. We have yet to receive this material.

The current Panel's mandate expired when it submitted its last report (18 October 2002). There is currently no mechanism or process in place to take forward the Panel's work. We are pressing, through discussions at the UN, for a speedy resolution to this administrative problem.

We have asked for details of the basis for designating the 12 British companies appearing in Annex III. Annex III is a list of all the entities the Panel considers to be in breach of OECD guidelines. None of these entities are individuals.

The United Kingdom Mission to the United Nations requested additional information from the UN Panel of Experts about companies allegedly in breach of OECD guidelines in Security Council consultations on 24 October 2002.

DRAX Power Station

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason Ofgem arranged for National Grid Transco to purchase 25 per cent. of the output of the DRAX power station; whether (a) she and (b) her officials were consulted about these arrangements; and if she will make a statement. [87109]

Mr. Wilson: I understand that as part of its contingency planning associated with the financial difficulties experienced by TXU Energy, NGC assessed the risk to security of supply in the very short term of a significant volume of generation becoming unavailable to the electricity system.

On this occasion, NGC considered that it was appropriate to enter into contractual arrangements to ensure that there was sufficient contingency reserve. I understand that NGC has explained its actions at its recent Operational Forum for market participants.

Steel Industry (Future Aircraft Carrier)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the ability of the UK steel industry to meet the demands of the future aircraft carrier project. [87122]

Alan Johnson: The UK steel industry produces a range of products for use in marine applications, including naval vessels. However the exact specification of the steel required for the future aircraft carrier project is not known at present. This will be a matter for the prime contractor, when appointed.

Care Homes

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry from when the regulations introducing a VAT concession for commercially-provided home care will apply. [86681]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

Commercially provided care for people in residential and nursing homes has been exempt from VAT since the introduction of the tax in 1973. The Government have no plans to change this exemption.

Newspaper Distribution

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to receive the Office of Fair Trading review of the Code of Practice on Newspaper Distribution. [86592]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Office of Fair Trading published its review of the Code of Practice on newspaper distribution on 12 December. Its provisional recommendation, that selling-on should be fully liberalised, is now open to a further period of public consultation until 14 March 2003.

Official Travel

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total expenditure of (a) his Department and (b) its agencies was on official travel in 2001–02. [84793]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 3 December 2002]: Since 1999, the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Details of travel undertaken during the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 was published on 24 July 2002, Official Report, column 75W. The cost of Ministers' visits overseas for 2002–03 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code' and 'Travel by Ministers', copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total budget of (a) her Department and (b) its agencies is for official travel in 2002–03. [84939]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 3 December 2002]: Since 1999, the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Details of travel undertaken during the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 was published on 24 July 2002, Official Report, column 75W. The cost of Ministers' visits overseas for 2002–03 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code' and 'Travel by Ministers', copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Post Office Card Accounts

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the PIN numbers to be used by post office cards will be on a number pad on the counter; and how partially sighted and blind people will be able to use the new system. [86562]

Mr. Timms: The matters raised by this question fall within the day to day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to promote the use of post office card accounts; and when she expects information on the accounts to be available in post offices. [87404]

Mr. Timms: The post office card account is one of a range of accounts which people will be able, from next year, to receive benefit payments into. Our aim is that people should be able to choose the option which suits them best. Information about all the options is being supplied to customers by the Department for Work and Pensions and the Inland Revenue. When it is their turn to change the method of benefit and pension payments, the Government will be writing to customers with information which clearly sets out their account options and enables them to freely choose the account that is right for them. The migration programme will last two years beginning in 2003.

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what banks and building societies have registered as Post Office banking partners; and what other banks are expected to become partners by April 2003. [87610]

Mr. Timms: All the major banks and the Nationwide Building Society have signed contracts with Post Office Ltd. to make their own basic bank accounts accessible at post offices. The Post Office already provides banking services on behalf of Girobank/Alliance and Leicester, Barclays, Lloyds TSB, the Co-operative Bank and the Internet banks smile and cahoot. This (paper based) service enables customers of these banks to make deposits and cash cheques at post offices free of charge.

Postcodes

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new postcode areas have been introduced in each decade since 1972. [87341]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The first postcodes were introduced on a trial basis in Norwich in 1959. The Postcode Address File (PAF) owned by Royal Mail contains over 27 million addresses with over 1.7 million postcodes.

There are currently 124 postcode areas, 3,000 postcode districts and 9,700 postcode sectors.

In 1972 there were 120 postcode areas. Since that time Jersey, Guernsey and the Isle of Man have been postcoded (JE, GY and IM) respectively. The IM and GY postcodes date from 1993 and the JE ones from 1994. The only other new postcode area to be added since 1972 was HS for the Hebrides which was introduced in 1995 to overcome specific quality of service problems.

Postcomm

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has made to Postcomm on their recent proposals. [87522]

Mr. Timms: The Government has a clear interest as the shareholder in Royal Mail Group. The Department therefore made a response to Postcomm's recent consultation document on the proposal for a second price control. The response concerned the financial package that the Government is putting in place to enable the mails business to implement its renewal plan.

Recruitment Consultants

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria she uses to assess the performance of the recruitment consultants employed by her Department. [86200]

Ms Hewitt: Recruitment consultants are appointed, through a competitive tendering process, for all my Department's major external recruitment campaigns. This enables the Department to choose the most appropriate contractor for each specific situation. A call-off arrangement, negotiated by Cabinet Office, exists for recruitment consultants who specialise in appointments into the Senior Civil Service.

The specification for the recruitment services to be provided is announced at an early stage, which provides a basis for assessing the performance of the contractor, and regular project meetings enable problems to be identified and solutions found. Performance is also assessed at the end of each campaign, and any lessons learned are carried forward to the next.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets have been set for regional development agencies in respect of encouraging innovation. [87839]

Alan Johnson: Targets for each Regional Development Agency (RDA) in respect of encouraging innovation are set through the corporate planning process. Targets set for 2002–03 and 2003–04 are available in the Libraries of the House.

Renewable Energy

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support since 1997 her Department has provided to facilitate the development of (a) geothermal, (b) wave, (c) tidal and (d) solar energy technologies. [84730]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 3 December 2002]: The table provides data on the financial support given by the Department to the technologies specified since 1997. No support is given, at present, to the development of geothermal technologies; however, funding is available for grid-connected early pre-commercial wave and tidal stream projects and innovative solar photovoltaic schemes. This is, in addition, to the funding that is also available under my Department's New and Renewable Energy Programme, which calls for proposals for research and development projects that align with the long-term technology strategies developed in partnership with industry, academia and other key stakeholders.

Royal Mail

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the accumulated surpluses of Royal Mail Holdings were and how much were paid (a) in and (b) out of the surplus in each year since its formation. [86451]

Ms Hewitt: The company that is now known as Royal Mail Holdings plc was incorporated on 20 September 2000. It acquired all the shares in what was then Consignia plc on 26 March 2001. Movements in the accumulated surpluses during financial periods since that date are shown in the table.

	Reduction in surplus (reserves)	Accumulated surpluses (reserves)
	953
	478
29 September 2002		1,868

Note:
The reductions in the accumulated surpluses were due to exceptional items.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Class Sizes

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidelines her Department has laid down for class sizes in practical subjects. [87150]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My Department's safe practice guidance for practical subjects does not set down maximum pupil numbers. Sizes of practical groups and pupil teacher ratios are matters for local education authorities and schools. They are required to assess risks to health and safety and should take account of potential hazards; the ages and abilities and special educational needs of the pupils; and relevant safety regulations in relation to the accommodation, equipment and activities.

Construction Industry Training Board

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the judgment by Mr.Justice Keith on 23rd November 2001 in respect of the future of the construction industry training board levy. [86532]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The judgment by Mr Justice Keith has shown clearly that the definition of "Contractors' Plant" as defined in the Industrial Training (Construction Board) Order of 1964 is clear and unambiguous and that the Construction Industry Training Board had acted in accordance with the provisions of the legislation.

Sangatte

Mr. Portillo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how far the education of children from Sangatte admitted to the UK under special arrangements will be the responsibility of local education authorities; what estimate he has made of the cost; and how local education authorities will be compensated by central government. [87511]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Local education authorities will be responsible for the education of children from Sangatte as they would for any other child. They have a legal duty to ensure that education is available for all children of compulsory school age in their area, irrespective of a child's immigration status or rights of residence.

No estimate has been made of the cost, but the number of children is likely to be small, so local education authorities will be able to meet the cost of educating these children from their current budgets. Furthermore, as was announced on 5 December, there is to be an increase in education funding for the next financial year.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the (a) secondary modern schools and (b) other non-selective schools in local education authority areas where there are grammar schools which have been awarded (i) beacon school status and (ii) specialist school status since 1 May 1997. [87832]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department plans to take to improve awareness of HIV and the need for better sexual health practices among younger people. [85671]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Teaching about safer sex remains one of the Government's key strategies for reducing the incidence of HIV/AIDS and sexually transmitted infections (STIs). Strategies for teaching about HIV/AIDS are covered by our Sex and Relationship Education Guidance which was sent to all schools in July 2000. These include helping pupils to clarify their knowledge and enabling them to become effective users of services that help prevent and treat STIs and HIV.

A report earlier this year by the Office for Standards in Education recommended that coverage of HIV and AIDS in schools is enhanced. We have responded to the report by commissioning practical guidance for teachers on HIV and STIs.

Language Teaching

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when his Department will publish its policy on language teaching in primary schools. [87229]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The Department will shortly be publishing its National Language Strategy. The strategy will set out how we will drive forward our agenda, outlined in the 'Language learning' pamphlet published earlier this year, to reverse the cycle of underperformance and transform this country's capability in languages.

Specialist Subject Teachers

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures he is taking to support and develop the skills of teachers in specialist subjects. [82736]

Mr. Miliband: These skills are supported and developed through several funded programmes. The Key Stage 3 strategy is focused on developing the skills of teachers in the national curriculum core and foundation subjects in all secondary schools. Generally, higher education institutions and other providers, including some subject associations, are funded to run postgraduate professional programmes in a number of priority areas, including secondary core and foundation curriculum subjects and specialist teaching in Key Stages 1 and 2. In partnership with the Wellcome Trust we are creating a national network of science learning centres to support the professional development of science teachers and science technicians.

The Department's Continuing Professional Development Strategy also funds schemes that support the professional development of individual teachers in areas of their choice. The strategy includes: 500 bursaries, available to all teachers in their fourth and fifth years in the profession; Best Practice Research Scholarships of up to £2,500 a year for around 1,000 teachers who submit proposals of appropriate quality; six-week sabbaticals for teachers with more than five years experience in challenging schools; a pilot Early Professional Development scheme—in 12 LEAs—which offers up to £3,000 for professional development to teachers during their second and third years in the profession. Teachers can, and often do, choose to spend their bursaries and scholarships on activities that develop their subject specialist knowledge and skills.

We will be producing a consultation paper in the New Year on strengthening support for subject specialism.

Spending Statistics

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average spending is on each child in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) England and (ii) Devon. [87312]

Mr. Miliband: The following table shows the latest available information:

Average net current expenditure (after recharges) per pupil in maintained primary and secondary schools

LEA/area name	Primary	Secondary
Devon	2,300	2,930
England	2,440	3,060

Standards Fund

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the elements of the standards fund for the current financial year, showing the total (a) spent and (b) budgeted under each heading. [87193]

Mr. Miliband: Budgets for each of the Standards Fund grants for 2002–2003 are shown in the following table. Information about the total spent for each grant is not available.

TEC Assets

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the disposition of TEC assets. [87115]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department's accounts have now been audited by the NAO and are due to be laid before the House in January 2003.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Adoption

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children were allowed into the United Kingdom from overseas countries for adoption by United Kingdom residents during the last 12 months, broken down by country. [86823]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children admitted to the United Kingdom from overseas countries for adoption is not currently available.

The most up to date information that is available covers the number of children given indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom on the basis of adoption. This number excludes those children given limited leave to remain and who are subsequently adopted through the UK courts, becoming British citizens on the date that the final adoption order is made.

A total of around 25 adopted children were given indefinite leave to remain in 2001. The nationalities of the children were:

Australia
Brazil
Canada
Cyprus
Ghana
Guatemala
India
Malawi
Mexico
Morocco
Pakistan
Philippines
St. Vincent and the Grenadines
South Africa
Thailand
Turkey
United States of America
Yemen
Zambia
Zimbabwe

There were fewer than 10 cases for each nationality.

Animal Experiments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications made under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 were rejected in each year from 1991. [85842]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Our central database only holds the requested information for the last two years. This shows that two applications were formally refused, both in 2001. One was for a project licence and the other for a personal licence. Over the same period 115 project licence applications, 54 personal licence applications and one application for a certificate of designation have so far been recorded as not proceeded with.

A feature of the regulatory regime under the 1986 Act is the discussion that often takes place at an early stage between applicants (or prospective applicants) and the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate. This means that proposals unlikely to meet the Act's stringent requirements are revised or withdrawn before formal refusal becomes necessary.

Cannabis

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the survey conducted by the Schools Health Education Unit on cannabis use by younger teenagers. [85101]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The survey suggests many 14 to 15-year-olds thought cannabis was 'safe' to use. Most young people are aware of the enormous dangers involved in using Class A drugs but they often overlook the longer-term damage to health caused by smoking cannabis, particularly when it is smoked on a regular basis. We will be making sure that the harm it causes is communicated—young people need to know the dangers that all drugs cause.

This is one of the reasons why reducing the frequent use of any illicit drug has been included within the updated drug strategy target for young people. Government Departments are now looking at how best to convince young people about the health risk associated with cannabis use.

The Department for Education and Skills will be revising its guidance to schools on the delivery of drug education and the revised guidance will be available in September 2003. We will also be working with youth media and health organisations to make sure the health risks associated with smoking cannabis are much more widely understood.

Correspondence

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 7 November, Official Report, columns 824–25W, when he will write to the hon. Member for Reading, East. [87216]

Beverley Hughes: A letter was sent on 16 December 2002.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 28 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mohammad Delowar Selinan. [87656]

Mr. Blunkett: I wrote to my right hon Friend on 16 December 2002.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 24 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Nisar Ahmed. [86656]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 17 December 2002.

Criminal Records Bureau

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the staffing levels are at the Criminal Records Bureau. [86721]

Hilary Benn: There are 1,158 staff employed in the Criminal Records Bureau at its Liverpool and Darwen sites, comprising staff employed by the agency, Capita and sub-contractors.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications to the Criminal Records Bureau from addresses in postcode areas CO1, CO2, CO3 and CO4 are awaiting processing; what is the average time the applications have been delayed; and if he will make a statement. [86058]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 9 December 2002]: As at 9 December, there are 562 Disclosure applications awaiting processing from applicants who live in postcode areas C01, C02, CO3 and C04. The average delay is estimated to be eight weeks, although this includes a significant number of applications which have been returned to the applicant for more information which is still awaited. On average, recent correctly completed applications are taking five weeks to process.

Delays in the Disclosure process continue to be a subject of some concern. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's independent review team are taking a fundamental look at all aspects of the Criminal Records Bureau's (CRB's) operation with a view to identifying medium to long term improvements. They will report to the Home Secretary shortly.

The CRB has already implemented a range of improvements to processes and working practices and the intensive focus on improvements is already yielding results. Over the last two weeks the CRB has been averaging around 43,500 Disclosures per week, which is double the weekly output issued by the police under the previous arrangements. Since 11 March the CRB has received 1,023,000 applications and issued over 755,000 Disclosures.

Smuggling

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there have been (a) in Nottinghamshire and (b) in the United Kingdom for the smuggling of (i) heroin, (ii) cigarettes and (iii) cannabis, in each of the last three years. [82938]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information requested is not available in the form requested. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise figures show that the number of persons sentenced for all offences of smuggling tobacco within the United Kingdom was 884 in 2000–01 and 431 in 2001–02. Figures are not available on a comparative basis for such offences before 2000–01, and there are no figures available by county or police force area.

Such information as is currently available on drug 'trafficking' offences in Nottinghamshire and Great Britain is given in the table. Drug 'trafficking' offences normally include the illicit production of drugs and the illicit cultivation of cannabis plants, but these are outside the definition of smuggling and have been excluded.

Table: Persons convicted of 'trafficking' offences involving heroin and cannabis, Nottinghamshire and Great Britain, 1998–2000

	Nottinghamshire			Great Britain[1]

Ethnic Minority Women's Voluntary Organisations

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of ethnic minority women's voluntary organisations in the UK; and how many of these have benefited from regeneration programmes such as health action zones. [86497]

Beverley Hughes: Government statistics are not kept on the number of ethnic minority women's voluntary organisations in the United Kingdom. However the Council for Ethnic Minority Voluntary Organisations (CEMVO), an umbrella organisation funded by the Home Office to provide services to the black and minority ethnic (BME) voluntary and community sector had 444 BME women's organisations run by women on their database as of 9 December 2002.

Information for the number of ethnic minority women's voluntary organisations which have benefited from Health Action Zones or other regeneration programmes is not available centrally. Many programmes do however support marginalised groups and have strategies in place to increase their participation. In 2001 for instance, 560 (36 per cent.) of the 1,555 community champions funded by the Community Champions Fund were from BME communities, a success attributable to strategies such as simple application form and positive role models.

The voluntary and community sector (VCS) makes a vital contribution to tackling deprivation and promoting community cohesion. We are working across Government to further increase our support for the sector. Race equality has been placed in the mainstream of all areas of neighbourhood renewal and regeneration. We are also raising awareness of the Compact, the framework for effective partnership working between Government and the VCS, and are developing a more robust evidence base for marginalised sectors such as BME women's groups so that all parts of Government can better respond to the VCS's requirements.

Extradition Applications (France)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications have been received from France for extradition of persons to face terrorist charges, in each of the last 5 years; when each application was received; what progress has been made; what the reasons are for delay in process; and if he will make a statement. [85718]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 9 December 2002]: In the past five years, France has made requests for the extradition of three persons accused of charges relating to terrorist activity.

One request made in March 1996 led to the fugitive's surrender to France in March 1998.

In another, a request made in April 2001 has just completed its judicial stages. The fugitive now has a statutory opportunity to make representations to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary as to why his surrender should not take place. Those representations are awaited.

In the remaining case, there are two outstanding requests. The first covers three separate requisitions made in November and December 1995 and in February 1996. Following lengthy proceedings, a decision in October 2001 to order surrender was quashed in June 2002 by the courts. We are awaiting a response from French authorities on matters raised by the judgment in order that the case may be reviewed. A further request for extradition, involving additional charges, was made in the same case in October 2001. That matter is still before the courts.

A Bill to streamline and modernise current extradition procedures is now before parliament.

Immigration Officers (Waterloo Station)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether immigration officers based at Waterloo station will be permitted to continue to work at Waterloo in the event that they decline to work in France or Belgium. [86860]

Officers of all grades will continue to be deployed at Waterloo International while there is a continuing business and operational need.

There will be opportunities for staff who are not willing to work overseas in France or Belgium to transfer to other locations.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the working month of immigration officers based at Waterloo station who undertake work in France and Belgium will be spent at either venue; and what extra allowances or salaries will be paid. [86861]

Beverley Hughes: Officers of all grades undertake juxtaposed immigration control duties on a voluntary basis. On average officers currently perform one such duty per week. In early 2003 local management at Waterloo will commence trials which will test a four night and a nine night package in France. These trials will last six months. We are unable to comment on the frequency that staff will be expected to carry out these duties until the results of these trials have been evaluated.

In addition to their salary, staff receive overtime payments for excess hours worked and a locally agreed subsistence allowance to cover additional out of pocket expenditure. The Department meets hotel costs.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if immigration officers based at Waterloo station will be obliged to agree to undertake work in (a) France and (b) Belgium. [86862]

Beverley Hughes: Officers of all grades based at Waterloo undertake juxtaposed immigration control duties in France and Belgium on a voluntary basis. At present officers stay one night overseas.

In early 2003, local management at Waterloo will trial a range of options to determine a more efficient means of staffing juxtaposed controls in France and Belgium. A trawl seeking volunteers to take part in these trials will be published early in the new year. We will evaluate the trial after six months and do not rule out compelling staff to work in France and Belgium should there be insufficient volunteers.

Iraqi Asylum Seekers

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Iraqi asylum seekers he estimates had their applications refused during the 1997 to 2001 Parliament. [86908]

Beverley Hughes: There were 12,550 initial decisions on Iraqi asylum applications during the period 1 May 1997 and 31 May 2001. Of these 6,175 were refused. There are no reliable data available in this period for the number of Iraqis who subsequently appealed, and the decisions of those appeals.

Information on asylum applications and initial decisions is published quarterly. The next publication will cover the period October to December 2002, and will be available from 28 February 2003 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1 .html.

Wormwood Scrubs (Max Glatt Unit)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the Max Glatt Unit at Wormwood Scrubs prison in increasing health standards. [87442]

Hilary Benn: There has been no research into the effectiveness of the Matt Glatt Unit in increasing health standards.

Passports (Children in Care)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports were issued to children in (a) the care of UK local authorities and (b) long-term foster care during each of the last five years. [87123]

Beverley Hughes: This information is not held by the United Kingdom Passport Service.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans to review procedures for issuing passports to children in long-term foster care with birth parents who are not contactable. [87125]

Beverley Hughes: No. The UK Passport Service requirements that parental consent is given before a passport is issued to a child and that evidence of an appropriate court order be produced before accepting consent form a local authority social services department, are based on sound principles and are correct in law. It would be wrong for the UK Passport Service to attempt to decide whether or to whom parental rights have transferred in these circumstances; these are matters for the courts. The UK Passport Service is drawing up a guidance note for social services departments to clarify requirements for passport applications.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on procedures used to issue passports to children in long-term foster care; and what assessment has been made of the extent of delays in the process. [87218]

Beverley Hughes: British passports are issued to children only when parental consent is given. If an application for a child's passport is made by anyone other than the child's parents, the United Kingdom Passport Service (UKPS) must establish either that the applicant has parental rights or that a person with parental rights has given consent. In most cases where a child is in foster care parental rights are not transferred to the foster parent. The UKPS therefore advises the local authority to make the application in such circumstances and give details of the care order or other court order which deals with the issue of parental rights. Applications in which this information is provided are not delayed.

Prison Population

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the need to revise (a) short-term and (b) long-term predictions of growth in the prison population in light of the Criminal Justice Bill; upon what information such an assessment was made; what action his Department intends to take to meet changes in the growth of the prison population; and if he will make a statement. [84248]

Hilary Benn: We have not made final decisions about implementation of the measures in the Criminal Justice Bill, but on the basis of the modelling which has been undertaken to estimate the impact of the sentencing reforms and the cost of the Bill, we do not expect them to generate significant increases in the prison population. On current assumptions, the impact on the prison population of implementing the sentencing reforms would be broadly flat with a small reduction in places in late 2004 and early 2005, followed by a modest increase of up to 1,000 places between mid-2006 and early 2009, levelling out once the reforms have bedded in.

The Review of Correctional Services is addressing a wide range of questions regarding effectiveness and value for money and is developing a strategy for managing prison population pressures and containing its future growth. The impact of proposals in the Criminal Justice Bill are being considered in the context of the review. The prison population projections will be revised when firm implementation dates for new policy initiatives have been set. The prison service will then be in a position to work up plans for delivering the capacity needed to meet the revised projections.

Prison Visits

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has concluded his review of the guidance PSO 440, relating to visits by close relatives to prisoners; and if he will make a statement. [86859]

Hilary Benn: It is assumed that the hon. member is referring to Prison Service Order (PSO) 4400 and not 440 as set out in the question. The Prison Service is reviewing its child protection measures as set out in PSO 4400 as part of an overall long-term review of the management of dangerous offenders. A new Prison Service Instruction on public protection is likely to be complete in late summer 2003. There are no plans to abandon the policy disallowing visits to child sex offenders by children other than close relatives.

Prisoner Status

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if UK citizens, regardless of domicile within the UK, have the same status and rights when held in prisons located in England; [83581]

(2) what the status is of Scottish domicile prisoners held in prisons in England. [83582]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 27 November 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 28 November 2002, Official Report, column 428W.

Prisoners (Hospital Treatment)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison inmates have been taken to (a) Chorley Hospital and (b) Preston Hospital for treatment in the last 12 months. [87026]

Hilary Benn: The information is not held centrally and I will therefore write to my hon. Friend.

Race Discrimination

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many race discrimination cases against the Home Office have been received in the last three years. [86722]

Beverley Hughes: Details of race discrimination claims brought against the Home Office are not maintained centrally. However, the Treasury Solicitor's Department maintains a record of claims against the Home Office in which it is involved. It is not likely that there is a significant number of such cases in which the Treasury Solicitor's Department is not involved, and therefore the statistics from that office represent the most accurate estimate of claims against the Home Office. The table shows the number of race discrimination cases brought against the Home Office, including Her Majesty's Prison Service and the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, in the last three years, in which there was Treasury Solicitor's Department involvement:

Year	Number of race discrimination cases
2000	38
2001	28
2002[1]	27

[1] Up to and including 10 December 2002

Marsham Street Building (Redundant Concrete)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration was given to requiring redundant concrete from the former Department of Environment building in Marsham Street to be transported to Dagenham by water. [85843]

Beverley Hughes: Arrangements for removal of redundant concrete from the former Department of Environment building in Marsham Street are the responsibility of the contractor, Annes Gate Property Plc (AGP), dealing with the demolition and then, on this site, construction of the new Home Office headquarters building. AGP, whose arrangements were approved under the planning permission given by Westminster city council, have commented that the current waste disposal routing via the road network, instead of by barge, is more environmentally compatible. The waste is loaded into the transport vehicles once only and is then transported to the recycling centre approximately six miles from the site. This procedure is much less complicated and involves much less loading and re-loading of waste than transportation by water. Moreover, currently there are no recycling centres with the capacity that AGP require situated along the river.

Community Cohesion

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to reduce the extent of segregation between richer and poorer communities within UK cities. [87007]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Office plays a key role in the delivery of the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy. One of the key long term aims of the strategy is to narrow the gap between the most deprived areas and the rest of the country. The Home Office intends to meet this aim through the activities and programmes it is putting in place to meet its own floor target to:

> "reduce crime and the fear of crime; improve performance overall, including by reducing the gap between the highest Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership areas and the best comparable areas; and reduce:
> —vehicle crime by 30 per cent from 1998–99 to 2004
> —domestic burglary by 25 per cent from 1998–99 to 2005
> —robbery in the 10 Street Crime Initiative areas by 14 per cent from 1999–2000 to 2005; and maintain that level".

The Community Cohesion Unit (CCU) and Race Equality Unit in the Home Office work closely with the Neighbourhood Renewal Unit (NRU) and the Urban Policy Unit on community cohesion and faith issues. For example, the CCU and NRU are jointly funding a two year Community Cohesion Pathfinders programme launched by myself in October. The programme will target 15 local authority areas—providing funding for the local authority, voluntary and community sector and (through the community champions scheme) for individuals in the locality. Bids are due in January.

The Home Office is developing an action plan to put in place recommendations made in a Social Exclusion Unit report on ex-offenders published in July.

Visa Regime (Slovakia)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to lift the visa requirement for visitors from Slovakia in advance of EU accession. [87315]

Beverley Hughes: Visa regimes are maintained only where they contribute to effective immigration control. The visa regime has proved effective in reducing the numbers of inadmissible passengers travelling to the UK from Slovakia. Following Slovakia's accession to the EU in 2004, all categories of Slovak nationals will enjoy rights of free movement and will not require a visa to come to the UK. In the meantime, the visa regime on Slovak nationals, as with all visa regimes, will be kept under review and will be lifted when we consider that the threat to our immigration control is at an acceptable level.

Woodhill Prison

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding his Department provided to Woodhill Prison in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 1999–2000 to ensure prison health services meet the targets set jointly with Milton Keynes PCT in their health action plan. [86969]

Hilary Benn: Funding for health services was not separately identified within the overall budget allocated to Woodhill prison in the years in question.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Al-Qaeda

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on links between the Al-Qaeda terrorist group and representatives of the Iraqi regime. [87587]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Chaytor) on 10 December, 2002, Official Report, column 143. We believe that there are Al-Qaeda operatives in Iraq. We do not know their links to the Iraqi regime. Obviously in the circumstances it is difficult to establish this issue with clarity.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the (a) countries of origin and (b) background of the alleged Al-Qaeda terrorists who carried out the terrorist attacks on the USA on 11 September 2001. [87588]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The terrorists who carried out the 11 September attacks were from Egypt, Saudi Arabia, UAE and Lebanon. They were all male, ranged in ages from 20 to 33, and came from a variety of social backgrounds. Of the 19, the majority had links with Al-Qaeda. A senior Bin Laden associate claimed to have trained some of the hijackers in Afghanistan.

Arms Control and Disarmament Experts

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Arabic-speaking arms control and disarmament experts he has (a) on his staff and (b) on secondment to his Department. [87562]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There is one Arabic speaking official currently working in the arms control and disarmament field in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. He is not a secondee.

Border Guarantee Agreements

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what commitments the UK has made to the protection of the Belize state border; what level of co-operation there is between UK and local security forces; and what discussions have taken place with Belizian authorities regarding border protection. [87370]

Mr. MacShane: Our commitment to Belize is to consult internationally in the event of a threat to Belize's security and to play an appropriate part in any response. This has been the UK's position since the withdrawal of the British garrison from Belize in 1994. We have a close relationship with the Belize Defence Force. The Ministry of Defence maintains an important jungle training school in Belize. The Governments of Belize and Guatemala are working closely under the auspices of the Organisation of America States (OAS) both to settle their long-standing territorial dispute and to agree on measures to build confidence on the border. We strongly support the OAS process.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with which countries the UK has a border guarantee agreement; what proposals there are to extend these treaties; and what commitments the Government have made to the preservation of democracy in those countries. [87371]

Mr. Straw: 127 bilateral treaties have been identified which refer to boundaries or borders to which the United Kingdom is or has been a party, concluded with 30 separate bilateral partners. Any obligation to guarantee an international border could only be determined by reference to each individual treaty.

We are not aware of any impending treaties containing this provision.

The United Kingdom has an historical and abiding interest in the maintenance of internationally-recognised and agreed borders, and is committed to the promotion of democracy and international stability.

EU Legislation

Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many legislative measures have been enacted in the UK to implement European Union legislation in each year since 1992. [86478]

Mr. MacShane: It would entail disproportionate cost to research and compile the number of legislative measures enacted each year in the UK directly implementing EC legislation.

The picture is complicated. Some EC measures are directly applicable in the member states. Others require incorporation into national law. This is sometimes done by legislation, but on other occasions by administrative means. In yet other situations, domestic legislation which is being amended for other purposes, may also incorporate changes to reflect EU directives. This makes it extremely difficult to determine how many legislative measures have been introduced in the UK as a result of EC measures.

EU General Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the outcome was of the General Affairs Council held on 9th December; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [86925]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I represented the UK at the General Affairs and External Relations Council in Brussels on December 9 and 10. Conclusions were agreed by consensus and no formal votes were taken.

General Affairs Session

Progress of work in other Council Configurations

The Council took stock of proceedings in other Council settings on the basis of the customary Presidency report. Regarding Justice and Home Affairs, particular attention was drawn to the Council's approval on 28 and 29 November of four negotiating mandates on readmission agreements with Albania, Algeria, China and Turkey and the EU Plan for Return to Afghanistan. The ECOFIN Council's approval of the 2003 draft budget was also highlighted.

Preparation for the European Council in Copenhagen

Enlargement

The Council discussed the way forward for concluding accession negotiations with the candidate countries at the Copenhagen European Council on 12 and 13 December. The Presidency presented the results of informal consultations with the candidate countries, which, aided by the Commission, had led to 'packages' being put together for each country. The Council decided that negotiating issues concerning the global amount (including the financial consequences of the agricultural quota proposals) as well as the question of direct income support in agriculture, be submitted to the European Council in Copenhagen, with a view to finalising the Union position. Solutions proposed by the Presidency on all other matters were accepted by the Council. Member states considered the Presidency's offer extremely generous and noted that the Council could go no further.

Use of languages in an enlarged Union

The Council noted a Presidency report on the use of languages in the Council, in the context of an enlarged Union. The Council agreed that the report would be forwarded to the European Council in Copenhagen and that work would continue on the basis of the conclusions set out by the Presidency in the report.

Annotated draft agenda of the European Council

The European Council will focus on two items: enlargement (the completion of the first stage of the enlargement process and the conclusion of negotiations with ten candidate countries; the adoption of an enhanced accession strategy for Bulgaria and Romania including revised roadmaps and increased pre-accession assistance; and the next steps concerning Turkey's candidature); and the functioning of the Council in view of enlargement (with a discussion on the initial report by the Danish Presidency on the Presidency of the Council).

Kaliningrad

The Council adopted conclusions on Kaliningrad, as a follow-up to the EU/ Russia Summit of 11 November 2002. The Council reiterated its commitment to adopting necessary steps to implement the new arrangement on the Facilitated Transit Document (FTD) and the Facilitated Rail Transit Document (FRTD) before the signature of the Accession Treaty. This will be decided and developed in close consultation with Lithuania. The EU stands ready to provide financial assistance to Lithuania to cover additional costs of implementing the measures.

Turkey

Ministers discussed the next steps of Turkey's candidature for membership over dinner, noting the new government's orientation and reform agenda, taking into account the Copenhagen criteria.

Annual operational programme of Council activities

The Council discussed its draft operation programme for 2003, submitted jointly by the forthcoming Greek and Italian presidencies and contributed to by the Commission and European Parliament. The programme comes as a result of measures decided at the Seville European Council to improving the efficient functioning of the Council. Member states broadly welcomed the new initiative which identifies the following priority areas: enlargement and reform; reinvigorating Europe's economy; social cohesion while promoting sustainable development; and developing the European areas of freedom, security and justice.

Inter-Institutional Agreement on better regulation

The Council noted the Presidency's report on the state of negotiations between the Council, Commission and European Parliament, on an Inter-Institutional Agreement to improve the quality of Community legislation. (Issues addressed include improved co-ordination of the legislative processes, better programming regarding co-decision, greater transparency and publicity of work and the exploration of alternative instruments such as co-regulation and self-regulation by economic operators, social partners, NGOs and European associations.)

So far, a broad common approach on the main parts of the Agreement has emerged. Work will continue at a technical level on other areas. The Greek presidency has been tasked with pursuing negotiations with a view to concluding the Agreement as soon as possible.

External Relations Session
Middle East

SG/HR Solana and Commissioner Patten briefed the Council on the current Middle East situation in advance of ministerial discussion at both the Copenhagen European Council and the 'Quartet' meeting in Washington on 20 December.

Western Balkans
Federal Republic of Yugoslavia

The Council welcomed recent progress on the draft Constitutional Charter and looked forward to early parliamentary approval. It registered concern at the outcome of the Serbian Presidential elections on 8 December and requested that the matter be resolved by all parties, constitutionally, transparently and democratically, safeguarding institutional stability and continued reform.

FRY/Kosovo

The Council welcomed the extension of UNMIK's direct administrative authority to Northern Mitrovica and commended the UN's Special Representative, Michael Steiner, and the Belgrade authorities for their efforts in achieving this encouraging result.

Arms sales

The Council reiterated its grave concern regarding arms sales that breached UN sanctions. It requested speedy and effective investigation into these matters and that responsible parties be brought to account. The Council reaffirmed the crucial importance it attaches to maintaining civilian control of military operations and urged all countries concerned to implement decisive legal and administrative measures to this effect.

London conference on organised crime

The Council welcomed the successful conference of 25 November, fully supported the priority actions identified by the conference and called for urgent implementation of the commitments subscribed to. The Council will draw on the Stabilisation and Association Process review mechanism and a wide range of regional initiatives to follow up on its commitments.

Afghanistan

Following discussion and briefing on the Petersberg conference, the Council adopted conclusions. These reiterated the Council's strong commitment to contributing to the full implementation of the Bonn Agreement and outlined existing challenges. Security continues to be a priority concern; the Council commended the 'Decree on the National Army' issued by the Afghan Transitional Authority (ATA). It also welcomed the declaration 'Rebuilding Peace in Afghanistan' adopted at the Petersberg conference on 2 December, and reiterated the importance of democratic values, pluralism and respect for human rights. It restated its commitment to working with other international bodies to eliminate the opium trade.

Migration and development

Commissioner Patten presented the Commission's communication on integrating migration issues in the EU's external relations policies, as a follow-up to the Seville European Council decisions. The Communication consists of an analysis of migration and development issues generally, and a report on the effectiveness of financial resources available at Community level. The Commission proposed that migration issues should be more adequately integrated into existing external relations policy and that supplementary financial effort should be made to accommodate this. COREPER has been tasked to examine the Communication and prepare a substantive debate for the Council early next year.

EU/ Africa relations

Ministers discussed EU/ Africa relations and, in particular, preparations for the next EU/Africa Summit due to take place in Spring 2003, over dinner. The troika will visit Africa to discuss further.

Cyprus

Ministers assessed the current state of play in negotiations on the UN Secretary General's settlement plan for Cyprus.

ESDP

The Council discussed EU/Nato relations and mandated SG/HR Solana to forward to NATO the text on the implementation of the Nice provisions, agreed at the Brussels European Council on 24 and 25 October. The Council also noted a draft Presidency report.

Greenland: fisheries

The Council heard a Commission presentation on the mid-term review of the fisheries protocol between the EU and Greenland. The Council noted that a decision on the proposals to adjust the protocol in the short term and to secure political commitment between the EU, Greenland and Denmark must be reached by the end of February 2003.

AOB: WHO

The Belgian delegation informed the Council of Dr. Peter Piot's (current Executive Director of UN AIDS programme) candidature for the position of Director General of the World Health Organisation.

Items approved without debate
EUPM

The Council noted that in less than a month the EU Police Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina will undertake its first crisis management operation under ESDP and welcomed the double-hatting of the High Representative as EU Special Representative and his role in the EUPM chain of command. The UN Security Council has welcomed EUPM's succession to the UN's International Police Task Force in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

European Union Special Representatives

The Council extended the mandates of the five existing special representatives in the Middle East, African Great Lakes, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Afghanistan and Stability Pact for South Eastern Europe, until June 2003.

Cuba: 12th evaluation of common position

The Council acknowledged the continuation of an open and constructive dialogue with Cuba on all issues of common interest. The Council noted that the Cuban Government had made no significant steps towards meeting the aims of the Common Position since the previous evaluation. EU policy objectives toward Cuba will remain encouraging Cuba's transition to a pluralistic and democratic system, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, lasting economic recovery and an improvement in the living standards of the population. The Council also strongly urged the Cuban Government to ratify the UN Covenants on Political and Civil Rights, and those on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

Colombia

The Council welcomed President Uribe's efforts to reform his country's institutions and to develop a fully functioning democratic state throughout Colombia, based on respect for human rights and the welfare and safety of all its citizens. The Council reiterated its support for seeking a negotiated solution to the conflict in Colombia and expressed the EU's readiness to assist in these areas. It expressed deep concern at the deterioration of human rights in the country and urged the Colombian Government to take effective action against impunity and collusion.

Restrictive measures against Somalia

The Council adopted a Common Position concerning restrictive measures against Somalia, prohibiting the sale or supply of arms and related material to Somalia by the member states. Technical, financial or other advice related to military activity is also prohibited.

Mano River Union Region

The Council noted that despite significant recent progress towards peace, democracy and reconciliation in Sierra Leone, instability in the sub-region is still of grave concern. The current situation in Liberia threatens the stability of the sub-region.

The Council welcomes the regional peace process within the Mano River Union framework, facilitated by Morocco, but regrets that progress achieved so far is limited. The Council also welcomes the strengthening of the EU's political dialogue with the countries of the Mano River Union, through the appointment of its Special Representative in 2001. The EU is one of the key development partners for the region. Its main objective in the region is to contribute strategically to peace, security and stability as preconditions for sustainable development.

Ukraine—common strategy

The Council approved a report on the implementation of the Common Strategy on Ukraine, adopted in December 1999. The report addresses the main objectives of the EU's policy toward Ukraine as set out in the Common Strategy.

European Union's activities in the Fight against terrorism

The Council took stock of a Presidency report on the EU's anti-terrorism activities and directed its competent bodies to bring forward work on the report's recommendations. The main areas covered include: enhancing justice, security and protection of EU citizens; the fight against the financing of terrorism; and the EU's external action in the fight against terrorism.

EU-Canada Summit

The Council took stock of preparations for the Summit to be held on 19 December, in Ottawa.

Gibraltar

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what powers the Gibraltar Government has to (a) regulate financial services, with specific reference to pensions and (b) initiate referenda. [86850]

Mr. MacShane: In relation to financial services, the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission, established by the Financial Services Commission Ordinance of 1989, is charged with the responsibility of supervising institutions carrying out financial business in or from within Gibraltar. The Commission is appointed by the Governor with the approval of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

Providing the Government of Gibraltar is acting consistent with the Gibraltar Constitution, they are able to initiate local referenda if they so choose. We have made clear that Her Majesty's Government would, in consultation with the Government of Gibraltar, expect to oversee any referendum on a change in sovereignty, since any such change could trigger primary legislation in the UK.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those responsibilities of HM Government and the Crown to Gibraltar which are not devolved to the Gibraltar Government. [86852]

Mr. MacShane: The Despatch to the Gibraltar Constitution Order of May 1969, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, sets out responsibilities which are devolved to the Government of Gibraltar.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which EC laws and regulations, other than those excluded by the 1972 Act of Accession, do not apply to Gibraltar. [87038]

Mr. MacShane: Other than those areas of Community policy from which Gibraltar is excluded by virtue of the UK's Act of Accession, EMU does not apply, since the UK is not a member. Gibraltar airport is suspended from the scope of the following measures:

Regulation 87/602: 1st Package—Market Access;

Directive 89/463: Scheduled Inter-Regional Air Services;

Regulation 2343/90: 2nd Package—Market Access;

Regulation 294/91: Operation of Air Cargo Services between Member States;

Regulation 2408/92: 3rd Package—Market Access;

Regulation 95/93: Slots;

Directive 96/67: Access to Ground Handling Market;

Regulation 925/99: Hushkits; and Protocol of accession of the European Community to the European Organisation for the Safety of Air Navigation (EUROCONTROL).

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on pension regulation in Gibraltar. [86851]

Mr. MacShane: The Gibraltar Commissioner for Income Tax is responsible for the regulation of pension schemes. The Financial Services Commission supervises businesses carrying out investment and asset management and administration.

Indonesia

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Indonesia regarding (a) the imprisonment of Lesley McCulloch and (b) human rights in Aceh province. [87430]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have raised Lesley McCulloch's case on a number of occasions and at a high level with the Indonesian authorities; most recently on 2 December when my noble Friend the Baroness Amos raised concerns about the delay in the court proceedings with the Indonesian Charge d'Afaires in London.

We welcome the recent signing of a peace agreement between the Government of Indonesia and Free Aceh Movement (GAM) on 9 December. We urge both sides to implement all terms of the agreement and hope this will lead to a lasting peace in Aceh. Separately, we continue to raise the issue of human rights with the Indonesian Government particularly the accountability of security forces for committing human rights abuses.

Iraq

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who made the decision that the United States should be (a) in charge of the translation and distribution of and (b) given permission to edit the Iraqi dossier to the United Nations of its weapons of mass destruction capacity. [87414]

Mr. MacShane: The President of the UN Security Council decided that the Iraqi Declaration should first be given to members of the Security Council with the expertise to assess the risks of proliferation: China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States of America. His decision followed consultations with all other members of the Security Council.

It is open to these five states to pass on any concerns they have about the risks of proliferation to UNMOVIC and the IAEA. But UNMOVIC and the IAEA alone will judge what material needs to be excised before it distributes the Declaration.

UNMOVIC will distribute the version of the Declaration that will be given to all members of Security Council. And UNMOVIC, not the United States, is in charge of translation of the Declaration.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries will receive an unedited version of the Iraqi dossier of its weapons of mass destruction. [87415]

Mr. MacShane: As states with the expertise to assess the risks of proliferation, China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States have received unedited versions of the Iraqi Declaration. UNMOVIC and the IAEA will decide what, if any, parts of the Declaration need to be excised before it distributes the report to all members of the UN Security Council.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the names of the United Kingdom-based and registered companies named as suppliers of equipment to Iraqi military industries, as listed in the Iraqi submission made to the United Nations Security Council on its military programmes; and if he will list the number of companies listed as suppliers to Iraq, broken down by country. [87497]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The task of analysing the Iraqi declaration is continuing. It would be premature to make any substantive comment on its contents at this stage.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason the non-permanent member states on the United Nations Security Council have not been provided with the full text of the Iraqi declaration on its programme of military equipment and infrastructure submitted pursuant to UNSC resolution 1441. [87582]

Mr. MacShane: The President of the UN Security Council decided that the Iraqi Declaration should first be given to members of the Security Council with the expertise to assess the risks of proliferation: China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States of America. His decision followed consultations with all other members of the Security Council.

UNMOVIC and the IAEA will judge what material needs to be excised before it distributes the declaration to all Security Council members.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by him or his predecessor and (b) by Ministers in his Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87355]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The information is as follows:

Mr. Ian Hook

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has had with the Israeli authorities concerning the legality of the killing of Mr. Ian Hook; and if he will make a statement; [87110]

(2) what steps the Government have taken to establish the circumstances of the killing of Mr. Ian Hook; and if he will make a statement on the results of these inquiries. [87111]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke to the Israeli Foreign Minister, Mr. Netanyahu, on 22 November 2002. Mr. Netanyahu promised an immediate investigation and gave an undertaking to share the results as soon as he had them. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister raised the matter with the Israeli Prime Minister, Mr. Sharon, on 29 November 2002. I also raised it with the Israeli Ambassador, Mr. Shtauber, on 4 and 5 December 2002. There has also been frequent contact between our embassy in Tel Aviv and the Israeli authorities, and our Chargé d'Affaires discussed the IDF inquiry with a senior IDF officer on 3 December 2002, at the IDF's request.

We have made our concerns clear at the highest levels, and received assurances that the IDF inquiry would be rigorous and comprehensive.

We are also in touch with the UN about the investigation they are carrying out into Mr. Hook's death.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by the Government to assist the UN Panel of Experts on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources and Other Forms of Wealth of the Democratic Republic of Congo to identify the ultimate owners and beneficiaries of Tremalt Ltd. [87611]

Mr. Straw: The UN Panel of Expert's mandate expired on 18 October 2002. Discussions are under way at the UN on how to renew its mandate. The UK will maintain a dialogue with the Panel, once its mandate is renewed. We will continue to comment on information the Panel wishes to discuss with the UK, as requested.

Overseas Territories

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under whose direction Governors of overseas territories act on (a) matters devolved to overseas legislation and (b) other matters. [87039]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Governors of overseas territories act under the direction of the Foreign Secretary. The extent to which the Foreign Secretary may instruct a Governor as to the exercise of his functions depends on the terms of the Constitution and legislation in force in each territory.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what his policy is on the representation of (a) overseas territories outside Europe and (b) crown dependencies in the European Parliament; [87040]

(2) if he will make a statement on the distinction between Gibraltar and other overseas territories and the crown dependencies in respect of their European parliamentary representation. [87041]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Gibraltar is the only UK overseas territory inside the European Union. Following a 1999 European Court of Human Rights judgment, the UK is required to ensure that Gibraltarians can vote in European Parliament elections. The Government introduced the European Parliament (Representation) Bill in November 2002 in order to provide for Gibraltar's enfranchisement in time for the 2004 European Parliamentary elections.

The other overseas territories and the crown dependencies are not part of the European Union. They have their own elected governments and no direct representation in the European Parliament. Their constituents are free to raise with UK MEPs any concerns they may have with regard to EU legislation or other EU matters, and their governments are free to raise with HMG any such concerns they may have.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87695]

Mr. MacShane: Progress against the FCO's targets agreed under the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR98) for the period 1999–2002 was reported in Appendix K of the FCO's 2002 Departmental Report, which was published in June 2002, and is available on the FCO website (www.fco.gov.uk). CSR98 targets were superseded by targets agreed under the 2000 Spending Review (SR2000) for the period 2001–04. SR2000 targets and the new targets agreed under the 2002 Spending Review (SR2002) for the period 2003–06 are also available on the FCO website.

Surface-to-air Missiles

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with allies about dealing with the proliferation of surface-to-air missiles; and what actions he proposes to take. [87845]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The states participating in the Wassenaar Arrangement, including the United Kingdom, recognising the special danger posed by such weapons, adopted specific export control guidelines for Man-Portable Air Defence Systems in December 2000.

All military listed arms exports are strictly licensed under the EU Consolidated Code of Conduct.

The Government continue to work with other parties to strengthen regulation of the arms trade and stop illegal proliferation, particularly where there is a danger that arms might leak to terrorists.

Syria

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he plans to have with the President of Syria. [86899]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We will discuss the full range of bilateral and international issues with President Bashar al-Assad including reform, human rights, Iraq, the Middle East Peace Process and the fight against terrorism.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he will discuss support for terrorist organisations with the President of Syria during his forthcoming visit to the UK; [87641]

(2) if he will make a statement about the reasons for the visit of the President of Syria to the UK; [87643]

(3) whether he will discuss the fate of Israeli missing servicemen with President Bashar Al-Assad of Syria during his forthcoming visit to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [87642]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: President Bashar Al-Assad is visiting the United Kingdom, at the invitation of Her Majesty's Government, as a follow-up to the Prime Minister's visit to Syria in October 2001. Discussions during the visit will cover the full range of bilateral and international issues, including reform, human rights, Iraq, the Middle East Peace Process and the fight against terrorism, including terrorist organisations in Syria and the fate of missing Israeli servicemen.

UN Resolutions

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which United Nations (a) Security Council resolutions and (b) General Assembly resolutions the United Kingdom has voted on in the current session; how the United Kingdom voted in each case; what steps his Department takes to maximise media coverage of United Nations resolutions and debates; and if he will make it his policy to make a written statement in the Official Report on the United Kingdom voting record at the United Nations. [87586]

Mr. MacShane: Voting records of all resolutions of the UN Security Council and the UN General Assembly since 1983 can be accessed via the internet at http://unbisnet.un.org.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the UK Mission to the United Nations in New York and other British embassies and high commissions frequently issue press releases and have information on their websites which publicise UN activities.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what arrangements there will be for pensioners to get documents verified for the purposes of claiming benefits without posting them to regional Pension Service centres. [86883]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 12 December 2002]: We expect that the vast majority of pensioners will continue to prefer to deal with The Pension Service by post as they do now. However where a pensioner requires it we expect to be able to verify documents via the local service.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that women will continue to receive their benefits payment independent of men when the new payment method for benefits is introduced. [87103]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The Department for Work and Pensions is providing customers with information (including letters and leaflets) which clearly sets out the account options as part of the move to payment directly into bank accounts. All customers including women will have the option to open an account in their name only if they want independent access to their benefit payments.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions his Department has had with (a) pensioner groups and (b) poverty groups as part of the project to change payment systems from one of benefit books to direct bank account payments. [87104]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Special interest groups including those that represent pensioner and poverty groups have been involved throughout the development of the move to direct payment. Regular meetings are held with these groups to discuss progress. The most recent meeting was held on 28 November 2002.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research the Department has undertaken into the advantages of moving to paying benefits to bank accounts only; and if he will make a statement. [87107]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Payment directly into accounts is a safe, convenient, more modern and efficient way to pay benefits and pensions. More people are already choosing to be paid this way. The Department conducted research of benefit recipients who were not already paid this way to provide an overview of their characteristics, experiences and attitudes. Some people indicated that they wanted to be able to continue to access their money from post office branches and also to be able to continue to collect it weekly. Both of these options will be available when this payment method becomes the normal way we pay benefits from April 2003.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) research and (b) risk assessment has been undertaken by the Department on the number of customers who do not have bank accounts in which to receive their benefits; and what contingency plans the Department has for those without bank accounts for the payment of benefits. [87108]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Benefit customers are increasingly choosing direct payment as the way they want their benefit or pension paid. Research has shown that around 85 per cent. of benefit customers already have access to bank accounts. The introduction of universal banking services (which consist of two elements: access to a basic bank account and the post office card account) will open up a wider range of banking and financial services. We have always recognised that there will be a small group of people who we cannot pay directly into an account. We will develop an alternate method to pay this group of people.

Benefit Take-up

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if his Department has received the figures from the Office for National Statistics on the take-up of income-related benefits for 2000–01; and when they will be published. [86735]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Statistics bulletin Updates, recently pre-announced a release date of March 2003 for the 2000–01 financial year estimates of take-up of income-related benefits. The Office for National Statistics have delivered to the Department research that will be incorporated in the production of these statistics. On evaluation of these research findings a precise date of release will be pre-announced in Updates.

Child Poverty

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the baseline data was on which his Department's target to reduce the number of children in low-income households by at least 25 per cent. by 2004 was based; and what progress has been made. [87163]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 16 December 2002]: The target to reduce the number of children in low-income households by at least aquarter by 2004–05 is measured by the number of children below 60 per cent. of contemporary median income as reported in Households Below Average Income (HBAI) statistics. Baseline for the target is 1998–99 with 3.1 million children in low-income households before housing costs (BHC) and 4.2 million after housing costs (AHC). HBAI statistics show a fall of around 400,000 children between 1998–99 and 2000–01 (3.1 million to 2.7 million) BHC, and 300,000 (4.2 million to 3.9 million) AHC.

The Public Service Agreement target technical note, available on the internet, contains full details of how the target will be monitored.

Combined Pension Forecasts

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many combined pension forecasts have been issued in each month since his Department's current forecasting scheme came into operation. [87164]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The combined pension forecast service was piloted from October 1999, and is now operational. Throughout the pilots the Department has worked with employers and pension providers to ensure they can issue combined pension forecasts to their employees and pension scheme members. Now the service is operational, we are continuing to recruit employers and pension providers in order to build up the service so that is can be made available to as many people as possible. To date, 348 schemes have expressed an interest in using this voluntary service.

The complete process from recruitment to the time the employer or pension scheme provider provides combined forecasts, can take around 12 to 18 months, and as the private sector partner issues the statement, precise issue dates are their responsibility.

The Department has, however, worked in partnership with a number of providers to facilitate the issue of combined pension forecasts on the following dates:

EU Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the outcome was of the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council held on 3 December; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including their voting record; and if he will make a statement. [87252]

Malcolm Wicks: This was a very busy Council with business split over two days. My right hon. Friend attended the Employment and Social Policy part, held on 3 December, accompanied by the Minister for Employment Relations and the Regions, Alan Johnson. The agenda covered a wide range of employment and social policy issues. Council agreed an orientation toward political agreement on a Regulation to replace Regulation 1408/71 which coordinates social security for people moving within the EU. The issues covered at this Council were sickness benefits, benefits for work injury and illness, and death grants. Work will continue on simplification of this regulation under the forthcoming Greek Presidency.

The Council reached political agreement on a Regulation extending provisions of Regulation 1408/71 to nationals of third countries. This Regulation will be adopted at a future council.

The Council also agreed to minor revisions to the objectives agreed at Nice in 2000 for the next round of National Action Plans on social inclusion.

The Council agreed a number of Resolutions: on e-accessibility for disabled people, ahead of the European year for disabled people in 2003; on social inclusion through social dialogue; and on corporate social responsibility.

This Council also produced Conclusions on gender mainstreaming within the Council and Council Conclusions on a series of indicators concerning violence against women.

There were three substantive discussions at this Council. Council adopted a joint report with ECOFIN on the streamlining of the annual co-ordination of economic and employment policies after some discussion. The report is in line with the UK's desire to see reform of the employment processes to emphasise outcomes and ensure that all work is geared to achieving the Lisbon objectives.

There was also an orientation debate on the Commission's proposed Directive on improving working conditions for temporary agency workers. Amongst other issues, the UK continued to argue for a longer derogation than the six weeks proposed in the Commission paper. The Greek Presidency will continue to seek a compromise on this dossier when they take over the Presidency next year.

The Council agreed a Decision establishing a Tripartite Social Summit after discussion. This will be forwarded as a Report from the ESPHCA to the General Affairs and External Relations Council, and recommends continuing the current informal arrangements.

The Council adopted joint conclusions with ECOFIN on the structural indicators for the 2003 Synthesis report.

The Commission presented its draft of the Joint Employment Report at this Council. The draft was remitted to the Employment Committee for consideration.

The Presidency announced that it would shortly be bringing forward a revised proposal for a Directive protecting workers from the risks of exposure to electromagnetic fields and waves.

No votes were taken on any of these issues.

Fairground Safety

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many fairground rides have been surveyed in each year since 1990; and by how many surveyors. [85727]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 10 December 2002]: The Health and Safety Executive does not hold this information. The industry, in consultation with the Health and Safety Executive, is however developing a system that will be able to supply this information in the future.

Guidance produced by the Health and Safety Executive in consultation with the industry "Fairgrounds and Amusements Parks, Guidance on Safe Practice", requires that every fairground ride, and any ancillary parts of the ride which may affect the safety of the ride are subject to thorough examination at least annually, or within any shorter period specified by the manufacturer or appointed inspection body.

Once the inspection body that carried out the examination is satisfied with the safety of the ride, a Declaration of Operational Compliance, (DoC) is issued to the operator to allow him to continue to operate this fairground ride.

The number of registered inspection bodies (excluding those registered to inspect coin operated children's rides) was 27 as of 4 December 2002. This information is available on the NAFLIC web page http://www.naflic.org.uk/adips-2002.htm. Further details can be obtained from NAFLIC, PO Box 752, Sunderland SR3 1XX. Tel/Fax 0191–5239498.

Fraud

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls were made to the National Benefit Fraud Hotline in (a) January, (b) February and (c) March in (i) 1999, (ii) 2000, (iii) 2001, and (iv) 2002. [86994]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 December 2002]: The information requested is in the table.

Number of calls to the National Benefit Fraud Hotline

Year	January	February	March
1999	13,925	13,798	16,901
2000	14,272	19,285	23,118

Health and Safety Executive

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Band 6 administrative staff have resigned from the North West Division office in Manchester since its relocation in January 2001. [84774]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The North West (Manchester) office relocated on 8 January 2001. There have been 17 Band 6 resignations (nine female and eight male) between 8 January 2001 and 30 November 2002.

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what expenditure was made in 2001–02 on casual staff supplied by Reed Employment in the North West Division of the Health and Safety Executive. [84783]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Expenditure in 2001–02 on casual staff supplied by Reed Executive plc to NW Division was £56,337.

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which division of the HSE is the largest employer of casual staff in the FO Division. [85059]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: HSE does not directly employ casual staff. Temporary vacancies in the administrative, typing and mail/messenger disciplines are filled by the use of employment agency staff under an HSE contract with Reed Executive.

The East and South East division is currently the largest user of this service within the Field Operations Directorate of the HSE.

New Deal

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of the

New Deal starts in his Department and its agencies have resulted in sustained, unsubsidised employment; and if he will make a statement. [85970]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: This information is not available for all of the Department and its agencies. However, in the former Employment Service and Jobcentre Plus[1], up to October 2002, 825 people have been taken on under the New Deal for Young People and New Deal 25 plus. 302 (37 per cent.) of these people have gained permanent employment with Jobcentre Plus and 98 (12 per cent.) have left to take up employment elsewhere. A further 200 (24 per cent.) people are still employed in Jobcentre Plus on the New Deal programme.

[1] Jobcentre Plus was launched in April 2002. The Employment Service and Benefits Agency ceased to exist at the same time.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many persons received new deal photocards between May 1998 and October 2002; how many new deal participants were eligible to receive such cards during this period; what assessment he has made of the reasons for the difference in these figures; and if he will make a statement. [85973]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: On 6 November, 2002 we announced the extension of half price rail fares to up to 125,000 more people on three additional new deal programmes, making it cheaper for them to get to job interviews and cheaper to get to work in the first few months of employment.

The new deal reduced rail fare scheme has been in existence in England and Wales since May 1998 and, to the end of August 2002[1], Jobcentre Plus has issued 127,254 photocards. During the period 24 May 1998 to 31 August 2002, a total of 1,038,623 new deal participants were eligible to use the card.

The reduced rail fare scheme is brought to the attention of all new deal participants at the initial interview with their personal adviser. Where transport is not considered to be a barrier to the client finding work or training, they may not take up the offer. Jobcentre Plus is currently working to further increase awareness of the scheme through targeted publicity, and expect to see a marked increase in take-up as a result.

[1] Latest available figures.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of those leaving the new deal for the long-term unemployed left the new deal for unsubsidised sustained jobs; and how many did not return to claim jobseeker's allowance within (a) 26 weeks and (b) one year. [85971]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: Up to the end of September 2002, 80,640 new deal 25 plus leavers had gained unsubsidised sustained jobs. Of these, 64,780 did not return to claim jobseeker's allowance within 26 weeks, and 57,090 had not re-claimed the benefit within one year after leaving the new deal.

Pensioners

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to increase the take-up rate of means-tested provision for pensioners. [86283]

Mr. McCartney: We have introduced a range of initiatives designed to encourage pensioners to take up their entitlements. For the minimum income guarantee (MIG) we have undertaken a national advertising campaign, which resulted in almost 140,000 successful claims, with an average gain of £20 per week. We have also reduced the MIG claim form from 40 to 10 pages, introduced a MIG specific leaflet, and we are identifying potential beneficiaries through key events, such as claiming state pension.

A key priority, for both Government and The Pension Service is the successful take-up of the new pension credit, which will enhance and replace the MIG. It has been specifically designed to be easy for pensioners to claim and to be less intrusive. The weekly means test will be abolished for the over-65s and be replaced by a statement of their circumstances every 5 years. Capital rules will be relaxed and the upper capital limit abolished.

Our take-up plan for pension credit is extensive and makes use of a range of channels. We will transfer existing MIG recipients to pension credit, ready for payments to be made from October 2003; write to all pensioners not already receiving MIG by June 2004 to alert them to possible pension credit entitlement, supported by a national publicity campaign; work with local partners to help support the communications to pensioners, and tailor marketing and communications activity accordingly.

The Pension Service pension centres are backed up by local services delivered in partnership with local authorities and voluntary sector organisations provided in locations accessible to pensioners. There will be appointment surgeries and, in time, drop-in surgeries to meet pensioners in places where they visit.

Outreach activity will be an important part of local service work. Staff will be meeting people in partner and other locations accessible to customers offering general advice and guidance and taking part in benefit take-up initiatives.

We are planning to introduce a network of Internet access points, telephone points and hard copy information (displaying leaflets, posters, claim forms and other materials) points based in Government and partner locations: and a benefits information service for partners, care workers, volunteers etc. to raise awareness of The Pension Service, pensioner entitlements and how to apply for them.

We have also set up the Partnerships Against Poverty group, and are undertaking negotiations with partners at a national level to agree the scope for partnership working.

All of the above demonstrate the importance that my Department attaches to encouraging pensioners to take up their entitlements.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the number of stages in the process of setting up a Post Office customer card account. [87106]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The Department for Work and Pensions will be writing to customers over the next two years when it is their turn to change to Direct Payment into an account. Customers will be provided with information (including letters and leaflets) which clearly sets out the different types of accounts available, so that they can choose the account which best meets their needs and circumstances.

Customers who wish to open a post office card account will need to contact the Department to discuss their account options with an adviser. They will then be issued with a personal invitation document. This document should then be taken to a post office branch where the customer will be given a post office card account application form to complete.

Overall the process of applying for a post office card account is straightforward and no more onerous than that of applying for a basic (or other) bank account.

SERPS

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 21 November, to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb), Official Report, column 282W, on SERPS, if he will place examples of (a) the original letter, (b) the follow-up estimate letter and (c) the most recent letter in the Library. [86688]

Mr. McCartney: The original letter and the follow up estimate were placed in the Library on 11 March 2002. The most recent letter will be placed in the Library after it has been approved by the Secretary of State.

Social Security Fraud Act

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have had their benefit reduced because they have been convicted of benefit fraud for a second time under the terms of the Social Security Fraud Act 2001. [86734]

Malcolm Wicks: The 'two-strikes' provision of the Social Security Fraud Act 2001 came into force from 1 April 2002. The provision applies to people who are convicted of benefit fraud on two separate occasions after 1 April 2002; it cannot be applied retrospectively. No individuals so far have had their benefit reduced under this provision.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his oral statement of 25 November, Official Report, column 12, on stakeholder pensions, if he will set out the basis for his estimate that more than one million people who did not have a pension 18 months ago have one now. [84484]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 2 December 2002]: There has been an increase in the number of people who save for their retirement through private pensions since the introduction of stakeholder pensions. Although not all stakeholder pension sales will be to new pension savers, it is widely acknowledged that stakeholder pensions have had a beneficial effect on the provision of pensions more generally. For example, as an alternative to designating a stakeholder pension scheme employers have broadened access to their occupational pension schemes to the whole of the workforce, or have opened group personal pension schemes to which they contribute. What is clear is that for a very large number of people stakeholder pensions have provided a route into pension provision that they had never had before.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many eligible people have not received backdated winter fuel payments for the first three years of the scheme, and what the value was of such payments. [87598]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 December 2002]: According to our estimate around 1.9 million people could have been eligible for backdated payments for the first three years of the scheme and about 1.2 million people have now been paid. There is no cut off dates for these retrospective payments.

It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the numbers who have not claimed because the estimate of those newly eligible was based on sample data. It is up to the individual, where a claim is necessary, to decide whether or not to make that claim.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost of the winter fuel payments has been in each year since they were established, including (a) payments made on time, (b) backdated payments and (c) administration costs; and what the full value is of potential future payments to eligible recipients who have not yet applied for the benefit, but who are still free to do so. [86738]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is given in the table.

The Department now accounts for its administration and benefit expenditure by Strategic Objective, as set out in its Public Service Agreements (PSA), and by individual Requests for Resources (RfRs) as set out in the Departmental Estimates and Accounts.

It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the value of unclaimed Winter Fuel Payments. It is up to an individual, where a claim is necessary, to decide whether or not to make that claim.

Caseload and expenditure on winter fuel payments

Expenditure on WFPs (£ million)	191	194	759	[1]1,749	1,692	1,710
Number of WFP recipients	9,759,000	9,953,000	10,084,000	11,123,000	11,202,000	11,322,000

[1] Includes £94 million retrospective payments

Notes:
All figures are for Great Britain.
Costs are in cash terms.
Expenditure figures prior to 2001–02 are from the published Social Fund Account and from 2001–02 are DWP's latest published forecast.
Caseload figures prior to 2001–02 are based on estimates from administrative data and from 2001–02 are DWP's latest published forecast.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many people became newly entitled for the (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 winter fuel payment; who needed to make a claim, but failed to do so before the cut-off dates; and what the value was of such payments. [87599]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 December 2002]: We estimate that around 1.5 million people became entitled to winter fuel payments in 2000–01 for the first time, as a result of a change in the rules in 2000. So far, about one million have been paid. Additionally, for the winter of 2000–01, we estimated that a further 500,000 people could have been newly entitled as a result attaining age 60 and satisfying the other entitlement conditions.

Similarly for the winter of 2001–02, we estimated that some 500,000 people could have been newly entitled as a result of attaining age 60 and satisfying the other entitlement conditions. Around half of these were paid automatically. Some 245,000 claim forms were received by end of March 2002, although some of these would have been from people entitled to automatic payments. It is up to the individual to decide whether or not to claim.

In 2000–01, expenditure on winter fuel payments was £1,749 million and in 2001–02, it was £1,692 million.

Work-related Ill Health

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with other Ministers to develop a rehabilitation strategy to tackle work-related ill health in order to reduce the number on invalidity benefit. [85705]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Improved vocational rehabilitation services are a key element of our strategy for enabling people with health problems and disabilities to move into employment, and so become and remain independent.

Ministers and officials from this Department, the Department of Health, the Department for Education and Skills, the Scotland Office and the Wales Office have held discussions concerning the impact of ill health and disability on both individuals and employers, and specifically the role of vocational rehabilitation.

Our Green Paper "Pathways to Work—Helping people into employment", published on 18 November, proposes more intensive support for people who move onto incapacity benefits. One element of this involves the establishment by Jobcentre Plus in conjunction with the NHS of new rehabilitation programmes, combining support to find work with management of an individual's health condition. These will be piloted in six areas across the country starting from late 2003.

In addition, the Job Retention and Rehabilitation Pilot, a joint initiative with the Department of Health which also starts next year, will explore ways in which we can support people faced with losing their employment through prolonged sickness or disability.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Housing

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the number of new employees needed in the housing sector over the next five years to meet Government targets on new house building in London and the South East; and if he will make a statement. [86905]

Mr. McNulty: The Government has made no specific assessment for new house building in London and the South East. However, the Construction Industry Training Board (CITB) has estimated that 76,000 new employees will be required each year in the construction industry between 2002 and 2006 and the Strategic Forum for Construction estimates that 300,000 qualified staff will need to be recruited to the construction industry by the end of 2006. CITB predicts that over 40,000 new recruits will be needed between now and 2006 in the Greater London area and that over 77,000 will be required in the South East.

However, these figures are based on moderate growth levels in the construction industry. They do not take into account the step change in housing and regeneration activity that the Deputy Prime Minister will outline early in the New Year. In 2003 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister aims to produce an analysis of the impact on the industry of the level of construction work generated by the planned step change in housing investment.

We will continue to work with the Department of Trade and Industry and Department for Education and Skills to ensure that there is sufficient capacity and the right skills in the construction industry to meet the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's ambitious targets.

Local Government Finance Consultation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which local authorities he met, and on what dates, in connection with the local authority grant formula consultations. [86893]

Mr. Leslie: Tabled below are the meetings that the Ministers of Office of the Deputy Prime Minister had with local authorities or local authority representative groups, which were requested within the time scale of the Consultation on the Local Government Finance Formula Grant Distribution.

Mobile Phones

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what reports he has received on the compliance of (a) mobile phone companies in general and (b) T-mobile in particular with 'The Code of Best Practice in Mobile Phone Development' (i) in the London Borough of Southwark and (ii) across London; if he will call for up-to-date reports on the issue; and if he will make a statement. [86531]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Oaten) on 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 269W.

Section 28

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 20 November 2002, Official Report, column 627, in what way he proposes to take forward the statement in the Labour Manifesto in connection with the repeal of Section 28. [86527]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is still considering how best to do so.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list for his Department (a) those comprehensive spending review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the comprehensive spending review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87689]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister publishes progress against all its outstanding PSA targets in its annual report and autumn performance report.

Progress against comprehensive spending review 1998 targets that apply to theOffice of the Deputy Prime Minister and that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Spending Review 2002 was last reported in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Autumn Performance Report 2002, published on 29 November.

The Report is available from the House Library, or can be accessed on the Office's website at the following address: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/about/aims/pdf/autjperf.pdf

HEALTH

GM Food

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations have been received since 1999 asking for full (a) traceability and (b) labelling of GM food. [86172]

Ms Blears: The Food Standards Agency conducted a written consultation on the European Commission's two proposals for new genetic modification legislation, issued in July 2001. 128 representations were received. 17 called for the labelling of all foods produced with, or made from genetically modified organisms (GMOs). 14 supported the concept of full labelling, but recognised the practical difficulties this presented. 22 responses supported the general concept of traceability. A further 16 supported full traceability, but expressed concerns over its implementation in practice. 19 representations expressed significant concerns over the reliability of traceability for foods and feeds derived from GMOs.

Anaemia

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the basis is of his policy not to treat cancer patients with anaemia-related fatigue until their haemoglobin drops to 7 g/dl equates. [86267]

Ms Blears: The Department does not operate the policy referred to. It is for individual clinicians to decide, in consultation with their patients, the most suitable treatment for their condition or for any side effects, such as anaemia-related fatigue, resulting from treatment.

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to ensure that patients with chronic anaemia should not be treated with red cell transfusions where effective alternatives exist. [86269]

Ms Blears: The publication of guidelines from the British Committee for Standards in Haematology in 2001 provides specific advice to clinicians. The type of treatment offered to chronic anaemia patients is a matter of individual clinical judgment and discussion with the patient concerned. The Department encourages the production of local protocols, which use existing guidance produced from a sound evidence base and clinical consensus.

Blood Transfusion

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is producing the information on blood transfusion and its alternatives, which after April 2003 NHS trusts will be required to make available to patients; and whether this information will provide specific guidance for cancer patients. [86270]

Ms Blears: The National Blood Service is producing an information leaflet which is intended to be of use and interest to all patients who may need a blood transfusion. It will not provide specific guidance for cancer patients. The leaflet will be issued to all national health service hospitals early in 2003.

Breast Cancer

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people died of breast cancer in 2001; and what percentage of the cancer research budget is spent on breast cancer research. [86575]

Ms Blears: There were 10,924 deaths from breast cancer in England in 2001. The recent National Cancer Research Institute (NCRI) report, Strategic Analysis 2002, analysed most of the directly-funded cancer research of Government and charity funders. The analysis revealed that 60 per cent. of research spend was relevant to all tumour sites. The other 40 per cent. was relevant to specific tumour sites. Approximately 18 per cent. of the site-specific research was on breast cancer.

Emergency Hospital Readmissions

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the maximum number of days is between discharge and emergency readmission for a patient to be considered to be in the same episode of care. [84097]

Mr. Hutton: A decision has not yet been taken on the cut-off point for the maximum length of a discharge from hospital and subsequent readmission.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the basis is of his calculation of the baseline figure for 2001–02 and 2002–03 emergency readmissions. [82967]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 November 2002]: The baseline rate for both years was calculated as the number of patients readmitted to hospital within 28 days of discharge, divided by the number discharged from hospital. The baseline is derived from the outturn figures for the previous year.

The baseline for 2001–02 was a rate of 7.3 per cent., and related to over 75s only. The 2002–03 target is for all ages, with a baseline rate of 5.4 per cent.

Drug Misuse

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what responses to the Audit Commission report, 'Changing Habits', have been received from (a) the National Treatment Agency, (b) individual drug action teams and (c) individual drug reference groups. [82267]

Ms Blears: This Department has received no responses. The Audit Commission is an independent body and responses on its reports will normally be sent to the Commission itself.

Chiropody

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many chiropodists were working in the NHS in each year from 1997 to 2001; and how many were working in the NHS on the most recent date for which figures are available. [87680]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Between 1997 and 2001, the number of chiropodists employed in the national health service increased by 270, or eight per cent.

Staff employed in chiropody/podiatry in England as at 30 September each year

	Qualified chiropody/podiatry staff
1997	3,290
1998	3,320
1999	3,370
2000	3,470
2001	3,560

Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce Census.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many chiropodists completed training in 2001; and what proportion of these have commenced employment within the NHS as chiropodists. [87681]

Mr. Hutton: Information on chiropodists completing training and what proportion joined the national health service is not collected centrally. Information on the number of chiropodists employed in the NHS and chiropodists entering training is given below.

The number of chiropodists entering training in 1998–99, who would normally have completed training in 2001–02, was 409.

Between September 2000 and 2001, the number of chiropodists employed in the NHS increased by 90, or 2.6 per cent., from 3,470 to 3,560.

CJD (Lamb)

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he gives to the public on (a) eating lamb and (b) the possible link between scrapie and CJD. [86906]

Ms Blears: The Food Standards Agency is responsible for giving advice on food issues. The agency informs me that it is continuing not to advise consumers against eating sheep meat or sheep meat products. Earlier this year, consumers were advised that, if BSE were present in sheep, their risk would be significantly reduced by avoiding sausages made with sheep intestine.

Epidemiological evidence does not suggest a link between scrapie and CJD.

Acute Hospitals (Computer Viruses)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of damage to computer systems in acute hospitals resulting from computer viruses there have been in each of the past five years. [85779]

Ms Blears: Figures for computer virus incidents throughout the national health service are not currently available.

Correspondence

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter of the hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton of 21 June 2002, in respect of Dr. Roger Stephenson, acknowledged by the Department on 1 July 2002 under reference PO 1011562. [82528]

Ms Blears: A reply was sent on 10 December 2002.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters to him from (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) over six months, and (ii) over one year. [83279]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 25 November 2002]: At 11 December 2002, there were eight letters from hon. Members dated before 10 June 2002, which had not received a reply, and none over a year. Accurate information is not currently available for letters from members of the public, but this should be available in the new year.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 7 November 2002, from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. Mary Allcock. [86659]

Mr. Milburn: A reply was sent to the right hon. Member on 16 December 2002.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 29 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Miss J Robson. [87655]

Mr. Milburn: A reply was sent to the right hon. Member on 16 December 2002.

Diabetes

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish the full National Service Framework for diabetes. [87850]

Mr. Lammy: We shall be publishing the delivery strategy for the diabetes national service framework in the next few weeks.

Diagnostic Services

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS acute hospitals offer round-the-clock diagnosis and test results. [87527]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected centrally. However, acute hospitals will provide 24-hour diagnostic services for emergency cases.

Drug Treatment

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are in residential rehabilitation in their own drug action team area. [86692]

Ms Blears: Information is not available in the form requested.

Information on whether individuals live within the health authority delivering treatment, for drug users presenting to residential rehabilitation, in the six month period ending 31 March 2001, is given in the table. Whether health authority (HA) of treatment and health authority and/or NHS Regional office (RO) of residence were the same for drug users presenting to residential rehabilitation during the period 1 October 2000 to 31 March 2001.

Health authority of residence—data for England

	Numbers	Percentages
Number of users	810	100
Same HA of treatment	256	32
Different HA of treatment but same RO	339	42
Resident outside RO of treatment	105	13
Not known	110	14

Notes:
1. The data are from the Department of Health Regional Drug Misuse Databases
2. Percentages do not sum to 100 due to rounding.

Foundation Hospitals

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if hospital trusts with deficits will be entitled to (a) apply for foundation status and (b) obtain foundation status. [86936]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 December 2002]: National health service foundation trust status will only be made available to high performing three-star acute and specialist NHS trusts. The application process will entail an independent financial review in which applicants will need to clearly demonstrate a track record of good financial management and be financially viable.

Genetic Testing

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations have been received from consumers and patient organisations as part of the HGC consultation on regulation of genetic testing services supplied direct to the public; and whether these organisations favoured (a) statutory regulation and (b) a voluntary industry code; [85203]

(2) how many responses the HGC received during their consultation on the regulation of genetic testing services supplied direct to the public; and how many were in favour of (a) no action being taken, (b) a voluntary code being established, (c) a code plus statutory restrictions and (d) statutory restrictions; [85206]

(3) when the HGC will be making recommendations to Government as a result of the consultation on regulation of genetic testing services supplied direct to the public; [85207]

(4) if he will place in the Library the responses of the (a) Advertising Standards Agency, (b) British Embassies from Canada, Holland, Japan and the US, (c) DTI Policy Advisor on Internet Regulation, (d) Information Commissioner, (e) Medical Devices Agency, (f) Medical Research Council and (g) Occupational Health Advisory Committee to the HGC consultation on genetic testing. [85205]

Ms Blears: The Human Genetics Commission (HGC) consultation on genetic testing services supplied direct to the public closed in October 2002. HGC is analysing the responses and is conducting additional public surveys. HGC plans to publish its report and recommendations to Ministers early in 2003. It will also publish all of the non-confidential responses received during consultation and copies will be placed in the Library.

HGC has now received written responses from 42 organisations and 22 individuals. Approximately 14 written responses and four oral evidence sessions were from consumer and patient groups. Of these, six favoured statutory regulation for at least some tests and three favoured voluntary codes. Of the written responses from all sources that expressed a view, none favoured no action, 11 favoured voluntary codes for some types of tests, 24 favoured a mixture of voluntary codes and statutory restrictions and 13 favoured statutory restrictions for some types of test.

Genito-Urinary Clinics

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of genito-urinary medicine clinics are able to see urgent cases within 24 hours; [86567]

(2) if he will make a statement on access to genito-urinary open access clinics and waiting time for genito-urinary clinics. [86568]

Ms Blears: Central data on genito-urinary medicine (GUM) clinic waiting times are available only for patients referred by general practitioners. GUM is an open access service and the vast majority of patients self-refer and therefore these data do not provide an accurate picture of waiting times for these services. One of the action points in the sexual health and HIV strategy implementation action plan is to develop a waiting times indicator for GUM and work on this is already under way. However, we are aware that there are pressures on GUM clinics which have led to long waiting times for some services. We have therefore invested over £5 million this year to improve capacity and reduce waiting times.

Health Authority Chief Executives

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many chief executives of former health authorities have taken (a) redundancy and (b) early retirement since April. [84590]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 2 December 2002]: Over 20,000 national health service staff were involved in the 'Shifting the Balance of Power' (StBOP) reorganisation. 95 health authorities were replaced by 28 strategic health authorities, and in order to keep valuable skills and experience in the NHS, all staff involved in the reorganisation were given a 12-month guarantee of employment up to 31 March 2003.

However, due to a variety of factors, it was recognised that some staff might not be able to gain suitable alternative employment in the NHS. These staff have been allowed to take early retirement or redundancy prior to 31 March 2003. Since April 2002, there has been one redundancy and 20 early retirements that have taken place among the former health authority chief executives.

Health Services (East Kent)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make a decision about the reconfiguration of health services in East Kent. [87094]

Ms Blears [holding answer 16 December 2002]: A decision on the reconfiguration of acute services in East Kent could not be made while the Judicial Review of the process was under consideration. Now the judgment has been made Ministers are in a position to consider Kent and Medway Strategic Health Authority's recommendation. I cannot, at this time, give the hon. Member an indication of when that decision will be made.

Herbal Remedies

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on amendments 9 and 11 to the Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive. [85798]

Ms Blears: Amendments 9 and 11 proposed by the European Parliament in relation to the draft Directive on Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products would have the effect of allowing applications for traditional use registrations where individual active herbal ingredients had had traditional use but there was not evidence of traditional use of that particular combination. Elsewhere, within the proposed Directive, applicants are required to supply evidence of the traditional use of the specific combination and member states may refuse applications if the data on traditional use is insufficient. The amendments would therefore probably have limited effect.

Our overall view on this issue is that active medicinal ingredients, herbal or otherwise, can interact causing adverse reactions and we would have concerns on public health grounds about combinations where safety was supported neither by tests and trials (as would apply in the case of a marketing authorisation) nor by evidence of long usage. In some cases one or more herbal ingredient in a combination could reasonably be regarded as non active, for example where included for taste or colour, and in that situation non active ingredients need not have been used as part of the traditional combination.

It is likely to be possible to demonstrate traditional use of a great many herbal combinations. During continuing negotiations, and subsequent implementation if the Directive is agreed, we will look for ways to ensure that the regulatory impact of demonstrating traditional use of combinations is contained to the necessary minimum.

Amendments 9 and 11 also follow through a concept introduced in Amendment 6 which has the effect that classification of a product as a herbal medicinal product would depend on the active ingredients being present at a pharmacologically active level.

We have some concerns about the proposal as drafted. There is an existing definition of a medicinal product in Directive 2001/83/EC. We would not wish to change that definition in relation to one category of medicinal product only (herbal medicines), in relation to an issue, (levels of pharmacological activity) that is a generic one, relevant to all medicines. Second, the amendment does not address the regulatory position of products which, under the existing definition, are classified as medicinal products by virtue of their presentation. Third, the dividing line between pharmacologically active and non pharmacologically active levels may be difficult to determine for many herbal substances.

Our top priority in relation to the definition of a medicinal product in the ongoing negotiations on the review of Directive 2001/83/EC is to resist the provision, originally proposed by the European Commission, that would give precedence to medicines legislation for any product which fell within the definition of a medicinal product, even if that product was already regulated under other sectoral legislation. This proposal could have lead to many more products being classified as medicines. From the outset of negotiations we have argued vigorously against this proposal, seeking to enlist the support of other member states and Members of the European Parliament. We are therefore pleased that the European Parliament has not supported the Commission's original proposal and we will continue to argue for its deletion from the proposals.

We also recognise that there are differences in member states' interpretation of the current definition of a medicinal product in relation to products close to the borderline of medicines and other regulatory regimes. We are therefore open to constructive dialogue, whether domestically or in a European forum, on this issue. We intend to discuss further the implications of these proposed amendments with the United Kingdom herbal sector in order to inform our negotiating position.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the supply of unregulated herbal medicinal products via the internet. [85799]

Ms Blears: Any website reported to the Medicines Control Agency, which appears to be in breach of regulations regarding advertising, sale and supply of medicines is investigated. The agency works closely with other Government Departments and law enforcement authorities, both in the United Kingdom and abroad, in an effort to identify and take action where appropriate.

There is evidence that some unlicensed herbal medicinal products, whether sold via the internet or in other ways, may be of poor quality and in some cases may pose a threat to public health. Subject to the successful conclusion of negotiations, the proposed directive on traditional herbal medicinal products would provide a regulatory regime which should allow the public to choose from a wide range of herbal remedies made to assured standards of safety, quality and information. In turn this would make it possible for the public to be given much clearer advice than is currently possible about how to avoid unregulated herbal medicines which may pose a risk to health.

Hospital Meals

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost per hospital meal was (a) before and (b) after implementation of the Government's Better Hospital Food programme; and if he will make a statement. [86881]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 12 December 2002]: The better hospital food programme is designed to improve the quality, availability and access to food in hospitals and is a long-term programme. An additional £38.5 million has been made available to support this programme.

The costs of providing meals varies, depending both on the particular dish involved and the method of production. Typically, a traditional system produces meals more cheaply, while a delivered meals service is more expensive. A report by the Audit Commission in September 2001 found average spending on food and beverages was £2.20 for a cook-serve system, £2.40 for a national health service operated cook-chill/freeze service, and £3.70 for a delivered meals service. However, there are a number of other issues such as overheads and capital replacement charges, which also vary according to the production system in use and which affect overall costs. There is therefore no average per meal cost.

As part of the better hospital food programme, acute hospitals have been asked to include in their menus each day three of the dishes designed for the NHS by the 'leading chef' team. These dishes encompass main meals, desserts, salads and sandwiches. There are now 200 'leading chef' dishes included in the NHS dish selector and average costs for these dishes is no greater than those for other dishes currently in use in NHS hospitals.

Hospital Trusts (Performance Ratings)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the hospital trusts which have had their star rating increased following the publication of the national tables in July. [86937]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 12 December 2002]: One trust, The Royal National Hospital for Rheumatic Diseases, NHS trust, Bath, has had its performance rating reassessed since the publication of the national tables in July resulting in three stars being awarded.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital trusts which previously had a three star rating lost one or more stars in the tables published in July. [86938]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 12 December 2002]: 16 of the acute trusts awarded three stars in the 2000–01 performance ratings lost one or more stars in the 2001–02 performance ratings, published in July 2002.

Stem Cell Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is necessary to obtain a licence from the HFEA before conducting research into stem cell lines from human embryos, with particular reference to derivation and characterisation of such stem cells. [86523]

Ms Blears [holding answer 9 December 2002]: A licence from the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority is required to bring about the creation of embryos in vitro and to keep or use embryos for the purposes of a project of research. All applications for a licence to use embryos to source embryonic stem cell lines will be required to justify why embryonic stem cells are to be used and will be required to provide detailed information on the fate of the stem cells throughout the process.

Furthermore, it will be a condition of all these licences that a sample of all cell lines is placed in the Medical Research Council's (MRC) national stem cell bank. The subsequent use of any stem cell lines derived from embryos will be subject to a code of practice to be produced by the MRC stem cell bank steering committee.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the HFEA was given authority to issue research licences to conduct research involving stem cell lines from human embryos. [86524]

Ms Blears [holding answer 9 December 2002]: Any research project involving the creation, keeping or using of human embryos outside the body must be licensed by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA). To grant a research licence, the HFEA must be satisfied that the research is "necessary or desirable" and that the use of human embryos is essential. Before 2001, the HFEA could grant licences for research projects only for the following specified purposes (Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 Schedule 2, para.3(2):

a) promoting advances in the treatment of infertility;

b) increasing knowledge about the causes of congenital disease;

c) increasing knowledge about the causes of miscarriages;

d) developing more effective techniques of contraception; or

e) developing methods for detecting the presence of gene or chromosome abnormalities in embryos before implantation.

In January 2001, Parliament passed regulations extending the purposes for which research licenses may be authorised to include:

f) increasing knowledge about the development of embryos;

g) increasing knowledge about serious disease;

h) enabling any such knowledge to be applied in developing treatments for serious disease.

Before 2001, the HFEA could, therefore, grant a licence for research projects involving the use of embryos to create stem cell lines if the research was for one of the purposes listed in (a) to (e) above.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what authority the HFEA gave a research licence to Professor Austin Smith at the Centre for Genome Research in Edinburgh to derive and characterise stem cell lines from human embryos in 1997. [86525]

Ms Blears [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority issued a licence to the assisted conception unit at the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, later varied to the Centre for Genome Research, in 1996 for the purposes specified in paragraph 3(2)(a), (b) and (e) of Schedule 2 to the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990.

Learning Disability Services

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the net health and social services expenditure on learning disability services over the past five years on a constant value basis; and what it will be in the next three years, adjusted for inflation at current values. [86314]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities deliver services for people with learning disabilities within the framework of the White Paper "Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century" (Cm 5086), published in March 2001, and its associated advice and guidance. Within that framework it is for councils to decide on the level of current and future expenditure.

The overall level of funding for social services, including that for learning disability, will increase by, on average, 6 per cent. per annum in real terms over the next three years.

Information on net expenditure is not available in the form requested. Details of gross expenditure are in the table.

[1] Adjusted to 1999–2000 prices using HCHS deflator for NHS expenditure and 2000–01 prices using GDP deflator for PSS expenditure. Figures shown for 1999–2000 are not directly comparable with previous years due to estimations used and changes to the calculation methods.

[2] The HCHS expenditure information is based on profiles of expenditure provided by trusts but scaled to match health authorities' total expenditure. Thus, there is a possibility that the figures under estimate the expenditure on services purchased by health authorities from the private and voluntary sectors. It may be the case that hospital expenditure is over estimated and community expenditure is under estimated. These figures exclude health authority overheads.

Lung Cancer

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people died of lung cancer in 2001; and what percentage of the cancer research budget is spent on lung cancer research. [86574]

Ms Blears: There were 26,922 deaths from lung cancer in England in 2001. The recent National Cancer Research Institute (NCRI) report, "Strategic Analysis 2002", analysed most of the directly-funded cancer research of government and charity funders. The analysis revealed that 60 per cent. of research spend was relevant to all tumour sites. The other 40 per cent. was relevant to specific tumour sites. Approximately 3 per cent. of the site-specific research was on lung cancer.

The NCRI has identified lung cancer as an area that might need more attention. We will be working with our research funding partners through the NCRI to fully understand the reasons for this and consider any actions that might be required.

Maidstone Hospital

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 9 December 2002, Official Report, column 157W, regarding Duplex Scans at Maidstone hospital, who Kent and Medway SHA consults on whether a scan is clinically necessary, in cases where patients are referred by a general practitioner. [87232]

Ms Blears [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Decisions on the clinical necessity for duplex scans are made by clinicians at Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells Trust, not Kent and Medway Strategic Health Authority. The strategic health authority, as part of its management function, advised me on the practice at the trust in respect of duplex scans.

Psychiatry

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors per 100,000 people were in training in each year since 1997 for (a) child and adolescent psychiatry, (b) forensic psychiatry, (c) general psychiatry, (d) old age psychiatry, (e) psychotherapy and (f) psychiatry of learning disability. [85638]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows the number of doctors in training within the psychiatry specialties from 1997 to 2001 and a per population figure for 2001 only. Population figures are due to be updated shortly following publication of results from the 2001 population census. This will include a revised set of estimates for the years 1997 to 2000, but these figures are not yet available.

MRSA

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MRSA patients were recorded in NHS hospitals in each of the last eight years; how many and what proportion of NHS hospitals recorded MRSA outbreaks; and how many and what proportion of NHS hospitals have full-time staff dedicated to the prevention and control of MRSA and related infections. [86683]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 12 December 2002]: These data are not collected centrally and I refer the hon. Member to the reply he received on 14 October 2002, Official Report column 521W. This provides the available data on methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections until April 2001 when mandatory MRSA bacteraemia surveillance was introduced. Data from the new surveillance system are available for every acute national health service hospital trust and the first year's results were published in the Communicable Disease Report Weekly on 20 June 2002 and are on the Public Health Laboratory Service website at www.phls.co.uk/publications/cdr/PDFfiles/2002/cdr2502.pdf. Information on the composition of infection control teams is not collected routinely.

NHS Administrative Staff

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the ratio of administrative staff to total number of beds operating in the national health service was in each of the last 10 years. [83287]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS): Ratio of senior managers and managers in Administration and Estates to the daily average number of NHS beds in England, 1991 to 2001

	Senior managers and managers in Administration and Estates (headcount)	Total daily average number of beds	Ratio
1991	13,500	258,550	0.05
1992	16,860	246,080	0.07
1993	20,320	236,170	0.09
1994	23,350	224,380	0.10
1995	20,840	217,510	0.10
1996	21,260	212,680	0.10
1997	22,170	210,520	0.11
1998	22,690	206,410	0.11
1999	24,290	203,340	0.12
2000	25,260	199,730	0.13
2001	27,420	199,670	0.14

Notes:
1. Figures referred to are the overnight beds i.e. beds in wards open overnight.
2. Beds data are collected on a financial basis each year.
3. Senior managers and managers figures were collected on 30 September each year.
4. A new classification of the non-medical work force was introduced in 1995.
5. Information based on this classification is not directly comparable with earlier years.
6. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
7. Ratios are rounded to two decimal places.

Orthopaedic Treatment

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the longest current NHS waiting time is for orthopaedic treatment. [86036]

Mr. Hutton: Data on waiting times is collected by specialty. The relevant specialty is trauma and orthopaedic.

The latest published commissioner data for England in September 2002 show there were 11 patients waiting between 15 and 17 months for inpatient admission in the trauma and orthopaedic specialty.

Overseas Nurse Advice Line

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 4 December 2002, Official Report, column 909, on the overseas nurse advice line, how many whole-time equivalent staff are employed by the advice line; and what the budget for the advice line is for each of the next three years. [87239]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service overseas nurses advice line is operated in conjunction with NHS careers. There is a pool of NHS careers staff employed as call operators, who handle calls in addition to a team with health careers expertise advising on supervised practice and NHS careers.

Decisions on the future financing of the advice line have not yet been made.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 4 December 2002, Official Report, column 909W, on the Overseas Nurse Advice Line, how many calls were received on 08458 50588 in each month since the line was set up. [87240]

Mr. Hutton: Over the three months that the national health service Overseas Nurses Advice Line has been operating it has received a total of 63 calls.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 909W, on the Overseas Nurse Advice Line, how he plans to inform (a) NHS organisations, (b) overseas governments, (c) overseas nurses and (d) other interested parties, of the Overseas Nurse Advice Line. [87241]

Mr. Hutton: National health service organisations, overseas governments and overseas nurses have been informed of the NHS Overseas Nurses Advice Line through various means.

Quarterly briefing meetings held by the chief nursing officer for the strategic health authorities has brought the advice line to the attention of nursing directors and primary care trust lead nurses throughout the NHS. In addition, the advice line was featured in the chief nursing officer's bulletin in October.

Overseas governments with an interest in the recruitment of nurses have been informed about the NHS overseas nurses advice line through the issue of a card advertising the advice line.

Cards advertising the advice line have been produced and distributed by organisations including the Royal College of Nursing and Unison, the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration and Independent Healthcare Association. The Nursing and Midwifery Council will be distributing cards to overseas representatives in the New Year.

Quat

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research he has undertaken to examine the effect on health of using Quat. [82237]

Ms Blears: No research is currently being funded by the Government to examine the effect on health of using Quat. The advisory council on the misuse of drugs' research committee is now actively looking into commissioning research to gain an increased understanding of the risks associated with chewing Quat.

Radiographers

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are for radiographers in acute hospitals; broken down by NHS trust. [85788]

Mr. Hutton: The number of vacancies lasting three months and over are collected by national health service trusts and have been placed in the Library.

Recruitment

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 2 December, Official Report, column 608W, on recruitment, if he has written to NHS organisations with a list of unsuitable nursing agencies who persistently recruit nurses from developing countries, contrary to the code of practice; and what action he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take, against those NHS employers who have used nursing agencies who have breached the code of practice. [86806]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 December 2002]: The Department investigates any agency whose behaviour appears to be inconsistent with the code of practice. The agency will be investigated and given the opportunity to respond to the allegations and reconsider their practice.

National health service organisations are strongly advised to refer to the list, which is available at www.doh.gov.uk/international-recruitment, when establishing new contracts.

Road Traffic Casualties

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) why the maximum charges for the treatment of road traffic casualties by the NHS are to increase from 1 April 2003; [87553]

(2) what consultations have been held with insurers about the proposed changes in the level of charges for the treatment of road traffic casualties by the NHS in April 2003; [87563]

(3) what criteria were used to assess the appropriate level of increase in the charges in connection with the treatment of road traffic casualties by the NHS, set out in the Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Amendment No.2 Regulations 2002; [87554]

(4) what estimate he has made of the impact upon motor insurance premiums of the proposed charges set out in the Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Amendment (No 2) Regulations 2002; [87564]

(5) what changes in NHS income will result in 2003–04 from the Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Amendment (No.2) Regulations 2002. [87555]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Regulations to increase the tariff and cap for the recovery of national health service (NHS) costs following road traffic accidents were laid before Parliament on 11 December 2002. The regulations increase the tariff to take account of hospital and community health services (HCHS) inflation since 1997, which is the year the tariff was set. The regulations also increase the cap, as operational experience has shown that this was set too low when the scheme was introduced in April 1999. The increased cap would still relieve insurers of the full cost of treating those seriously injured in road traffic accidents.

The Department undertook a consultation on the proposed increases, which ran for three months between July and September 2002. Departmental officials discussed the consultation and the proposed increases with members of the insurance industry and their trade bodies.

The increased charges would increase income to NHS hospitals by around £56 million per year. However, as NHS costs are not repaid until the accident victim's compensation claim settles, which takes on average 18 months, NHS hospitals would not feel the full effect of the increases until the latter part of 2004. If this cost was spread evenly among all holders of compulsory motor vehicle insurance, then the cost of the average policy could be expected to rise by around 0.7 per cent., or around £3 per policy.

The consultation on increasing the level of charges and summary of outcome can be found on the Department of Health's website at www.doh.gov.uk/consultations

Smoking

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population smoke cigarettes in each region in England. [86396]

Ms Blears: Information on smoking prevalence for adults aged 16 and over is shown in the table.

Prevalence of smoking, for adults aged 16 and over, by Government Office Region England, 2000

Government Office Region	Percentage
North East	27
North West	30

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abandoned Vehicles

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her policies to deal with abandoned motor vehicles. [85930]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 17 December 2002]: In October 2001 we published a consultation document on measures to remove abandoned and untaxed vehicles from the streets more quickly and, for the longer term, bring forward changes to vehicle registration and licensing procedures to ensure greater accuracy of DVLA's vehicle record.

Regulations reducing the statutory notice periods after which local authorities can remove abandoned vehicles from the highway and the storage periods for unlicensed vehicles came into force on 9 April. Local authorities can now remove those vehicles that they consider merit destruction from the highway after the expiry of a 24 hour notice placed on them.

We have supported pilot schemes in the London boroughs of Newham and Lewisham in which the local authority was given DVLA's powers to wheelclamp and remove unlicensed vehicles after 24 hours. Following the success of the Newham pilot on 10 April, we announced that all councils who wished could operate in the same way.

In addition, councils have targeted over 6,000 abandoned unlicensed vehicles in multi-agency "Operation Cubits" with over 4,000 vehicles crushed and more operations are planned. To date we estimate that the operations have induced more than 15,700 motorists to relicense their vehicles voluntarily bringing in over £2.3 million in additional revenue.

The Government are currently developing proposals for the reform and modernisation of vehicle registration and licensing, to reduce evasion and to bear down on vehicle crime. In response to the recommendations of a report commissioned by the Department for Transport from the Jill Dando Institute of Crime Science, that Department has established a Modernising Vehicle Registration Implementation Board (MVRIB). This includes representatives of motorists' organisations, the motor trade, the police and the insurance industry to advise on and develop those proposals.

The 2002 Finance Act contained provisions under which the responsibility for licensing and taxing vehicles will be placed on the registered keeper, who will remain liable for doing so until such time that the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) has properly been notified of a change of keeper. These proposals will also mean that it is not necessary for a vehicle to be detected on the road for effective enforcement action to take place. The implementation of these new powers is at the heart of MVRIB's agenda.

Agri-environment Schemes

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will set out the timetable for the review of land based English rural development programme agri-environment schemes. [87862]

Mr. Meacher: The agri-environment schemes review consists of three phases. The first phase centred on an initial consultation, held between March and May 2002. This asked for views on the existing schemes and explored what people would like to see in future schemes. There were over 130 responses to this consultation, which were analysed in a report produced in July 2002. This is available on the DEFRA website at: http://defraweb/erdp/schemes/landbased/review/consultnew.htm.

The second phase of the review is currently in progress. It consists of two main areas of work: the production of a framework document setting out the future direction of agri-environment schemes, and the development of a pilot scheme to test the proposed entry-level scheme. The framework document was issued for consultation on 16 December 2002, and responses are sought by 28 February 2003. I announced the pilot areas for the entry level scheme on 14 November 2002 and the pilot scheme is due to be launched next spring.

The third phase of the review will involve the detailed design and development of the main entry-level scheme and a revised higher-tier scheme, intended to incorporate the best features from both the countryside stewardship and environmentally sensitive areas schemes. It is hoped to complete the review in the summer of 2004, when details of both schemes are sent to the European Commission for approval. The new schemes should open for applications early in 2005.

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made on the review of access arrangements within English Rural Development Programme agri-environment schemes; and when the results of the review will be published. [87863]

Mr. Meacher: The analysis of replies to the public consultation on this review will be published on the Department's website shortly and a copy placed in the House Library and the conclusions will feed into the wider Agri-environment Schemes Review.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the change in use of CHP by companies covered by climate change agreements; and if she will make a statement. [87880]

Mr. Meacher: There has been no assessment made of the change in use of HFC by companies covered by climate change agreements. It is estimated that total

HFC emissions arising from all business will be about 29 per cent. below 1995 levels, the baseline year that the UK has chosen to use for its fluorinated gases, in 2010.

Consultation Document

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the organisations to which her Department has issued copies of their consultation document, "Living Places, Powers, Rights and Responsibilities". [87222]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 December 2002]: We have sent copies of the consultation to:

370 local authorities (355 English and 15 Welsh). 394 local authority planning officers also received copies.

97 police authorities and constabularies, including the metropolitan police.

17 Government Departments and offices, including the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, Home Office, Cabinet Office and No. 10.

23 Government related agencies.

114 public bodies and non-governmental organisations.

168 companies.

In all there were over 2,000 copies of the consultation paper sent out.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when copies of "Living Places, Powers, Rights and Responsibilities" were distributed to local authorities. [87223]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Copies of the consultation were mailed out to local authorities the week beginning 4 November, following the urban summit which was held on 31 October and 1 November, when the consultation was launched.

Fisheries

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how long the principle of relative stability in fisheries management will be continued in its present form. [87630]

Mr. Morley: The future provisions on relative stability, along with all other elements of the Common Fisheries Policy, are due to be determined by the Council of Agriculture and Fisheries Ministers at its current meeting.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make contingency plans to establish a fisheries management committee in the event that no Council of Ministers' agreement is established for European Union fisheries management for 2003 onwards. [87631]

Mr. Morley: The Government's objective is to secure a meaningful reform of the Common Fisheries Policy at this Council. We shall strive to ensure that an acceptable agreement is reached. Should there be no agreement on a reformed CFP, the current system for Fisheries Management will continue.

Hydrofluorocarbons

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many voluntary agreements within the refrigeration industry to reduce leakage of hydrofluorocarbons she has made; and what targets exist for future progress; [86494]

(2) if she will make a statement on the progress in securing voluntary agreements within the refrigeration industry to reduce leakage of hydrofluorocarbons. [86495]

Mr. Meacher: In 1996, the Government concluded a voluntary agreement on the use of HFCs with the Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Industry Board (ACRIB) and its member organisations to ensure emissions to atmosphere were minimised. The agreement took the form of a "declaration of intent" in recognition of the fact that the industry is very widely dispersed and that signatories to the agreement could not make a commitment on behalf of those they did not directly represent.

The UK climate change programme published in November 2000 sets out the key elements of the Government's policy on HFCs. During 2000, discussions with ACRIB led Government to conclude that a national registration and competence scheme for refrigerant handlers would be a more effective way of limiting and minimising HFC emissions from the refrigeration sector. The industry is developing a scheme which it proposes to put to Government in early 2003. The Government's intention is to make registration and minimum competence mandatory for companies and refrigerant handlers.

Landfill Tax

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to allow the proceeds from landfill tax to go to local authorities. [87491]

Mr. Meacher: Last month's pre-Budget report announced that the Government would consult on a revenue neutral proposal to increase the landfill tax escalator to £3 per tonne in 2005–06 and to increase the rate of tax by at least £3 per tonne in future years, towards a rate of £35 per tonne. The Government will consult with stakeholders on options for the package, including the recycling of revenue, before making its decisions.

Mr. Julian Heath

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to return the P45 certificate belonging to a constituent, Mr. Julian Heath. [87861]

Alun Michael: I can confirm that Mr. Julian Heath's P45 has been sent to his home address.

Recycling

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the amount of recycled plastic required to meet the target in EC WEEE Directive. [87330]

Mr. Meacher: Figures from a report by the Industry Council for Electronic Equipment Recycling (ICER) show that in 1998 there were about 915,000 tonnes of waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) arising, of which approximately 22 per cent. were plastics. These data are currently being updated.

The WEEE Directive requires that WEEE is recovered and recycled according to 10 categories, with recovery and recycling targets set at between 50 per cent. and 80 per cent. for each category. The plastics content varies considerably between the categories, however, a significant proportion of the plastics in WEEE will need to be recovered or recycled to meet the requirements of the WEEE Directive.

Rural Deprivation

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to allocate resources to pockets of rural deprivation in the delivery of services; and what resources she is making available. [87706]

Alun Michael: Deprivation in rural areas tends not to be as geographically concentrated as in urban areas and it is less meaningful to think in terms of "pockets". DEFRA is currently working with the Countryside Agency and Office for National Statistics to explore a better way to identify rural deprivation. The Countryside Agency has a social exclusion programme worth almost £3 million for the three years 2002–03 to 2004–05 with which to promote demonstration projects and new research to identify and tackle social exclusion in rural areas.

DEFRA and the Countryside Agency are actively promoting the equitable allocation of services in rural areas by helping Government Departments to "rural proof" their policies and programmes. Following the Rural White Paper we allocated over £47 million through the Vital Villages scheme, which in the first instance runs until 2003–04. This is aimed at tackling the problem of dwindling services at the root, by enabling local people to set up their own enterprises.

I refer the hon. Member to my earlier reply given to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Andrew George) on 25 November 2002, Official Report, columns 55–57W, which gives further information on DEFRA funded projects.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH

Ahmed Omar Saeed Sheikh

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on developments in and involvement of UK representatives in the case of Ahmed Omar Saeed Sheikh in Pakistan. [84647]

Mr. Rammell: Mr. Sheikh remains in detention. The Pakistani authorities are fully aware of our opposition to the death penalty, both generally and in Mr. Sheikh's case. We will make further representations if appropriate.

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to which bodies his Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87390]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 607W.

Civil Servants

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many civil servants are employed by his Department; and how much money was spent by his Department in the last 12 months, in each local authority area. [87263]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 607W.

Convention on the Future of Europe

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he plans to hold a referendum on the outcome of the Convention on the Future of Europe. [87931]

Mr. MacShane: No.

European Constitution

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with (a) the EU institutions and (b) European partners about the development of a European constitution. [87619]

Mr. MacShane: The Government works closely with members of the EU institutions and our European partners on a range of EU issues in the Convention on the Future of Europe.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government is in favour in principle of a written European constitution. [87620]

Mr. MacShane: The Government supports an EU constitutional treaty that makes clear that the EU is a union of Nation States, and clearly and concisely sets out what the EU does, and how it does it. This would help to deliver a better organised EU, more accessible to EU citizens and better able to deliver real and practical benefits.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with other member states of the Commonwealth regarding the actions of the Zimbabwean Government towards the eviction of white farmers from their land. [83885]

Mr. Rammell: Foreign Office Ministers and officials have regular discussions with their Commonwealth counterparts about the economic, political and humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe. Zimbabwe's unsustainable programme of land seizures forms part of these discussions.

My noble Friend Baroness Amos, FCO Minister for Africa, had the most recent contact, with the South African, Mozambican and Mauritian Foreign Ministers in Maputo on 7–8 November.

DEFENCE

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Challenger II tanks, (b) Warrior, (c) Sakern, (d) FV430, (e) Sabre, (f) Scimitar, (g) Striker, (h) Spartan, (i) Sultan, (j) Samson, (k) Samaritan armoured vehicles, (l) Challenger recovery vehicles, (m) Stormer, (n) Shielder, (o) Fuchs NBC vehicles, (p) AS90, (q) MLRS and (r) M578 were fully operational in each quarter of 2002; what percentage of fleet size this represents in each case; and if he will make a statement. [87922]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

AS90

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the cost of completing the environmental enhancements to the AS90 will remain within the expected budget; when he expects the enhancements to be completed; and whether he has set a deadline for completion. [87042]

Mr. Ingram: The cost of completing environmental enhancements to the AS90 is expected to remain within the budget originally forecast. We expect that the necessary modifications will be completed in time for possible future operations but I am withholding specific details of this timescale under Exemption 1 (Defence, security and international relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. To provide such information risks jeopardising our contingency planning and harming operational security.

In addition to the AS90s that we are modifying for contingency operations, consideration is being given to modifying further AS90s as part of the normal planning round. A decision on this has yet to be taken.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many expressions of interest he has received from contractors for the environmental enhancements of the AS90; and whether decisions have been made on the award of the contract. [87043]

Mr. Ingram: The contract for the environmental enhancement of AS90 has been sought via a single source prime contract with RO Defence plc, the design authority for AS90. A number of sub-contracts, which are the responsibility of the prime contractor, may also be let. We expect to award the prime contract shortly.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what problems have been experienced with the environmental enhancements to the AS90; what progress has been made; and if he will make a statement. [87044]

Mr. Ingram: No significant problems have been experienced with the environmental enhancements to the AS90, and good progress is being made.

Cruise Missiles

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cruise missiles are held by his Department and if he will make a statement on their readiness. [87918]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding the information requested in accordance with Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (Defence, Security and International Relations).

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many consultants have been recruited to Defence Medical Services through the scheme which offers a £50,000 joining bonus. [84623]

Dr. Moonie: The initiative to offer £50,000 'golden hellos' to consultants in certain key shortage categories and to vocationally trained general medical practitioners, in return for a five year commission, was only announced on 19 November 2002. It is therefore too early for any individuals to have been recruited into the Defence Medical Services.

European Security and Defence Policy

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to maintain the distinction between the roles of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and the Common European Security and Defence Policy. [87310]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 17 December 2002]: NATO and the European Security and Defence Policy have clearly-defined and complementary roles. NATO forms the basis of the collective defence of its members and plays an important role in crisis management. ESDP allows the EU to launch military operations where NATO as a whole is not engaged, within the scope of the Petersberg tasks, which are defined in the EU Treaty as > "humanitarian and rescue tasks, peace-keeping tasks and tasks of combat forces in crisis management, including peacemaking."

These roles have been reflected in agreed language in both organisations: for example, the conclusions of the 2000 Nice European Council, and the communiqué from the North Atlantic Council meeting a few days later. On this basis, the EU and NATO have agreed to create a strategic partnership between the two organisations in crisis management.

Fire Dispute

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value was in his Department's Balance Sheet at 31 March of the equipment used in providing services withdrawn by the fire brigades. [87858]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 December 2002]: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Friendly Fire

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the armed forces' IFF status for preventing friendly fire incidents. [87921]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom has fitted Identification Friend or Foe (IFF) to its front line aircraft, ships and land-based air defence systems. The current generation of IFF equipment (IFF Mk 10) is in the process of being replaced by an updated system, the Mk 12 standard, through the Successor IFF (SIFF) programme. The Mk 12 provides additional security by means of high reliability encrypted interrogation of platforms. IFF is one of a number of methods employed by the armed forces to assist Combat Identification and to minimise the risk of friendly fire incidents. Combat Identification is achieved through a triad of measures: Situational Awareness, Target Identification, and Tactics, Techniques and Procedures. These measures are complementary and IFF plays a part in improving situational awareness and contributes to effective identification.

Gulf War

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what drugs were administered to servicemen during the Gulf War; what drugs have been (a) administered to date and (b) medically approved to be administered to servicemen serving in Iraq at a future date; and if he will make a statement. [86246]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 December 2002]: No decisions have yet been made concerning military action against Iraq.

Service personnel are given drugs appropriate to any medical or dental conditions they may experience whether at home or on deployment. In addition, regular and volunteer reserve forces personnel are offered a range of routine vaccinations as part of an established immunisation programme. Personnel deploying to areas with a specific health hazard, and those in special occupational risk groups, such as medical personnel, may be given additional vaccinations. Drugs or vaccinations may also be provided to help protect service personnel against the effects of chemical and biological weapons.

Drugs and medicines given to armed forces personnel by medical staff are normally those approved by the Medicines Control Agency (MCA). As is the case in the NHS, drugs and medicines that are not licensed in the United Kingdom by the MCA may be used if prescribed and administered by a doctor.

HMS Ocean

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what maintenance work is being done to HMS Ocean; what the cost of this maintenance is; when the decision was made to do the maintenance work; what the original planned cost was of the work; and if he will make a statement. [87803]

Mr. Ingram: HMS Ocean completed a planned upkeep maintenance period in November at a cost of around £5 million. This package of work was completed satisfactorily. During post upkeep trials however, the Port Main Engine suffered a major defect. The defect resulted from a ship system failure which could not have been anticipated and was not related to the work undertaken during the maintenance period. The cost of this repair work is approximately £450,000.

Inoculations

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what risk assessment has been carried out on the side effects of recent inoculations given to armed services personnel posted to the middle east. [82691]

Dr. Moonie: Decisions on vaccinations for service personnel are made on the basis of expert medical advice and take full account of any risk from adverse reactions, balanced against the risks from disease. Routine inoculations given to service personnel deploying to the middle east are licensed products that have been rigorously tested for safety. This includes vaccination against anthrax, which has been offered to personnel deploying to the middle east since May 2001 under the Department's voluntary immunisation programme (VIP). All personnel who elect to receive immunisation against anthrax under the VIP are briefed on, and instructed to report to medical staff, any adverse reactions to the vaccine. No serious adverse reactions have been reported.

Pilots

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the shortfall is of trained pilots in the (a) Royal Navy, (b) Army and (c) Royal Air Force. [87855]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 December 2002]: For the Royal Navy the overall shortfall of trained pilots is currently 51 (9 per cent.). This however, includes staff and administrative posts; the RN's front-line shortfall is less than 5 per cent. For the Army the shortfall is 10 (1.2 per cent.) and in the RAF the current shortfall of junior officer pilots is 109 (7.3 per cent.) of the requirement.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of his Department's signed PFI contracts have been independently audited since they were signed and started; who conducted the audit; when the audit took place; and if he will make a statement. [87580]

Mr. Ingram: The NAO is the only body to have independently audited a selection of the Department's PFI contracts. The individual project reports can be found on the NAO website at www.nao.gov.ukypublications/vfimsublist/vfm_ppp.htm.

The projects covered by the studies carried out are as follows:

Studies relating to specific defence PFI contracts

Title	Date
Ministry of Defence: Redevelopment of MOD Main Building HC 748, Parliamentary Session 2001–02	18 April 2002
Ministry of Defence: The Joint Services Command and Staff College HC 537, Parliamentary Session 2001–02	7 February 2002
The Private Finance Initiative: The Contract for the Defence Fixed Telecommunications System HC 328, Parliamentary Session 1999–2000	23 March 2000
Ministry of Defence: The Procurement of Non-Combat Vehicles for the Royal Air Force HC 738, Parliamentary Session 1998–99	19 August 1999

The PFI training element of the Apache Helicopter contract was addressed in the following:

Title	Date
Ministry of Defence Building an Air Manoeuvre Capability: The Introduction of the Apache Helicopter HC1246, Parliamentary Session 2001–02	31 October 2002

QinteiQ

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what freehold (a) land and (b) buildings have been transferred by his Department to the ownership of QinetiQ, what the latest estimated value is of those assets; and how much (i) land and (ii) buildings has been leased to QinetiQ on leases in excess of 10 years. [87772]

Dr. Moonie: When QinetiQ was vested as a plc on 1 July 2001, the following sites were transferred to QinetiQ: Aberporth Airfield, Alverstoke, Angle, Aquila, Bedford (three sites), Bincleaves, Chertsey, Christchurch, Cobbett Hill, Farnborough (Cody, Pyestock and Pyestock North), Fraser, Funtington North, Haslar (DERA site, not Hospital), Hurn (three sites), Hutton Moor, Malvern, Pershore, Portsdown, West Drayton and Fort Halstead. The last formal valuation which included all these properties was on 30 June 2001. At this point, the total value of the land and buildings transferred from MOD to QinetiQ reported in the opening balance sheet of QinetiQ was £342 million.

Detailed terms and conditions for a number of leases are still subject to final negotiation. Currently, the only lease from the Ministry of Defence to QinetiQ with a term exceeding 10 years is for the satellite communications centre at West Freugh.

Air-to-Air Refuelling

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where each of the air-to-air refueller aircraft held by his Department is; and if he will make a statement on the level of serviceability of each. [87919]

Mr. Ingram: The following table show the location and serviceability of the aircraft of the Royal Air Force's Air to Air refuelling fleet at 0800 hours on 16 December 2002 and presents no more than a snapshot in time at that particular moment. All aircraft in 2nd, 3rd and 4th line maintenance are undergoing scheduled maintenance. Aircraft that are in 1st and 2nd line maintenance could be brought back into service very quickly if required.

Note:

Only six of the total of nine Tristar aircraft owned by the Department are air-to-air refuelling aircraft, the remainder are air transport aircraft.

Tracer

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the United Kingdom invested in the development of TRACER before it was cancelled by the US partners. [86380]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The United Kingdom agreed jointly with our US partners not to proceed beyond the assessment phase of the TRACER programme which completed in July 2002. Total UK investment in the programme was £131 million. Arrangements have been put in place to utilise key technologies developed in the TRACER programmes in new programmes such as the future rapid effects system.

PRIME MINISTER

Referendums

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on holding referendums. [87933]

The Prime Minister: The Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 established a generic statutory framework for the conduct of referendums held across the UK, or a referendum held in Scotland, Wales, England or Northern Ireland, or in any region in England. Dedicated primary legislation is required for any individual referendum. The Regional Assemblies (Preparations) Bill, currently before the House, provides for referendums to be held in any of the eight English regions outside of London.

TRANSPORT

Correspondence

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to reply to the letter of 21 October from the right hon. Member for Hitchin and Harpenden requesting a meeting with local groups to discuss plans to expand Luton airport. [88058]

Mr. Spellar: We are considering the request made in the letter from the right hon. Member to meet him and members of Luton and District Association for the Control of Airport Noise (LADACAN), and will respond shortly.

Terrorism

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve security at small ports and airfields to prevent entry of (a) terrorist suspects and (b) material for use in terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [87504]

Mr. Jamieson: In the UK in the immediate aftermath of September 2001 attacks we immediately tightened the security regime for commercial flights by small aircraft. Prior to that, commercial aircraft of less than 15 tonnes (maximum take off weight) were outside the requirements of the National Aviation Security Programme. That exemption has been removed, and aircraft of any weight are now subject to the programme.

The operators of such aircraft and the managers of the aerodromes they operate from have been issued with the relevant directions and guidance, and Department for Transport inspectors monitor compliance and undertake enforcement, prioritising those locations where the risks are judged greatest. As with all aspects of the regime, these measures are kept under review.

A14

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to add the A14 widening project to the Targeted Programme of Improvements. [87449]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency is progressing preparatory work on the A14 improvement with a view to recommending to the Secretary of State the most suitable design to be included in our Targeted Programme of Improvements. This work is taking longer than expected but I hope that we would be in a position to announce the results of that work in the new year.

Aircraft Noise

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what dedicated phone lines exist for members of the public to complain about noise resulting from aircraft. [88083]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department does not have a dedicated phone line for members of the public to complain about aircraft noise. Handling of complaints is a local matter for the airport management. Some airports maintain dedicated complaint lines.

EU Transport Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the outcome was of the Transport Council held in Brussels on 5 December; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [87253]

Mr. Jamieson: The transport segment of the Transport, Energy and Telecommunications Council was held in Brussels on 5–6 December, my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport attended on the first day, and I attended on the second day, when the Prestige incident was discussed.

The Council came to an agreement on the Single European Sky package. The aim of the four regulations making up the package is to improve the efficiency of air traffic management across the EU, thereby reducing air traffic delays. The United Kingdom has been a strong supporter of this package from the outset and I am very pleased to be able to report the successful outcome. Civil/military co-operation is an important aspect of air traffic management, and the member states made a declaration agreeing to co-operate on military aspects.

The Commission presented its recent Communication on the consequences for European aviation policy of the recent ECJ rulings on aviation agreements. The Commission called for rapid progress on concluding an EU-US aviation agreement, the Commissioner having written to Ministers, asking them to denounce their existing agreements with the US, which, following the ECJ rulings, the Commission believed were no longer valid. There was general agreement that member states and the Commission needed to discuss the consequences of the ruling urgently, including the question of a Commission mandate for negotiations with the US. COREPER was asked to work on proposals to be put to the Council.

The Council agreed on a Regulation providing for new levels of compensation to air passengers in the event of denied boarding, cancellation and delay. A majority of Ministers accepted three levels of compensation: 250 euros for all flights of 1,500 km or less, 400 euros for intra-EU flights of more than 1,500 km and other flights between 1,500–3,500 km, and 600 euros for all other flights. These compensation levels will be reviewed four years after the Regulation comes into effect. The UK voted against the Regulation because in the absence of a link to the ticket price it could damage the interests of consumers of "no-frills" air services. During the debate, the Minister of State had voiced concern at the impact on the services of no-frills carriers, pointing out that the minimum compensation level was almost four times the average cost of a no-frills ticket. Following a suggestion from some member states that the scope of the Regulation be extended to certain passengers returning to the EU from non-Community airports, it was agreed that the Commission would publish a report on this issue.

Conclusions were agreed setting out the basis for the continuation of the Galileo satellite navigation project, including the tendering procedure, and addressing the importance of relations with third countries. A final decision on whether to include a Public Regulated Service (PRS) in the project is to be taken before the end-of 2003. The UK and the Netherlands entered a Minutes Statement stressing that they could not accept any PRS that would overlay the US GPS M-Code.

The Council debated the second package of rail measures. The presidency noted the progress that had been made on this package of five proposals, designed to progress the development of more harmonised technical standards for interoperability, harmonise safety regulation processes, to open up access to the market for all rail freight services, and to establish a European Rail Agency. In discussion of the main outstanding issues on the safety and interoperability proposals there was a consensus for member states to be able to maintain safety levels above any harmonised minimum standard, and general support for extending the scope of the interoperability requirements. The presidency concluded that work should continue on the package. Greece made clear that it hoped to reach agreement during its presidency.

There was a debate on action to be taken following the Prestige accident. I, in common with other Ministers and the Commission, generally welcomed the presidency's approach in the Conclusions put to the Council. I joined others in arguing for better quality port state control inspections, and expressed the UK view that in general there should be co-ordinated EU actions leading to improvements in the international regulatory framework. The Conclusions reaffirmed the support of member states for the establishment of a supplementary compensation fund, developed in the IMO, to the benefit of the victims of oil pollution. This would enhance the existing international fund. The UK's concern was that the EU should not commit itself at this stage to its own fund in the event of failure of negotiations in the IMO, for fear of prejudicing those negotiations, and we secured an amendment to this effect. The Conclusions also include commitments to a faster phasing out of single-hulled tankers and restrictions on those carrying very heavy oil. There is to be an analysis of available double-hull tanker capacity. Also included are: better implementation of port state control obligations, and possible measures by member states to prohibit within 200 miles of their coasts traffic carrying dangerous and polluting goods.

The Council agreed on a Regulation establishing the Marco Polo programme to grant community financial aid to projects designed to achieve the shift of freight transport from road to other modes. The programme will have a total budget of 75 million euros.

Political agreement was reached on a Regulation to prohibit the use of environmentally damaging anti-fouling paints on ships, in accordance with the latest IMO agreements.

Conclusions were agreed on the integration of environment and sustainable development into transport policy, a continuation of the process begun at the Cardiff European Council in 1998.

The Council debated the issue of Alpine transit and the ecopoint system for transit through Austria. Agreement could not be reached, and the presidency submitted the dossier to the General Affairs and External Relations Council.

During the Council, Ministers signed the Agreement on Maritime Transport between the European Community and its member states, and the People's Republic of China.

Guided Bus Routes

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will to announce whether Cambridgeshire County Council has been successful in its bid for a guided bus along the Cambridge-Huntingdon route. [88150]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department is still appraising the proposals. As this would be a large and expensive scheme, we have asked independent external consultants to undertake a technical audit of the information received, in order to help us form a view on whether the proposal passes the established tests that determine eligibility for government funding. We will continue to work with the promoters to resolve outstanding issues as soon as possible, and would hope to be able to give them a provisional view of the scheme in advance of the next local transport investment settlement. This would be without prejudice to any statutory approvals that may be required.

Motorway Congestion

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he will make of the South and West Yorkshire multi-modal study into motorway congestion; if he will set up further studies with a broader focus; and if he will bring forward the further investment into rail and tram routes suggested in the study. [87432]

Mr. Jamieson: We are currently considering the study recommendations together with the comments received from the Yorkshire and Humber Assembly and others. An announcement giving our response to the study recommendations and on the way forward will be made in spring 2003.

Rail Passenger Partnership

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many applications there have been for the Rail Passenger Partnership in rural areas since its launch; how many have been accepted; and what the average amount spent on each bid has been to date. [88144]

Mr. Jamieson: The Rail Passenger Partnership (RPP) scheme was launched in 1999 with a budget of £105 million over three years. In December 2001 the Strategic Rail Authority re-launched RPP with a budget of £400 million until 2010–11.

It is not possible to give a precise figure for the amount spent exclusively in rural areas, as many of the schemes for which funding has been awarded by the SRA are of benefit to rural and non-rural areas. However, since the launch of the Rail Passenger Partnership scheme, applications for 68 schemes containing a rural element have been received. Of these, 36 schemes have been approved for funding. There are a further 13 schemes with a rural element where the Strategic Rail Authority are awaiting formal bids. From the total of those approved bids containing a rural element, the average RPP funding awarded is around £100,000.

Railways

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of changes in the average level of insurance paid per annum since 1995 within the railway industry related to cover for (a) rolling stock, (b) stations, (c) personnel, (d) passengers and (e) other infrastructure. [87628]

Mr. Jamieson: In February 2001, the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) took over responsibility for approving all licensed operators1 third party insurance arrangements from the Rail Regulator. Neither the SRA nor the Regulator holds information on premiums paid.

Scottish Airports (Public Transport Facilities)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of passengers who flew from (a) Edinburgh, (b) Glasgow and (c) Prestwick airports travelled to the airport by public transport in each year since 1995. [88082]

Mr. Jamieson: The available information is as follows.

Percentage of passengers arriving or departing by public transport[1]

	Edinburgh airport	Glasgow airport
1996	37	31
2001	46	34

[1] Taxi/minicab or bus/coach. For passengers whose journey included more than one mode, the final mode has been used in the calculation.

Secretary of State Representative

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 673, what resources the Secretary of State representative will have at his disposal; where he is based and if the Secretary of State has powers to intervene to direct him to act. [87521]

Mr. Jamieson: (1) The following major resources are available to SOSREP:

Aircraft

2 surveillance aircraft and 2 dispersant spraying aircraft.

Helicopters

4 x search and rescue helicopters.

Emergency towing vessels

Four Government funded emergency towing vessels, strategically placed around the UK.

Counter pollution and salvage stockpiles

The MCA has extensive stockpiles of specialised counter pollution and salvage equipment located at Milford Haven and Burnt Island and can provide equipment such as thermal imaging cameras and intrinsically safe equipment in the event of an incident.

Personnel

In the event that SOSREP is unavailable when an incident occurs, the following officers may also exercise the SOSREP powers: the Maritime and Coastguard Agency's chief executive, director of operations and deputy director of operations.

The MCA has 10 designated marine casualty officers (MCOs) around the country that during an incident would go aboard a casualty to act for SOSREP.

SOSREP has one full time administrative support officer that deals with the every day running of the SOSREP system.

SOSREP also has a list of independent call-off contractors that can provide salvage, technical or specialist advice. During incidents when a salvage control unit has been set up, SOSREP can request additional administrative support and this is usually provided by the coastguard service.

Buildings and offices

SOSREP's office is located within the Maritime and Coastguard Agency's headquarters in Southampton. SOSREP has access to all the facilities within the agency's building including the maritime emergency incident room from which the first stages of an incident are often controlled until the individual response units have been mobilised.

SOSREP also receives information from, and can make use of, the 19 coastguard stations that are located around the UK coastline.

(2) The powers of the Secretary of State:

Lord Donaldson's 1999 Review of Salvage and Intervention and their Command and Control concluded that:

"Ministers are entitled to be kept informed in the case of more serious incidents and may subsequently be accountable to Parliament. However, whilst operations are in progress, they must stand aside, and be seen to stand aside, leaving operational controls in the hands of the Secretary of State's specially trained and appointed representative. As in military operations, with which a serious incident has much in common, Ministers must back the man in control or sack him."

This is the principle on which the UK operates the SOSREP function. It is this which sets the UK's response to incidents apart from that of all other nations.

Stingray

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 214W, on the Stingray system, how the revenue generated from enforcement against VED evaders caught by the Stingray systems compared with the target set in October 2001; and if he will make a statement. [88149]

Mr. Jamieson: No separate target was set for the Stingray ANPR camera systems in October 2001. The Stingray system was intended to, and did, contribute towards the total VED enforcement target of 720,000 successful cases for the year 2001–02. The actual figure achieved was 799,800 cases.

Trains (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve rail services between Manchester and Blackpool serving parts of Chorley borough area; and what plans he has to increase the number of trains stopping at Euxton Balshaw lane station. [87516]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA is combining the local and regional services currently operated by Arriva Trains Northern and First North Western—including those between Manchester and Blackpool—to form a new 'northern' franchise, in line with its new franchising policy announced on 6 November. The SRA expects the franchise to be operational in summer 2004. There are no specific plans to increase the number of trains stopping at Euxton Balshaw lane station at present, but operators can seek to increase service levels at their own discretion.

Vehicle Excise Duty

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many successful cases against evasion of vehicle excise duty there were between October 2001 and October 2002. [88084]

Mr. Jamieson: In the 13 months between October 2001 and October 2002 DVLA took successful action against 870,383 offenders.

TREASURY

Airport Vehicles

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of fuel taxation of land vehicles used solely within the precincts of UK airports. [88081]

John Healey: Vehicles operating within the confines of an airport are usually unlicensed vehicles not used on public roads. As such, they are entitled to use rebated gas oil (red diesel) as fuel. Rebated gas oil carries a duty rate of 3.13p per litre.

Bioethanol

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 257W, on bioethanol fuel, what research he has published on the effect the level of duty on bioethanol fuel has had on (a) the British sugar industry, (b) British farmers and (c) the manufacturing sector. [87794]

John Healey: We have not published any research on this subject.

Business Support

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 257W, on business support, when he expects the RDA pilots to be completed; and when a decision about the general introduction of RDA-led management and co-ordination of business support will be made. [87785]

John Healey: Pilots of RDA-led management and co-ordination of regional business support are currently in the developmental stage. The Small Business Service (SBS) and HM Treasury are continuing to work closely with RDAs to work up their proposals. An evaluation framework is being designed to capture the key learning points from the pilots. More details on timings will be announced in due course.

Climate Change

David Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with manufacturers about the effect of the climate change levy on UK competitiveness. [87672]

John Healey: As part of the normal process of contact with business, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Treasury ministerial team have met a variety of businesses and business organisations and have heard a range of representations. As the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his answer of 11 February, Official Report, columns 114–15, in line with previous Administrations, it is not this Government's practice to provide details of the meetings they routinely have with a wide range of organisations.

Convergence

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will deposit in the Library the UK's 2002 convergence programme, arising from Article 7 of Council Regulation (EC) No 1466/97 of the Stability and Growth Pact, before 19 December; and if he will make a statement. [87944]

Ruth Kelly: The UK's 2002 convergence programme will be made available to both Houses of Parliament once it is published.

Customs and Excise

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the government policy on rulings in writing given by Customs and Excise Officers, as set out on 21 July 1978, Official Report, column 426, applies to oral (a) VAT advice obtained by telephone from the Department's National Advice Service and (b) VAT advice obtained from a Customs officer by e-mail; and if he will make a statement. [87625]

John Healey: The policy set out on 21 July 1978, Official Report, columns 426–27, has been expressed in a published concession which provides that:

> If a Customs and Excise officer, with the full facts before him has given a clear and unequivocal ruling on VAT in writing or, knowing the full facts, has misled a registered person to his detriment, any assessment of VAT due will be based on the correct ruling from the date the error was brought to the registered person's attention.

The concession applies, in these terms, to VAT rulings given over the telephone by Customs, including their National Advice Service, and to VAT rulings given by officers in writing and communicated by letter, fax or e-mail.

Death Duty

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to (a) reduce the percentage of death duty paid, and (b) raise the qualifying value of exemption from death duty. [87373]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor considers all taxes as part of his annual Budget judgment.

European Tax Harmonisation

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on Franco-German plans for European tax harmonisation. [87015]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government's view is that fair tax competition is the way forward, not proposals for tax harmonisation. The Government will not support any action at European level that would threaten jobs and investment or damage the competitive position of British business.

HIPC Initiative

Tony Worthington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made to secure the US$1 billion for the HIPC initiative that is not financed; and if he will make a statement. [87571]

John Healey: The UK government have been at the forefront of the international debate on debt relief issues, and continues to press for the rapid and full implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative.

At the G7 Summit in Kananaskis in June 2002, the UK helped secure agreement for the G7 to fund their share of the financing shortfall in the enhanced HIPC initiative, recognising that it would be up to US$1 billion.

At the annual meetings of the World bank and IMF in September the UK took a strong lead by pledging its share of the funds needed in advance. The development committee communiqué welcomed the pledges of support from the UK and others, and called on other countries to make firm pledges as a matter of urgency.

The UK and 16 other donors have now agreed pledges totalling $850 million to the HIPC trust fund. EU member states have also called on the European Commission to make a contribution through the European Development Fund.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will seek further independent reviews of IMF growth projections for HIPC countries; and if he will make a statement. [87573]

John Healey: At the United Nations General Assembly Special Session on children in May 2002, the Chancellor called for greater caution over the forecasts used to calculate debt sustainability for HIPCs. And G7 leaders agreed, at their meeting in June, that the IMF and World bank should ensure that forecasts of debt sustainability are made on the basis of prudent and cautious assumptions about growth and exports. Therefore, the UK is pleased to note that in preparation for the annual meetings of the International Monetary and Financial Committee and Development Committee in September 2002, IMF and World bank staff committed to develop alternative macroeconomic scenarios, including a policy-based "optimistic" and a "conservative" scenario that would reflect country's vulnerabilities and the uncertainties of external environment. IMF and World bank staff are also expected to base their own growth projections on a thorough analysis of the likely sources of growth and to present such analyses explicitly in discussions with authorities, as well as in staff documents.

The Independent Evaluations Office (IEO) of the IMF has been discussing its work programme for 2003, proposing an evaluation of the poverty reductions strategy papers and the poverty reduction and growth facility approach. The UK has contributed to that discussion to ensure the IEO can conduct a thorough assessment.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to release the concluding statement of the International Monetary Fund Article IV consultations by means of a written ministerial statement; and if he will make a statement. [87626]

John Healey: The IMF's concluding statement at the end of the 2002 Article IV consultations was published by the IMF on 9 December. Copies of the statement were also placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Less Polluting Vehicles

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further proposals he has to increase the tax incentives to motorists for mileage on business use to change to less polluting vehicles. [87325]

John Healey: The new company car tax system linking the charge on the benefit of a company car to the level of its carbon dioxide emissions came into effect in April this year.

The Inland Revenue is undertaking an extensive exercise to evaluate the effects of the reforms.

Any changes to the system will be made in the context of the Chancellor's Budget judgment.

Public Liability Insurance

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has made an assessment of the implications of changes in public liability insurance for constituency offices and venues where parliamentary advice surgeries are held; and if he will make a statement. [86207]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have been asked to reply.

Parliament provides combined employers and public liability insurance for its Members. We are not aware of any changes to the scope of the public liability insurance.

We have been advised that when we renew our policy at the end of March 2003, the ceiling for indemnity in respect of terrorist acts under the employers' liability provision will be reduced from £10 million to £5 million. We will inform Members of the terms of the new policy.

Tax Avoidance

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what financial institutions based in the City of London have used offshore financial arrangements in the last three years as a smeans of avoiding liability for employers national insurance; and if he will make a statement; [R] [87710]

(2) what steps he intends to take to remove the opportunity for financial institutions based in the City of London to avoid liability for national insurance by paying their employees who work in the UK under an offshore arrangement; [R] [87711]

(3) what recent reports he has received relating to tax avoidance schemes which involve the use of offshore arrangements in the payment of employees as a vehicle for avoiding (a) tax and (b) national insurance liability. [R] [87713]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are committed to closing loopholes in the tax and NICs systems, which allow some people to avoid paying their fair share, increasing the burden on others. In his pre-Budget report the Chancellor announced that he was introducing measures to counter the avoidance of tax and national insurance contributions through the use of employees benefit trusts. I cannot comment on the activities of individual companies.

Training and Management Courses

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 266W, on training and management courses, when he will publish the consultation document described. [87791]

John Healey: The Government are in discussion with a number of high street banks on the detail of their proposal and will consult small businesses in due course.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in each of the wards in the Wansbeck constituency benefit from receipt of the working families tax credit. [88158]

Dawn Primarolo: I understand from the Office for National Statistics that they expect to publish these figures within the next few weeks as part of neighbourhood statistics.

CABINET OFFICE

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to reform non-departmental public bodies at the regional level. [86325]

Mr. Alexander: I have no plans for major reforms to the way that non-departmental public bodies operate at a regional level. However, the White Paper 'Your Region, Your Choice' sets out the Government's proposals to strengthen the existing regional institutions, including Regional Development Agencies (RDAs), who now enjoy increased funding and flexibility in the way that their resources can be used. In the future, in those regions where voters choose in a referendum to have an elected assembly, the RDA will be accountable to the elected assembly in the region, which will appoint the Chair and Board members and publish the regional economic strategy. Elected regional assemblies will also have a significant influence over other bodies such as the local Learning and Skills Councils, Small Business Service, Strategic Rail Authority, Environment Agency and cultural bodies, through making appointments, being consulted on strategies and co-ordinating activity.

Regulatory Impact Unit

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the employment costs are, including benefits, of (a) ministers representing the Regulatory Impact Unit and (b) special advisers and their supporting staff retained by the Regulatory Impact Unit. [87607]

Mr. Alexander: No special advisers are retained by the Regulatory Impact Unit (RIU). The one part-time special adviser and two Ministers employed in the Cabinet Office will spend some of their time on RIU-related issues but the cost of this time is not separately identifiable from the time spent by them on other issues.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Agency Workers

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with her European counterparts regarding the Agency Workers Directive; whether she has sought to make amendments to the Directive as it stands; and if she will make a statement. [87663]

Alan Johnson: As I said in the debate in European Standing Committee C on 10 July 2002, the Government would like to see further flexibilities introduced to the proposal. I have been discussing and will continue to discuss this proposal with Ministers in other member states, MEPs and Commissioner Diamantopoulou. I shall be producing an Explanatory Memorandum and Regulatory Impact Assessment on the revised proposal.

Business Leaders

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 1039, if she will list the business leaders to whom she spoke between 27 November and 5 December, stating in each case whether the agreement to which she refers was volunteered. [87515]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 16 December 2002]: As the Official Report, makes clear, I was referring to a wide range of discussions with business leaders since Budget 2002, including several large meetings.

Christmas Day Trading

Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response she has received from major retailers to her appeal not to open on Christmas Day; and what action she plans for future years as a result of that response. [87987]

Alan Johnson: Consultation of major retailers earlier in the year indicated that the majority did not plan to open on Christmas Day 2002 or in future years.

The need for any further action will be considered in the light of the practice of retailers at Christmas this year.

Election Addresses

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what legislation the Post Office is required to deliver election addresses free of charge at general elections; what the cost of delivery was at the last general election (a) in each constituency and (b) in total; and by whom those costs are met. [87342]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 16 December 2002]: A candidate's right to send election address post free is provided for in Section 91 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 as amended by paragraph 17 of Schedule 8 to the Postal Services Act 2000. Section 91 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 entitles a candidate at a parliamentary election (subject to such reasonable terms and conditions as the universal service provider may specify) to send free of any charge certain specified postal communications to each elector. Cost is a matter that falls within the day-to-day responsibility of Royal Mail Group plc and I have therefore asked the Chairman to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Employers Liability Insurance

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what recent assessment she has made of the ability of small businesses to secure Employers' Liability Insurance; [87405]

(2) how many businesses have gone into liquidation citing the inability to obtain affordable Employers' Liability Insurance in the last 12 months. [87403]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As businesses enter liquidation proceedings for a number of reasons, it is not possible to single out one issue, such as difficulty in obtaining Employers Liability Insurance as the sole cause of such proceedings.

However, my Department is very concerned by reports of significant rises in insurance costs, particularly for small businesses, and is aware of the difficulties that this has posed for some firms.

As announced in the Chancellor's pre-Budget report in November, the Government are conducting a review to assess the scale and nature of difficulties with the Employer's Liability Insurance system. The Department for Work and Pensions is leading the review and my Department will play a full and active role to represent the needs of business. Further details about the review are available at www.dwp. gov.uk/ publications/2002/mdex.htm.

Mozambique

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the volume of trade between the UK and Mozambique was in the last year for which figures are available; what recent estimate she has made of UK investment in Mozambique; and what steps she has taken to encourage trade between Mozambique and the rest of the Commonwealth. [87062]

Nigel Griffiths: According to figures published by HM Customs and Excise, UK imports of goods from Mozambique in 2001 were valued at £7.5 million while UK exports were worth £12.6 million. In the nine months to September 2002 UK imports were worth £1.5 million while exports were £10.9 million. The figures do not take account of trade between Mozambique and British companies located in South Africa, for which statistics are not available.

Information on UK investment in Mozambique is not available due to commercial confidentiality.

Trade Partners UK has a small but busy section in Mozambique, assisting UK companies in the market and those wishing to access it for the first time. In addition TPUK has recently funded a high level delegation to the UK to highlight investment opportunities in a hydro-power project, Mpanda Ncua, and has given support to a trade mission from the UK planned for February 2003. It is not HMG's role to actively promote business between Mozambique and other Commonwealth countries. However, TPUK supported the Commonwealth Business Council in its efforts to run an investment promotion seminar jointly with the Mozambique Government in February 2002.

Post Office Benefit Payments

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who will oversee the second card option for post office payment after the changes in 2003. [86557]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter which falls within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Productivity

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the impact on productivity of the growth of the service sector relative to the manufacturing sector. [87838]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 17 December 2002]: Concern is sometimes expressed that the growth of the service sector may slow overall productivity growth because measured productivity growth is lower in the service sector than in the rest of the economy. However this conclusion, which emerged in academic research in the 1960s, has been called into question by later research. Moreover a number of studies show that the UK service sector has considerable potential to catch up with best-practice productivity levels elsewhere. The Government are keen to encourage productivity growth and narrow the productivity gap in all sectors of the economy.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the costs of establishing a target of (a) 25 per cent. and (b) 30 per cent. of the UK's electricity to come from renewable sources by 2020. [87882]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Prospects for renewable energy, including the question of possible targets beyond the 10 per cent. target for 2010, will be addressed in the Energy White Paper which we expect to publish in the new year.

Social Chapter

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 2 December 2002, Official Report, column 520W, on the Social Chapter, what estimates her Department has made of (a) the overall cost to date and (b) the annual cost hereafter to businesses in the UK of implementing the five directives transposed from the Social Chapter. [87674]

Alan Johnson: Estimates of the overall cost to businesses in the UK of implementing regulations transposing the five Social Chapter directives listed as follows were published in Regulatory Impact Assessments which are available from the Libraries of the House.

The estimated total annual recurring implementation cost is as follows:

Parental Leave Directive, including the 1999 extension to the implementing Regulations—£0.2 million;

European Works Council Directive—nil;

Part-time Work Directive—£4 million;

Burden of Proof Directive in Sex Discrimination cases—£0.6 million;

Fixed Term Employees Directive—£2 million.

Solar Photovoltaics

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria have been used to exclude (a) on grid solar PV, (b) off grid solar PV and (c) hybrid systems including solar PV, from the proposed new community and household renewable energy grant scheme to be launched in January 2003. [87715]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Performance and Innovation Unit's 'Renewable Energy in the UK—Building for the Future' report recommended that up to £10 million of support be provided as capital grants specifically for renewable energy schemes that engage local communities or individual households.

The DTI has since undertaken a broad consultation exercise to inform the positioning, design and workings of this scheme. Through the consultation the DTI has revisited the initial recommendations of the PIU. An initial scoping exercise identified schemes, which had potential overlap with the proposed Community and Household Scheme (CHS), and concluded that such a scheme would be beneficial for the advancement of renewables in the UK.

Although the PIU recommended that no restrictions be placed on technology, the DTI has sought to identify which technologies would enhance the public's understanding of renewables. The scheme has also been designed so that it would not duplicate work under way through other Government or Industry initiatives. Although solar PV has a significant contribution to make to enhancing the public's understanding of renewables, it is already supported by the first phase of the PV Major Demonstration Programme (MDP) which has a budget of £20 million. The programme has already supported PV installations by homeowners and local groups. Technologies such as solar water heating, small wind and micro hydro can also make a positive contribution to the public's understanding of renewables. These technologies, in contrast to solar PV, receive little or no Government support.

The scheme also aims to tackle some of the other barriers to uptake such as installer accreditation. Again installer accreditation for solar PV occurs under the MDP and so any such work in the Community and Household would be redundant.

On off grid applications, the DTI are currently looking at whether to expand the MDP to include off grid PV systems. On hybrid systems, customers will be able to apply to the CHS for the non solar PV component and to the MDP for the solar PV component of the hybrid system.

The technologies supported by the CHS will be reviewed throughout the lifetime of the scheme and altered if necessary.

Trawlermen (Compensation)

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many refused claims for compensation for former Icelandic trawlermen based in the city of Aberdeen are awaiting (a) first appeal and (b) a decision by the independent adjudicator. [87638]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The information is as follows:

(a) 51 Aberdeen-based claimants are currently awaiting a decision on their claim by the official responsible for considering queries about the initial decision of the Watford office.

(b) Eight Aberdeen-based claimants are currently awaiting a decision on their claim by the independent adjudicator.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many refused claims for compensation for former Icelandic trawlermen based in the City of Aberdeen have been overturned (a) at first appeal and (b) by the independent adjudicator. [87639]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The information is as follows:

(a) The official responsible for considering queries about the initial decision of the Watford office (as regards either refusal of compensation or the amount awarded) has found in the claimant's favour in 51 cases involving Aberdeen-based claimants. Of these:

Nine were as a result of rule changes made in November 2001;

27 were as a result of new documentary evidence being provided to establish a longer period of continuous service than was originally calculated; and 15 were as a result of a different view being taken on the claim.

(b) The independent adjudicator has found in the claimant's favour in two formal appeals by Aberdeen-based claimants.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims under the Former Icelandic Water Trawlermen Compensation Scheme are still to be processed; how many appeals under the scheme are awaiting a decision; and what the average time to process an appeal has been. [87664]

Nigel Griffiths: There are no claims remaining that have not been considered on at least one occasion. There are 180 currently awaiting further information prior to an initial decision of the Watford office. There are 193 queries regarding the initial decision of the Watford office currently under consideration by the responsible DTI official. Over 1,600 other queries have already been responded to by him. There are 43 formal appeals currently with the independent adjudicator for consideration. The average time taken to process a formal appeal has been 57 days.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps were taken by her Department to publicise the Former Icelandic Water Trawlermen Compensation Scheme; how many representations her Department has received from fishermen enquiring about compensation under the scheme since the expiry date; and if she will extend the application process beyond that date. [87665]

Nigel Griffiths: The scheme was publicised in the local press and other relevant publications, with port area MPs and with the British Fishermen's Association, and on the DTI website. While the scheme was in operation, DTI officials also made numerous visits to the main port areas to meet former trawlermen and/or their representatives. Further publicity was arranged in relevant publications and with port area representatives in advance of the 1 October 2002 closure date for new claims. Since that date, DTI officials have received fewer than 10 new inquiries from individuals who might have wished to claim compensation. The scheme rules made clear the closure date was final.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, in accordance with the terms and conditions of the Former Icelandic Water Trawlermen Compensation Scheme, affidavits from independent witnesses testifying that a certain ship has been to Icelandic waters during the relevant period will be accepted as proof of that ship's validity and will trigger compensation for those having served on it; and if she will make a statement. [87666]

Nigel Griffiths: At the outset of the scheme, officials—in conjunction with local trawlermen and their representatives—compiled a list of Icelandic-water vessels based on independent contemporary documentary evidence. More vessels have been added to this list as further such evidence has come to light during the period of operation of the Scheme. There are now over 700 vessels on the list. We continue to believe that independent contemporary documentary evidence provides the best basis for assessing the status of particular vessels.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Jubilee Medal

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will include traffic wardens in those eligible for the Queen's Golden Jubilee Medal. [87184]

Mr. Caborn: No. The medal is being issued to the living holders of the Victoria Cross and the George Cross, to serving members of the armed forces and the Royal Fleet Auxiliary, and to the '999' emergency services. Traffic wardens do not fall within any of these eligible groups.

Community Developments

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the public organisations that make grant funding available for community developments, and the funds available last year for them to disburse. [87413]

Mr. Caborn: The Department's annual report (May 2002, Cm 5423) gives details of all the public bodies sponsored by the Department and of any grant funding that they disburse.

Drug Testing

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what further action she has taken to increase the number of drug tests on competitors at elite sporting events in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [87887]

Mr. Caborn: This Government is firmly committed to combating doping in sport. The anti-doping programme in the UK is delivered through the national anti-doping organisation, UK Sport, in conjunction with sports governing bodies. As a result of the 2002 Spending Review this Government has allocated additional funds to UK Sport specifically to increase the number of public interest tests carried out under the anti-doping programme and to meet the additional costs of new blood tests. The funding, which amounts to £1.5 million in 2004–05 and £3.2 million in 2005–06, will ensure the continued quality and comprehensiveness of UK Sport's anti-doping programme.

National Lottery

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much revenue has been collected from lottery sales in Morecambe and Lunesdale in the last 12 months. [87506]

Mr. Caborn: Information about National Lottery ticket sales is not collected by constituency. But the National Lottery Commission is able to provide information about sales broken down by post code area. In October this year in response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Morley and Rothwell (Mr. Challen) on 22 October 2002, Official Report, columns 182–83W, I placed in the House Libraries a table provided by Camelot plc listing sales by postcode area since the Lottery's launch.

New Opportunities Fund

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total of uncommitted funds is from New Opportunities Fund Rounds 1 and 2; and if she will make a statement. [87651]

Mr. Caborn: The New Opportunities Fund had £1.5 billion available for its round 1 and 2 programmes which are designed to improve the quality of life for people and communities, address disadvantage and encourage community participation.

The New Opportunities Fund has committed 93.11 per cent. of Round 1 and 2 funds. There is £97.5 million yet to commit.

Noise Pollution

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment of the noise pollution caused by (a) amplified music and (b) television sets was made by her Department when considering licensing reform. [87408]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 December 2002]: We consulted local authorities and local residents groups, as well as representatives of the music industry, following the publication of our proposals for reform of the licensing laws, and considered views on public nuisance and the impact of various forms of entertainment on the community. The comments that were received during the initial review and in response to the publication of the White Paper led to our making the prevention of public nuisance one of the four primary licensing objectives of the Bill.

During the consultation, no organisation or individual commented on the issue of noise from television sets. Subsequently, we have considered whether the live broadcast of television in public venues should be brought within the proposed licensing regime and concluded that this is not necessary.

Tax Relief

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Treasury about tax relief for those charitable organisations affected by the provisions of the Licensing Bill, with regard to the requirement for applying and paying for licences for fundraising events. [87450]

Dr. Howells: This Department has not had discussions with the Treasury with regard to this issue.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Support

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimated cost of administration was in relation to the introduction of charging and means testing for housing support services in Northern Ireland. [87336]

Mr. Browne: In the interests of targeting resources to where the need is greatest I have decided that those who can afford to pay for their housing support services should continue to do so. However it is important that the administration costs of operating such an arrangement are kept to a minimum. Rather than spending around £250,000 to develop and administer a specific supporting people means test, I have decided that eligibility for housing benefit or any other means tested benefit, should be the automatic passport to free housing support services. This will be easy to operate with little additional costs in terms of administration.

North-South Implementation Bodies

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what agreement he has reached with the Irish Government about the operation of the North-South Implementation Bodies during the period of suspension of the Northern Ireland Assembly; and if he will place a copy of the agreement in the Library. [85884]

Mr. Paul Murphy: In an exchange of notes on 19 November the British and Irish Governments agreed a mechanism so that during the period of temporary suspension of the Assembly, decisions on policies and actions relating to the Implementation Bodies, Tourism Ireland (a publicly owned company established as an area of co-operation by NSMC) or their respective functions could be taken. The agreement was made to ensure the continuation during suspension of the necessary public functions performed by the Implementation Bodies. The agreement, which came into force on 3 December, also provided that no new functions would be conferred on the Implementation Bodies during suspension. The exchange of notes will be laid before both Houses of Parliament.

Personal Care

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent in each of the last three years in Northern Ireland in providing free personal care for those living in sheltered accommodation or living in their own homes. [87331]

Mr. Browne: Information on the cost of providing free personal care for those living in sheltered accommodation or living in their own homes is not available. The provision of personal care includes services such as district nursing, home help, occupational and physiotherapy and applies to a number of programmes of care. Information at the level required could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public-Voluntary Sector Partnerships

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the funding arrangements for partnerships between statutory bodies and the voluntary sector in Northern Ireland. [87057]

Mr. Browne: Voluntary and community sector involvement in the design and delivery of public services is a key aspect of the Modernising Government agenda.

There are numerous and diverse partnerships at local level, funded through grant aid and service level management, between the voluntary sector and statutory bodies such as district councils and health and social services trusts. Of particular importance are Local Strategy Partnerships, supported under Peace II and now working in every district council area in Northern Ireland.

Further detail on the wide ranging sources of funding for partnerships between government and the voluntary and community sector can be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Voluntary Sector (Service Delivery)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what initiatives in and between Northern Ireland Government Departments are in place to encourage and facilitate the voluntary sector in delivery of services. [87058]

Mr. Browne: Government strategy for support of the voluntary and community sector in Northern Ireland is set out in "Partners for Change", a consultation document launched in June 2001. The strategy aims to add value to Government in Northern Ireland through a partnership approach with the voluntary and community sector, enabling the sector's contribution to service delivery, policy comment and achievement of government objectives.

I have endorsed the final draft of partners for change and arrangements for publishing the document are currently in place. The document will be available early in 2003 and will be posted on the Department for Social Development's website.

An allocation of £6 million from executive programme funds was announced on 7 October 2002 to maintain important services delivered by the voluntary and community sector, which otherwise might be lost due to funding difficulties. Applications for funding under this initiative have now closed and Departments aim to make recommendations to Ministers by the end of January 2003.

Longer-term sustainability issues will be considered by a Task Force on Resourcing the Voluntary and Community Sector. This Task Force will consider the further diversification of funding sources for the sector and is due to report its conclusions by April 2004.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Breakfast Clubs

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 2 December 2002, Official Report, column 551W, on breakfast clubs, if he will make it the Government's policy to fund breakfast clubs for all schools via mainstream funding. [87575]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My previous answer of 2 December explained that many schools already offer breakfast clubs as part of their study support or child care provision.

"Investment for Reform" spelt out our intention that, by 2006, all schools should be providing study support, in breakfast clubs or otherwise. Funding will continue to be made available to local education authorities and schools to enable them to offer a wide range of study support activities, and we will be announcing our detailed plans in due course. It will be for schools and authorities to choose whether to run breakfast clubs in particular as part of their study support, as they are best placed to determine local needs and viability.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he is taking to ensure sustainability of breakfast clubs and out-of-school activities funded by the New Opportunities Fund when this funding finishes. [87617]

Mr. Miliband: We are committed to promoting study support in schools, including breakfast clubs. In "Investment for Reform", we spelt out our aim for all schools to be providing study support by 2006, in breakfast clubs or other activities. We hope that participating schools will also be able to use the extended schools programme, and child care initiatives, to offer an increased range of provision including breakfast clubs.

Funding will continue to be available for study support activity after New Opportunities Fund grants finish. We will be announcing in due course our detailed funding plans for study support over the next three years. It will of course remain for schools and local education authorities to decide precisely what provision to offer with the resources at their disposal.

Budget Deficits

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many universities and colleges are facing deficits in their budgets in the current financial year; and what estimate he has made of the cost to universities of remedying current budget deficiencies over the next (a) three years and (b) seven years. [87309]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 17 December 2002]: In 2000–01, there were 48 higher education institutions in England with budget deficits out of a total of 130. Universities receive funding from a variety of sources, both private and public and set out their accounts in their annual reports. The Higher Education Funding Council for England works with institutions in financial difficulty to enable them to return to a sound financial position over time. The Government's plans for public funding for future years will be announced alongside the higher education strategy document in January.

GCSE Results

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the secondary modern schools which achieved better results at GCSE than the average for all-ability comprehensive schools in 2002. [87830]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The information requested will not be available until the secondary school performance tables are published early in 2003. A copy of the analyses will be included in the House of Commons Library when the data are available.

Government Grants

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average amount of central Government grant was per pupil in education in (a) England, (b) the South East, (c) East Sussex and (d) Eastbourne, in each of the last five years. [87591]

Mr. Miliband: The following table shows the Department's total recurrent grant per pupil allocated in England, the South East and East Sussex local education authority for the financial years 1997–98 to 2001–02. It is not possible to identify separately the amounts for individual constituencies.

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
England	150	70	120	240	410
South East	80	30	80	200	300
East Sussex local education authority	90	30	90	240	330

Notes:

1. Figures reflect all revenue grants relevant to pupils aged four to 19, in DfES's Departmental Expenditure Limits (excluding EMA and other grants where it is not possible to get figures on a comparable basis over time).
2. The pupil numbers used are the maintained pupils underlying the SSA settlement calculations.
3. 1997–98 figure for East Sussex has been estimated, to take account of local government reorganisation.
4. 1997–98 figures take account of approximately £500 million nationally in respect of the nursery voucher scheme which was transferred to SSA in 1998–99.
5. Figures are rounded to the nearest £10.

Maintained Schools (Guidance)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance his Department has given to maintained schools regarding avoidance of political bias in the display of photographs of politicians in school buildings. [87463]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Understanding our system of government is an important part of citizenship education, which became a part of the statutory National Curriculum for 11 to 16-year-olds in September 2002. It is for teachers to decide on the most appropriate materials, including visual aids, to encourage teaching and learning in the classroom. Teachers are aware of potential political problems and are professional in their approach. There are safeguards in law to guard against biased teaching. LEAs and schools must take reasonable steps to ensure that where political or controversial issues are covered, teachers offer pupils a balanced presentation of opposing views. The law on this is contained in sections 406 and 407 of the Education Act 1996.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by him or his predecessor and (b) by Ministers in his Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87357]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 608W.

Plant Hire

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations he has received about the CITB levy on the plant hire industry; and if he will make a statement. [87317]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In recent weeks I have received 153 representations from a total of 25 companies about the CITB levy on the plant hire sector. I have agreed to consider whether there is a case for removing hire services from the scope of the CITB and am awaiting proposals from the sector.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much CITB levy was received from the plant hire industry in the last three years. [87318]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Companies declaring their main activity to be "plant hire or repair" paid the following amounts of levy in the last three years:

2000: £2,043,462

2001: £2,364,100

2002: £2,973,690

Postcode Premium

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the future of the postcode premium in funding higher education institutions. [87230]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The Higher Education Funding Council for England has been reviewing the level and method of distributing funding for widening participation. We favour funding indicators more closely related to the extra costs to institutions of recruiting and supporting students from non-traditional backgrounds. The income of their parents, whether they are first in their family to attend university and whether they attend schools with no tradition of sending large numbers to university, seem more appropriate indicators. The funding answer will take this matter forward.

School Exclusions

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost is per year of educating an excluded child in a pupil referral unit. [86876]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer12 December 2002]: The Department has no analysis of how much cost is incurred in educating an excluded pupil at a pupil referral unit (PRU). This is due to the wide variance in provision that any particular excluded pupil would require from a PRU, as well as other factors such as the location of the PRU and the funding structure of the local education authority.

Funding for PRUs is contained in the Social Inclusion: Pupil Support (SIPS) grant. This grant (£176 million in 2002–03) is designed to tackle bad behaviour in schools and to provide education for pupils outside mainstream schools. PRUs can also be funded from other sources and there is therefore no measure of costs for a PRU.

There are currently 371 PRUs open in England.

School Funding (Kent)

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the level of schools funding per pupil was in (a) Kent and (b) Medway in each year since 1996; what the predicted spending for the next three years will be in each case; and what the capital investment was each year since 1996. [87728]

Mr. Miliband: The tables show the Department's total education standard spending assessment, recurrent and capital grant per pupil allocated to Kent and Medway local education authorities for the financial years 1998–99 to 2002–03. The local government reorganisation means that data for 1996–97 and 1997–98 does not conform to current boundaries so comparable figures are not available.

Kent local education authority

2001–02	2,970	290	290
2002–03	3,150	320	350

Notes:

1. Figures reflect education SSA settlement figures (all sub-blocks, excluding, where relevant, the funding for 4-year-olds at private, voluntary and independent institutions) plus all revenue grants in DfES's departmental expenditure limits relevant to pupils aged 4–19 (excluding EMA and other grants where it is not possible to get figures on a comparable basis over time).
2. The pupil numbers used are the maintained pupils underlying the SSA settlement calculations.
3. 2002–03 SSA figures include an element for LSC allocations in respect of school sixth forms.
4. 2002–03 figures are provisional.
5. Figures are rounded to the nearest £10.

As a result of our drive to give extra resources to the front line, there will be no increase in central Government spending per pupil but a national average increase of over £540 per pupil in our plans for local government spending over the next three years.

It is not possible to set out now education formula spending shares (EFSS) for Kent and Medway for 2004–05 and 2005–06: they will depend on pupil numbers and indicator data at January 2003 and 2004. However, we have provided Kent and Medway with figures for total education formula spending for 2004–05 and 2005–06, together with forward projections at national level of pupil numbers for those years. We have also said that there will be minimum and maximum increases for authorities as we introduce the new LEA funding system. Indicator data will be averaged over three years to provide further stability and predictability in future formula spending shares. Kent and Medway will be able to use this data—together with local knowledge about pupil numbers and indicators—to form a good estimate of what their EFSS might be in those years. That will in turn allow them to provide schools with indicative budgets for the next three years.

School Security

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what measures he is taking to improve security arrangements in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools; [87805]

(2) what grants are available to (a) primary and (b) secondary schools to improve on-site security arrangements. [87806]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has produced a range of guidance on school security, most recently the video "Can You See What They See?". Advice is also available on the school security website www.dfes.gov.uk/schoolsecurity.

In 2002–03 funding of £10 million was provided to local education authorities from the capital modernisation fund for school security projects. This was allocated on a formula basis for their maintained schools, and it is for them to decide how best to use the funding to improve security in both primary and secondary schools.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much he estimates introduction of the Special Educational Needs and Disability Act 2001 will cost in respect of (a) staff training costs, (b) other recurrent costs and (c) capital costs over the quinquennium from September 2002, broken down by local education authority. [87116]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Local education authorities (LEAs) and schools are able to use record increases in funding for education made available by the Government, of £12.8 billion between 2002–03 and 2005–06 (of which £2.7 billion is capital) to implement their duties under the SEN and Disability Act 2001.

Increases in the SEN Standards Fund and the Schools Access Initiative have provided specific sources of extra funding for local education authorities and schools to meet the requirements to include pupils with special educational needs and disabilities within schools and to establish local parent partnership and disagreement resolution services.

In 2002–03 a total of £91 million was made available to LEAs and schools to support the needs of pupils with SEN and disabilities and vulnerable children from the Standards Fund and in 2003–04 will remain at this record level. Eligible expenditure from the fund includes training and between 1999 and 2002 the fund has been used to establish parent partnership services, which are now statutory services.

Substantial funding has been provided, and continues to be provided under the schools access initiative to improve access for disabled children which is standing at £70 million this year and will increase again to £100 million from 2003–04 for the next three years.

Specialist College Status

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will abolish the financial threshold for schools bidding for specialist college status. [87654]

Mr. Miliband: The Department will not be abolishing the sponsorship requirement for schools applying for specialist school status.

Raising sponsorship is a key aspect of the Specialist Schools Programme. The main rationale behind it is the need for specialist schools to build partnerships with sponsors and the local community. As a task, raising sponsorship links into the enterprising ethos that is integral to the programme as a whole and it serves as a forum for the school's public presentation of its plans for specialist designation.

The Department has already done much to help schools which are having difficulties raising the necessary sponsorship. We grant-aid the Technology Colleges Trust and the Youth Sport Trust, which advise schools on raising sponsorship. The Trusts are often able to help schools with money donated centrally, on the basis of criteria set out by sponsors.

In 1999 we reduced the sponsorship requirement to £50,000, and in May this year we reduced the amount of sponsorship required by small mainstream schools (defined as those with under 500 pupils on roll) to £100 per pupil, subject to a minimum of £20,000, rising to £50,000 for a school with 500 pupils.

In November the Secretary of State for Education and Skills announced the creation of a Partnership Fund. The Fund, which will contain £3 million in 2003–04, is designed specifically to help schools which have had serious difficulties meeting the £50,000 sponsorship requirement. The Department is in the process of developing criteria for the allocation of the fund, which will be managed by the Technology Colleges Trust. The criteria will be based around evidence that the school has made a real effort to raise sponsorship and has created valuable links with businesses.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list for his Department (a) those comprehensive spending review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the comprehensive spending review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87693]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The Department publishes progress against all its outstanding PSA targets in its annual departmental report and autumn performance report. Progress against our CSR 98 targets was reported most recently in the 2002 autumn report, published in November, together with commentary where appropriate. A copy of the report is available from the House of Commons Library.

Statemented Children

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of children with statements have a transition plan. [85316]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not available centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Extradition Appeals

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what categories of representation may properly be considered in extradition appeals. [87633]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The Extradition Act 1989 contains a number of statutory safeguards against surrender of which a fugitive can seek to avail himself before the courts. If no legal challenge is made, or if any that are made are unsuccessful, it falls to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to decide, in the exercise of residual discretion, whether to order surrender. In so deciding, he has regard to all the circumstances of the case and to any grounds for concluding that it would be unjust or oppressive to order surrender. As part of that consideration, the fugitive has an opportunity to make such representations against surrender as he would wish to be taken into account.

Arson

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many under-18 year olds were convicted of arson in each year since 1992, broken down by constabulary. [86496]

Hilary Benn: The information requested is contained in the table.

Asylum Seekers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of in-country asylum applicants made their claim within (a) three days, (b) seven days, (c) 14 days, (d) 28 days and (e) 56 days of arrival in the UK in the last year for which figures are available. [87916]

Beverley Hughes: The length of time between the arrival of in-country asylum applicants in the UK and when they lodge their application for asylum is not available. The requested information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

Correspondence

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he will reply to the hon. Member for Woking's letters of 18 September, 24 October and 14 November concerning a constituent, Mr. Raja Munir, and his application for indefinite leave to remain in the UK; [85031]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 3 December, concerning Mr. Raja Munir, Ref 85031, by what date he expects to reply to the hon. Member for Woking's letters. [86892]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 December 2002]: My noble Friend Lord Filkin wrote to the hon. Member on 16 December 2002. I apologise for the considerable delay in replying.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department intends to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Manchester Central of (a) 3 May, regarding Mr.LB, reference PO10343/2, (b) 18 June, regarding Mrs.LE, reference PO12404/2, (c) 19 June, regarding Ms MB, reference PO12510/2, (d) 25 June, regarding Ms MG, reference PO13216/2, (e) 26 June, regarding Ms SR, reference PO13449/2, (f) 10 July, regarding Mrs.TK, reference PO14227/2, (g) 11 July, regarding Ms CL, reference PO14427/2, (h) 6 August, regarding Ms MM, reference PO16718/2, (i) 16 August, regarding Mr.AD, reference PO17226/2, (j) 12 September, regarding Mr.AHA, reference PO18834/2, (k) 17 September, regarding Mr.MAM, reference PO19319/2 and (l) 18 September, regarding Mrs.DAH, reference PO19223/2. [85240]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 5 December 2002]:

(a) PO 10343/2: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 18 December 2002.

(b) PO 12404/2: I apologise for the considerable delay in replying to this letter. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Policing, Crime Reduction and Community Safety wrote to my hon. Friend on 4 December 2002.

(l) PO 19223/2: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly. The Entry Clearance Officer in Jeddah was authorised by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate on 25 October to issue a visa in this case.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Broxbourne will receive a reply to her letters of 14 August, 11 September, 7 November and 5 December relating to her constituent, Mr. Mohamed Mady. [87006]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 17 December 2002.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the mean delay for checks on volunteers was under the old system of police checks in the last 12 months of its operation; and what the mean delay for such checks has been in relation to volunteers under the new arrangements instituted by the Criminal Records Bureau in the last 12 months. [83900]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 28 November 2002]: Information is not available in the form requested. Under the previous arrangements some volunteers were subject to police checks via local authorities and other organisations but separate statistics were not collected. A number of voluntary organisations accessed police checks through a body called the Voluntary Organisations Consultancy Service (VOCS), covering both volunteers and paid employees. Their last annual report covering the financial year 2001–2002 showed that they processed 13,535 police checks for voluntary organisations of which 6,595 were for paid employees and 6,940 were for volunteers. The average time for responses from the police was 30 days. VOCS' own handling time was additional.

As to the current arrangements, no distinction is made in relation to the profession or status of an applicant. As a result, the IT system is not able at present to extract this data from the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) database (although it is expected to be able to do so in future when the system is updated). They are all subject to the same level of service. However, access to checks by the voluntary sector has been greatly increased with the advent of the CRB and many more volunteers are now subject to such checks.

The average turnaround time for processing applications remains at about six weeks.

This is measured from the point at which a correctly completed application form is received by the CRB, accompanied by all pertinent supporting details, to issuing a Disclosure.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much compensation has been paid by Capita to the Government under the terms of the contract relating to the Criminal Records Bureaux. [86720]

Hilary Benn: There is provision under the terms of the contract between Capita and the Home Office for penalties for delay or poor performance. Capita has incurred liquidated damages for delay although the details remain commercial in confidence and cannot be divulged. The main priority is for the Criminal Records Bureau and Capita to collaborate in order to achieve further improvement in the quality of service.

Drug Addicts

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is in place to support drug addicts on their release from prison; what information is passed to drug treatment agencies when a drug addict is released into their home community; and if drug addicts are tracked on release from prison to facilitate treatment. [87835]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 17 December 2002]: All prisons have a Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice and Throughcare service (CARAT), which seeks to put in place care plans for prisoners, which should identify need for throughcare on release. Prisoners serving sentences of 12 months or less can receive support from CARATs. Prior to release, CARATs will warn of the dangers associated with loss of tolerance in prison and will try to establish a link with a community drug service. When this is not achieved, CARATs will provide a degree of support, where practical, for up to eight weeks after release.

Prisoners serving sentences in excess of 12 months are routinely subject to supervision by the National Probation Service. CARAT workers will advise a supervising probation officer of any continuing, post-release drug treatment needs and will request the establishment of a link with a community drug agency. A prisoner's progress will be monitored until the expiry of the supervision period.

As outlined in the Government's updated Drug Strategy 2002, published on 3 December 2002, the Home Office, alongside the National Treatment Agency, the National Probation Directorate and the Prison Service is working to improve the availability and quality of community support for ex-prisoners with drug problems and to ensure that an effective infrastructure is in place to bridge the gap between prison and community.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the number of drug addicts in (a) Hampshire and (b) England in each year since 1997. [87841]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 17 December 2002]: Estimating numbers of drug addicts is very difficult and figures are not available for Hampshire or England for the years requested. The latest estimates for the number of Class A problem drug users in England and Wales range from 281,125 to 506,025. The first of these figures is closest to previously reported estimates. These figures come from a Home Office study entitled: "The Economic and Social Costs of Class A drug use in England and Wales, 2000". Copies of this publication will be placed in the Library.

Local figures are only available for those people with drug problems who have recently started drugs treatment. The most recent figures cover from 1 October 2000 to 31 March 2001. These show that for Portsmouth and South East Hampshire, Southampton and South West Hampshire health authorities a total of 501 people had entered treatment. Data are not available for the years requested.

Female Convictions

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women have been convicted for (a) violent and (b) non-violent offences in each of the last five years. [86641]

Hilary Benn: The information requested is given in the table.

Women convicted of violent and other offences in England and Wales 1997 to 2001

	Violent offences[1]	Other offences
1997	3,829	213,308
1998	4,234	231,344
1999	4,073	215,907
2000	4,214	251,804
2001	4,111	233,511

Long Lartin (Tree Preservation Orders)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers his Department has to ignore tree preservation orders imposed by Wychavon district council on trees on land adjacent to Long Lartin prison; and if he will make a statement. [86917]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 12 December 2002]: With the exception of one tree which is in a dangerous condition, the Prison Service has no plans to remove trees on land adjacent to Her Majesty's Prison Long Lartin for which planning applications have recently been submitted.

Paul Burrell/Harold Brown

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the police investigations relating to (a) Paul Burrell and (b) Harold Brown; and if he will make a statement. [86186]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 December 2002]: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has informed me that the cost of the police investigations relating to both (a) Paul Burrell and (b) Harold Brown was, in total, approximately £310,000,00. It is not possible to distinguish separately the costs for each investigation.

Prisoner Age (Wymott and Garth Prisons)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates are held in (a) Garth and (b) Wymott Prisons; and how many are over the age of (i) 65, (ii) 70, (iii) 75 and (iv) 80. [87027]

Hilary Benn: On 31 October 2002 (the latest data available) there were 652 persons held in Garth prison. Of these five were over the age of 65, one was over the age of 70, and there were none over the age of 75.

On the same date there were 821 persons held in Wymott prison. Of these 28 were over the age of 65, nine were over the age of 70, three were over the age of 75 and one was over 80 years old.

Prisons

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to reduce the number of suicides in prison. [87475]

Hilary Benn: The general prison population contains a large number of prisoners with a combination of psychiatric disorders, alcohol and drug dependency, family background and relationship problems, histories of self-harm and previous abuse, all of which raise their risk of suicide. Good care and support from staff saves many lives but such instances go largely unreported. The current operating environment is very challenging because an increased prisoner population and movement of prisoners puts a strain on resources and makes it harder to prevent suicides. The Prison Service's approach, in close partnership with outside organisations such as Samaritans, better identify and support those who seem at greatest risk with an approach that focuses on relationships, processes and the physical environment.

The Prison Service's suicide prevention and self-harm reduction programme includes a series of inter-related projects to improve pre-reception, reception and induction arrangements; inter-agency information exchange; prisoner care; detoxification; prisoner peer support, and the learning from investigations into deaths in custody.

Piloting of these projects is focused on six establishments—Wandsworth, Feltham, Eastwood Park, Leeds, Winchester and Birmingham—although others are involved in aspects of the work. An investment of £21.69 million over the three year programme from April 2001 is allowing physical improvements to be made at these six sites, for example to reception and induction areas, and through the installation of more first night centres, safer cells, crisis suites and gated cells that enable staff to watch at-risk prisoners closely. The programme will be subject to an independent quantitative and qualitative evaluation. No resources have at present been allocated to work beyond April 2004.

Thirty full-time suicide prevention co-ordinators (SPCs) were trained and located in the most high risk establishments, and a further 99 mostly part-time SPCs are now operating across the estate. There has been a continuing increase in the numbers of prisoner "Listeners" being recruited in high-risk establishments, with 608 new Listeners recruited within these establishments between 1 October 2001 and 31 March 2002 alone, and further recruitment and training taking place.

Concurrently, new health care screening procedures have been piloted at 10 establishments and are to be rolled out across the estate. Wing staff will be increasingly supported in their work by in-reach mental health teams and by the establishment where possible of dedicated drug detoxification units.

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the period from 28 September 2001 to 27 September 2002, how many inmates of (a) HMP North Sea Camp, (b) HMP Leyhill, (c) HMP Stanford Hill and (d) HMP Kirkham were transferred to closed conditions for breach of the conditions of their community visit or facilities licences; how many of those inmates were subsequently charged with an offence against discipline under Prison Rule 51 Paragraph 8 in connection with the breach and what the licence conditions were that were breached in each case; how many inmates were not charged with an offence under Prison Rule 51 Paragraph 8, but were nevertheless transferred because they were deemed to have behaved inappropriately while on temporary release; what the nature of the inappropriate behaviour was in each case; what conditions of his community visit or facility licence Lord Archer was held to have breached that resulted in his transfer from HMP North Sea Camp to HMP Lincoln on 27 September; and whether he was charged with an offence against discipline in respect of those breaches. [87646]

Hilary Benn: The information requested is not held centrally and I shall write to the hon. Member when it is available.

Punishment Orders

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times (a) reparation orders, (b) final warnings, (c) action plan orders, (d) preventing orders and (e) court ordered secure remands have been issued in each month since their introduction. [86177]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The number of reparation orders, final warnings, action plan orders, parenting orders and court ordered secure remands are set out in the tables. The Youth Justice Board has provided the data from April 2000 onwards from returns provided by Youth Offending Teams.

As there is no intervention called a preventing order, we have assumed that the information requested is for parenting orders.

[1] Data for reparation orders, final warnings, action plan orders and parenting orders include the period of the youth justice pilots, from October 1998 to March 2000, as well as national operation from then until the third quarter of 2002.
[2] Data for youth justice pilots only available as totals. The police final warning scheme, parenting orders, reparation order, and action plan order were piloted in selected areas across England and Wales between October 1998 and March 2000.
[3] Data for national operation since the youth justice pilots ended has been collected by the Youth Justice Board (YJB) based on returns from Youth Offending Teams (YOTs). These data are only available on a quarterly basis and the figures are provisional as they as based on YOT returns.

[1] Data for court ordered secure remands based on monthly returns collected by the Home Office between 1 June 1999 to April 2000. From April 2000, the YJB assumed responsibility for commissioning and purchasing secure remand places and they have provided the data from May 2000 to November 2002.
[2] Due to the transfer of secure remand responsibilities to the YJB from the Home Office during April 2000 only partial data are available for this month based on 60 per cent. of returns received from Local Authority Secure Units.

Secure Units

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places in (a) local authority secure units, (b) young offender institutions and (c) secure training centres are planned in (i) 2002–03, (ii) 2003–04, and (iii) 2004–05. [85199]

Hilary Benn: The Youth Justice Board is responsible for purchasing an appropriate number of juvenile secure places from the providers. The number of places available in 2002–03 on 1 December 2002 and planned for 2003–04, subject to final decisions on allocation of funds following the Spending Review 2002 Settlement, are as follows.

	2002–03	2003–04
Local Authority Secure Units	330	330
Young Offender Institutions	3,066	3,066
Secure Training Centres	170	194

Discussions are continuing between the Department and the Youth Justice Board about the provision of places in 2004–05.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development to which bodies her Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87393]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given on 16 December 2002, by the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on behalf of the Cabinet Office.

Burundi

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what funding commitment was made by the United Kingdom at the November Geneva Round Table Donors' Meeting on Burundi; and what conditions were placed on the fulfilment of this commitment; [87145]

(2) what funding commitment was made by the United Kingdom to Burundi at the Geneva Round Table Donors' Meeting of December 2001; what conditions were placed on the fulfilment of this commitment; and what proportion of this funding has been paid to date; [87147]

(3) what funding commitment was made by the United Kingdom to Burundi at the Paris Donors Club Meeting of December 2000; what conditions were placed on the fulfilment of this commitment; and what proportion of this funding has been paid to date. [87146]

Clare Short: At the Paris Donors Roundtable Meeting in December 2000 we stated that although the UK would not become a substantial bilateral donor to Burundi we would play our part in support of others, particularly the multilateral agencies. We stated that we would continue our existing bilateral assistance (mainly humanitarian assistance, work with the media, HIV/AIDS prevention, and peace building). We said we would look favourably on making a contribution to the World Bank Multilateral Debt Trust Fund (MDTF). At the Geneva Round Table Meeting in December 2001 we pledged US$1 million to the MDTF. These funds were transferred earlier this year.

At the recent Donors Round Table Meeting in Geneva, held on 27–28 November 2002, we agreed to consider an additional contribution of US$1 million to the MDTF.

Civil Servants

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many civil servants are employed by her Department; and how much money was spent by her Department in the last 12 months in each local authority area. [87262]

Clare Short: On the number of civil servants, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer provided by my hon. Friend for the Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002.

The question on local authority areas is not relevant to DFID as our work is focused overseas in developing countries.

Kashmir

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects (a) funded and (b) supported by her Department have been engaged in providing assistance to the people of Kashmir during the past five years. [87455]

Clare Short: Over the past five years, my Department has given over £1.5 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) to support their programmes in Jammu and Kashmir (J and K). We have given a number of grants to Save the Children Fund (SCF) to support their work, including £150,000 to provide food and non-food relief to conflict afflicted families, and £47,000 to help fund their continuing work with children and internally displaced people living in camps and temporary accommodation. We have also helped fund a wide range of mostly small-scale NGO development projects in Kashmir, and through the Small Grants Scheme we have provided support for a maternity hospital in Anantnag.

In Pakistan-administered Kashmir, we have funded a community education project in the Muzaffarabad district, and a basic health care project in the Neelum valley.

During my recent visit to Delhi, I raised with the Government of India the prospect of DFID providing further support for development and conflict reduction in J and K. My officials are now taking this forward.

Mauritania

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department has given to deal with the food shortage in Mauritania. [87093]

Clare Short [holding answer 16 December 2002]: We have provided US$158,563 to World Food Programme (WFP) in 2002 for food assistance to Mauritania. A further emergency appeal from the WFP is expected shortly. This is expected to cover food shortage needs of five countries in the region, including Mauritania. We will be considering this appeal and are also considering a related proposal from Oxfam. Funding is also provided via the EC, of which DFID share around 19 per cent. In 2000 (the latest figures available) this amounted to approximately £7.8 million.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by her or her predecessor and (b) by ministers in her Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87352]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002.

New Partnership for Africa's Development

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries have notified the chairman of the NEPAD heads of state and Goverment Implementation Committee that they wish to participate in the African Peer Review Mechanism. [87214]

Clare Short: Algeria, Republic of Congo, Egypt, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Mali, Mauritius, Mozambique, Nigeria, Rwanda, South Africa and Uganda have signed the Declaration of Intent to accede to the African Peer Review Mechanism.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pensioners (Portsmouth, South)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners within the Portsmouth, South constituency will benefit from the introduction of the pension tax credit in October 2003; and if he will make a statement. [85870]

Mr. McCartney: Estimates of pension credit entitlement are not available at constituency level due to the insufficient sample cases in the survey data used. However, just under half of all pensioner households across Great Britain will be eligible for Pension Credit. Such information as is available relates to pensioners in the Portsmouth, South constituency receiving the Minimum Income Guarantee (MIG) and is as follows:

As at August 2002, there were 3,200 MIG recipients in the Portsmouth, South constituency.

Benefit Payments

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the process a customer will go through to ensure benefits are paid into (a) a new Post Office card account and (b) a bank account, when their DWP benefit book ends. [84290]

Mr. McCartney: The Department is contacting customers and providing them with information (including letters and leaflets) which clearly sets out the account options as part of the move to Direct Payment. Customers will then be able to consider the options available and choose the account that best meets their needs and circumstances. They will be asked to provide details of their chosen account so that the Department can begin to pay their benefit or pensions by Direct Payment.

Those who wish to use an existing account will simply need to provide their account details. DWP will issue a Personal Invitation Document (PID) to customers who choose to open a Post Office card account. This document is taken to a Post Office branch where the customer will be given a Post Office card account application form.

Benefits

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what steps he is taking to find the lost papers sent to his Department last July concerning the claim of Mrs Noreen Hooper of Brixham; and if he will make a statement. [81965]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 19 November 2002]: This is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, the Chief Executive of The Pension Service. As customers' personal details are confidential she will write to the hon. Member privately.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average cost of processing a CSA application has been in each year since its creation; and if he will make a statement on the results of the operational readiness review conducted in September and October into the modernisation of payments programme. [83711]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Doug. Smith to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated December 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent parliamentary questions about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from me.

You ask what the average cost of processing a CSA application has been in each year since its creation and also, if the Secretary of State will make a statement on the results of the operational readiness review conducted in September and October into the modernisation of payments programme.

We do not have the average cost of processing a Child Support Agency application prior to 1999–2000. However, I have attached the details from that date to the present.

At 31 March	Average cost per case
2000	77.65
2001	97.44
2002	84.48
2002 (to October)	90.28

The cost per case has been calculated on the basis of the average number of staff employed on processing cases to assessment and the number of cases cleared in each of the years stated. The cost per case fluctuates due to corresponding changes in the quantity of cases cleared; the number of cases cleared changes in accordance with the Agency's operational priorities.

The Payment Modernisation Programme has advised that the gated review process within the Department allows for a number of formal reviews. The Payment Modernisation Programme successfully navigated through the Operational Readiness Review gate during September and October. This enabled the Programme to commence the first phase in the move towards Direct Payment, including mailings sent to Veterans Agency customers from 7 October and Child Benefit customers from 28 October 2002.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what external audit he has commissioned of the Child Support Agency's new IT system. [85859]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from D. Smith to Mr. Mark Todd, dated December 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent parliamentary questions about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You ask what external audit he has commissioned of the Child Support Agency's new IT system.

The new IT system is being built and will be operated, by EDS, a major IT service provider in the private sector. A number of reviews have been carried out over the life of the project designed to assure the Agency that the IT system will meet its requirements. These fall into three main areas:

The Department's own Internal Assurance Service have carried out a number of audits on specific parts of the system.

A technical review, focussed on the approach to development and testing, was carried out by an external organisation, in early 2001. The Department's own Technology Office have also continued to validate the on-going development following that initial technical review. In addition, there have also been a number of reviews of the wider programme, including the approach to developing the IT system carried out by external consultants.

The Office for Government Commerce has carried out two project 'gateway' reviews. The first, in April 2001, concentrated on the development phase of the project and the second, in February 2002, on the-readiness for implementation, including the IT system. Each of these reviews highlighted the risk inherent in building and implementing a large complex IT system; but have confirmed that the Agency's risk management processes are effective.

National Audit Office have been kept informed of the: development of the Agency's new IT system and have regular briefing sessions to keep them updated on the key issues at the various stages of development: Their staff receive copies of the high level strategies, other low level documents for information and copies of-the end of stage reviews and internal audit reports that have been carried out on specific areas of the Child Support Reform Programme that are delivering the reforms. Later this year they intend to produce a position statement building on the comments they made last year in the Comptroller and Auditor General's report.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on (a) the CSA's complaints system and (b) the Independent Case Examiner's Annual Report 2001–02. [86534]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Archy Kirkwood dated 18 December 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying the your recent parliamentary questions about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from me.

You ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on (a) the CSA's complaints system and (b) the Independent Case Examiner's Annual Report 2001–02.

The Agency recognises that it needs to improve the handling of complaints and as a result conducted a detailed review of the complaints process. The recommendations from this review are being taken forward as part of the Child Support Reform programme. The key deliverable from this work is a standard process and organisation for handling client complaints. This will include:

Dedicated complaints resolution teams.

Clients, staff and stakeholders knowing how a complaint will be progressed whatever the client's location.

Complaint resolution plans agreed with the client, which specify the actions and timescales to resolve the complaint.

Senior Resolution Managers heading up a technical assurance team in each Business Unit. These teams deal with cases that cannot be resolved by the complaints resolution teams or have been referred to them by the Chief Executive or Area Director.

Accepting, recording, tracking and resolving complaints over the telephone A new aftercare process to ensure that once a case is back on track, it remains so.

A Centre of Excellence, to analyse and learn from complaints data.

In 2001/02 the Child Support Agency has worked hard with the Independent Case Examiner to reduce the backlog of outstanding complaints. Advice on how the Agency might best improve the way it handles complaints has proved invaluable.

Using this information the Agency has made some significant steps forward in improving its service to our clients including:

Restructuring the front end of its business to provide an end-to-end service for new clients, and on each team have a dedicated specialist complaints handler Creating new IT support for debt management, appointed new bailiffs improve efficiency and reduce the complaints about lack of activity in this area

These improvements are a part of the comprehensive modernisation programme in which the Agency is engaged and against that background we will continue to work closely with the Independent Case Examiner to significantly reduce the number of complaints referred to her office where she finds that the Agency has not done enough either to apologise, to offer compensation and redress or to resolve the position for the future.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average cost was of processing a Child Support Agency application in each year since the CSA was created. [86703]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from D. Smith to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated December 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent parliamentary questions about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from me.

You ask what the average cost was of processing a Child Support Agency application in each year since the Child Support Agency was created.

I refer you to my previous answer to parliamentary question (ref no. 83711) which states:

'We do not have the average cost of processing a Child Support Agency application prior to 1999/00 however, I have attached the details from that date to the present.

At 31st March	2000	2001	2002	2002 (to Oct)
Average cost per case (£)	77.65	97.44	84.48	90.28

The cost per case has been calculated on the basis of the average number of staff employed on processing cases to assessment and the number of cases cleared in each of the years stated'.

CSA

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in what percentage of CSA cases where the resident parent is (a) a private client and (b) not a private client, (i) the non-resident parent paying regular child maintenance and (ii) the identity and contact details of the non-resident parent are known to the agency. [81955]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Doug Smith to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated November 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent parliamentary questions about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You ask in what percentage of Child Support Agency cases where the resident parent is (a) a private client and (b) not a private client (i) the non-resident parent paying regular child maintenance and (ii) the identity-and contact details of the non-resident parent are known to the Agency.

84% of private clients and 74.8% of non private clients are, where amounts are due to be paid, in receipt of child maintenance payments. Unfortunately, we do not collect details of the number of non-resident parents where we have contact details.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether a claim for Disability Living Allowance in respect of ME may be classified as relating to mental illness. [87128]

Maria Eagle: Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance depends on the effects that severe physical or mental disability has on a person's need for personal care and/or their ability to walk, and not on particular disabilities or diagnoses. The benefit is available to people with myalgic encephalomyelitis (which can have a physical basis or a psychological basis, or can be due to a combination of factors) on exactly the same terms as other severely disabled people, and they can qualify for it provided that they meet the usual entitlement conditions.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the cost of extending entitlement to the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance to the over-65s. [87750]

Maria Eagle: Up to date estimates are not available. However, information from the 1996–97 Disability Survey suggested that the annual cost of extending entitlement to the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance to people who claim after the age of 65 would be in the region of £2.7 billion[1].

[1] Costs is rounded to nearest 100 million and subject to a significant margin of error reflecting underlying uncertainties of modelling entitlement from available survey data. Cost includes effects on income related benefits.

Disabled People (Opportunities)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures are in place to (a) encourage employers to increase the opportunities offered to disabled people and (b) challenge people to donate time to charitable and community projects in the European Year of Disabled People. [86867]

Maria Eagle: Jobcentre Plus will continue to operate a number of measures involving employers during the European Year of Disabled People. Programmes such as WORKSTEP, Access to Work, the Job Introduction Scheme, and Work Preparation will identify job opportunities and help disabled people into work.

We have launched a project fund of £2.3 million to enable a wide range of disability organisations to undertake community projects across the country. We are sponsoring more than 170 projects.

In addition we are using the National Coordinating Committee (NCC) for the European Year to encourage participation among its membership organisations. These include the Federation of Small Businesses, the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress, and a range of organisations representing disabled people.

Employers Liability Insurance

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many inspections have been undertaken in North Staffordshire to measure compliance with the requirement for companies to have current employers liability insurance. [84048]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are not able to break down information specifically for North Staffordshire. Information available covers the Marches area, which comprises Shropshire and Staffordshire.

During the period 1 April 2002 to 30 September 2002 HSE recorded a total of 117 contacts with companies where Employers' Liability Compulsory Insurance (ELCI) was covered in the Marches area. These contacts were achieved by a combination of visits and phone calls.

The display of a valid certificate for employers liability insurance is one of a number of issues covered by HSE Inspectors and Workplace Contact Officers. There were four occasions in the Marches area during the period April to September 2002, where a valid certificate of employer's liability could not be produced. In each case HSE made a statutory request ('Notice to Produce') for its production. All four companies complied with the request within the stated period.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what timetable has been established for the review of employers' liability insurance. [87481]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Ministerial Statement I gave on 12 December 2002, Official Report, columns 23–24WS.

Hand-written Medical Reports

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many hand-written medical reports in relation to (a) Attendance Allowance, (b) Disability Living Allowance and (c) Incapacity Benefit were prepared by doctors employed by Medical Services or its predecessors, in the five years to October 2001; how many of these reports were completed by a person other than the relevant doctor; how many completed by someone other than the relevant doctor were the subject of disability appeal tribunal hearings; in how many of the cases, which were the subject of appeal, the original decision was altered on the basis of medical evidence; and how many claimants sought and received copies of the hand-written medical reports. [86118]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: In the period 1 September 1998 to 31 October 2001 790,023 Attendance Allowance and Disability Living Allowance reports and 1,450,554 Incapacity Benefit reports were completed. No records are kept of the number of reports completed before the contract for Medical Service was let in September 1998.

All reports were provided by approved doctors and were hand written. In July 2001 Medical Services were made aware of two reports which had been completed by another person, from contemporaneous notes made by the approved doctor, in the interests of better legibility. As a result, guidance was issued to all doctors that no report for Medical Services can be hand written by any person other than the relevant doctor.

As the Department does not keep records of the information used by a decision maker in individual cases it is not possible to identify the number of appeals related to reports completed by someone other than the relevant doctor. Neither is it possible to identify cases where the original decision was altered on the basis of medical evidence.

The Department does not keep records of requests made for copies of medical reports.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his officials have met the Social Security Advisory Committee to discuss the regulations concerning housing benefit reform; and whether the Committee has requested the referral of the regulations. [83870]

Malcolm Wicks: We are fully committed to involving the Social Security Advisory Committee in the drafting of new regulations supporting Housing Benefit reform.

Officials have met the Committee to provide an initial introduction to Housing Benefit reform, and draft regulations will be presented to the Committee early in the new year. The Committee will then decide whether they wish the regulations to be referred formally.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have had income from a private pension or permanent health insurance taken into account for the purposes of calculating their incapacity benefit claiming and what the average reduction in benefit has been for people affected in this way. [86717]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Incapacity Benefit (IB) exists to provide a measure of earnings replacement for people of working age who are incapable of work. Where a person is duplicating this provision, the law provides for this to be taken into account. If a person claiming IB receives an occupational pension, personal pension or payments through a permanent health insurance scheme of £85 per week or more, their IB is reduced by half the amount which exceeds £85. Only people making claims from 6 April 2001 are affected by the new rules.

As of 31 August 2002, 17,500 people have had their IB reduced under these rules with an average reduction of £33.18.

Notes:

1. Number of people who have had their benefit reduced is rounded to the nearest hundred.

2. Figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in which postcode areas Jobcentre Plus regulations are in force and in which particularly mandatory interviews for claimants in receipt of benefits other than Jobseekers Allowance apply. [86716]

Malcolm Wicks: Mandatory work-focused meetings were introduced from October 2001 in 56 Jobcentre Plus pathfinder offices and 39 work-focused interview sites. The postcode areas covered by these offices and sites are listed in a schedule to the Social Security (Jobcentre Plus Interviews) Regulations 2001 (SI 3210).

These regulations were revoked in June 2002 and have been superseded by the Social Security (Jobcentre Plus Interviews) Regulations 2002 (S11703). These regulations do not include a schedule of postcodes, but allow for the gradual rollout of the new Jobcentre Plus service. The offices that have been rolled out under these regulations, and the postcodes that they cover, are in the table.

Office	Postcodes covered
Bridgnorth	DY7 5DR, DY7 5DS, DY7 5ER, DY7 5EU, DY7 5LF, DY7 5LJ, DY12 1SU, ST19 9AP, TF11 8, TF11 9, TF12 5, TF13 6, WR15 8, WV5 7, WV6 7, WV7 3, WV8 1, WV15 5, WV15 6, WV16 4, WV16 5, WV16 6

Where a full postcode is not given the office covers the whole of the postal area shown

Pension Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensions scheme wind-ups have there been in each of the past five years when the company has been (a) solvent and (b) insolvent; and how many members have been affected in each case. [86550]

Mr. McCartney: The information that is available is in the tables.

There are different reasons why pension schemes are wound up. The schemes' sponsoring employer might, for example, become insolvent or the employer might decide to wind up one type of pension scheme in order to replace it with another type.

Notes:

1. The information is based on data held by the Pension Schemes Registry (PSR). It includes all types of pension schemes. The PSR registers schemes for tracing purposes and to enable it to collect the levy from all those pension schemes required to pay it. The PSR was not designed to provide comprehensive statistical data on schemes winding up. However, the information held by the PSR is the most relevant material available.
2. The PSR does not hold information about whether the sponsoring company of the pension scheme was solvent or insolvent, this information is not required for their purposes.
3. There are no figures available for the period 1 April 2002 to date, due to a change in the Pension Registry's computer system. These figures will be available after March 2003.

Pensioner Income

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Government remains committed to the commitment on page 103 of the 1998 Green Paper, Cm 4179, on increasing the proportion of pensioners' incomes that comes from the private sector. [86737]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the oral statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, Official Report, 17 December 2002, columns 694—710.

Pensions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people he estimates will claim state pension in each of the next five years. [87520]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested. However, such information as is available is set out in the table.

Number of men and women reaching state pension age between 2003 and 2007

	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
Men aged 65	275,000	274,000	271 ,000	258,000	274,000
Women aged 60	332,000	343,000	349,000	355,000	435,000

Pension Credit

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners within the Harwich Constituency will benefit from the introduction of the pension tax credit in October 2003. [85252]

Mr. McCartney: Estimates of pension credit entitlement are not available at individual constituency level due to the insufficient sample cases in the survey data used. However, just under half of all pensioner households across Great Britain will be eligible to Pension Credit. Such information as is available relates to pensioners in the Harwich constituency receiving the Minimum Income Guarantee (MIG) and is as follows:

As at August 2002, there were 4,200 MIG recipients in the Harwich constituency.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in the Eastern region will benefit from the pensions tax credit. [85280]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 12 December 2002]: Estimates of pension credit entitlement are not available on a regional basis due to the insufficient sample cases in the survey data used. However, just under half of all pensioner households across Great Britain will be eligible for Pension Credit. Such information as is available relates to pensioners in the eastern region receiving the Minimum Income Guarantee (MIG) and is as follows:

As at August 2002, there were 133,700 MIG recipients in the Eastern region.

Skills Training Pilots

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how the skills training pilots in North Nottinghamshire and Leeds are being evaluated; how many participants there were; how many sanctions were imposed; and if he will make a statement; [86701]

(2) what plans he has to introduce the skills training pilot throughout the United Kingdom. [86702]

Malcolm Wicks: Between September 2001 and April 2002 we piloted a number of approaches aimed at encouraging greater take up of basic skills provision by people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance. These included testing different mechanisms to identify those with basic skills needs, and the use of financial incentives and/or benefit sanctions to encourage the take up of training.

In North Nottinghamshire we piloted the use of benefit sanctions if a client refused an offer of training or left training early without good cause. In Leeds we combined the use of sanctions with financial incentives of £20 per week on top of their benefit for taking up training and £100 for achieving a basic skills qualification. In the two pilots, 1,623 clients had a possible basic skills need identified. Of these, 18 had sanctions applied, three because they failed to attend a basic skills assessment and 15 because they failed to attend training or left early without good cause.

All the basic skills pilots are subject to an extensive, longitudinal evaluation study. This is looking at both the quantitative and qualitative aspects of the pilots. The final evaluation report will be available in summer 2003. We will use the evidence from the evaluation to decide what changes we might make to help encourage more Jobcentre Plus clients to take up offers of help to improve their basic skills.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Lady Hermon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if Mr. Liam Campbell and Mr. Michael McKevitt have been awarded legal aid in respect of civil charges due to be brought against them relating to the bomb attack in Omagh on 15 August 1998. [87059]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It would be inappropriate to comment on individual legal aid applications. The grant or refusal of civil legal aid is a matter for the Law Society of Northern Ireland, through its Legal Aid Committee.

CAFCASS

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what consultations she has had with CAFCASS regarding (a) the ratification of its new standards and (b) the complaints procedure it may put in place. [87316]

Ms Rosie Winterton: CAFCASS is a non-departmental public body and there is no requirement for my Department to ratify their national standards. CAFCASS's corporate plan for 2002–06, agreed with Ministers and published in February 2002, set out CAFCASS's commitment to develop national standards and a new complaints procedure for the service. CAFCASS consulted widely on their proposed national standards and complaints procedure. CAFCASS intend to implement both next year.

Parental Responsibility

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the Government's policy is on the EU proposal for a Council Regulation on Mutual Recognition of Decisions on Parental Responsibility; if he will place a copy of the current text of the Proposal in the Library; and whether the current text will be detrimental to the effective operation of the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction between EU member states. [87246]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government support the underlying aim of this proposal, namely to extend the principle of mutual recognition to all decisions on parental responsibility by establishing a clear and coherent set of rules for attributing jurisdiction, and putting in place arrangements for co-operation between the courts and central authorities of member states. Agreement was reached at a Council of Ministers meeting on 29 November, on revised provisions relating to child abduction. The Government support strongly these additional measures which will, for intra-EU cases, augment the 1980 Hague Convention without affecting its operation, and have met with approval in the Permanent Bureau of the Hague Conference. A copy of this agreement has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Transsexual People

Mr. Todd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when she expects full legal status to be granted to transsexual people; and if she will make a statement. [87784]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government is committed to legislating as soon as possible to give legal recognition to transsexual people in their acquired gender. I refer the hon. Member to the Ministerial Statement I gave on Monday 16 December 2002.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) when she expects to respond to the European Court of Justice ruling that discrimination against transsexuals is in breach of the Equal Treatment Directive; [87280]

(2) what plans she has for ending discrimination against transsexuals. [87276]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the Ministerial Statement I made on Monday 16 December. This sets out our plans for giving transsexual people legal recognition in their acquired gender. Transsexual people are already protected from discrimination in employment and vocational training by the Sex Discrimination (Gender Reassignment) Regulations 1999, subject to limited exceptions. The Government are considering whether those exceptions should be modified in respect of transsexual people granted legal recognition in their acquired gender.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Affordable Housing

12. Mr. Streeter: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to provide sufficient affordable housing in the south-west. [86330]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has increased investment. The south-west will receive £74.3million for affordable housing through the Housing Corporation's ADP in 2003–04, up £12.5million on this year. And reforms to the planning process will make the system more responsive to the need for affordable housing. Housing market imbalances are a key consideration as my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister develops a long-term programme of action for thriving communities—my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has promised to report back to the House on this in the new year.

Comprehensive Performance Assessment

13. Jim Knight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) capacity support and (b) intervention will be available for under-performing authorities identified through the comprehensive performance assessment process. [86331]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government want the public to receive a continuously improving standard of services from local authorities. The Government will work with those authorities which are identified as poorly performing by the comprehensive performance assessment to ensure that they move swiftly to put an effective recovery plan in place.

Decent Home Standards

14. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the progress he has made in setting the decent home standards. [86332]

Mr. McNulty: The decent home standard was finalised in February and guidance on its implementation was issued in Mach.

Firefighters' Training

15. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what disruption to the training of firefighters has been caused by the allocation of fire-fighting equipment from training facilities to the armed forces. [86333]

Mr. Raynsford: Some courses have had to be postponed at the Fire Service College at Moreton in Marsh due to the non-availability of appliances. The scope for re-arranging these courses will be reviewed in the new year in consultation with the fire brigades.

Local fire authorities who have provided reserve training red engines, have reported no significant disruption to their training schedules.

Local Authority Housing (Sheffield)

16. Mr. Allan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received since May concerning the future of local authority housing in Sheffield. [86334]

Mr. McNulty: Since May 2002, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received representations from the Leader, the Leader of the Opposition and the Chief Executive of Sheffield city council, from Jean Gleadall, Chair of Sheffield Tenants and Residents Together, and from an individual tenant and from the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam.

Homelessness

17. Mike Gapes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policies are for tackling homelessness. [86335]

Mrs. Roche: The March 2002 report, "More than a Roof", sets out our new approach to tackling homelessness. This includes stronger homelessness legislation, £125 million investment this year, and action to sustain reductions in rough sleeping and to ensure that homeless families with children are not forced to live in B&B hotels.

"More than a roof" and the Government's response to it set out a challenging new approach to tackling homelessness. One that focuses as much on the problems homeless people face as the places they live.

Specific measures include:

£125 million investment to tackle homelessness (2002–03);

a commitment that by March 2004 local authorities will ensure that no homeless family with children has to live in a B&B hotel, except in an emergency—and in these cases use should not be for longer than 6 weeks; changes to housing benefit rules worth around £10 million, to boost incentives for private sector leasing by local authorities. This change increases the housing benefit subsidy levels for self-contained private sector leasing which makes it more financially viable, especially when compared to B&B subsidy rates.

Planning

18. Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his plans to reform the planning system. [86336]

Mr. McNulty: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, South (Mr. Clarke) on 18 December 2002.

New Towns

19. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with representatives of the New Towns since the Government's reply to the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Committee's report on the Future of the New Towns. [86337]

Mr. McNulty: Officials at the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have been in touch with the New Town Special Interest Group to discuss the way forward in the context of my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's sustainable communities agenda.

Transport and Social Exclusion

20. Mr. Miller: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Social Exclusion Unit report, "Transport and Social Exclusion". [86338]

Mrs. Roche: The Social Exclusion Unit published interim findings from its transport and social exclusion project on its website in May 2002. Copies of the report are available in the Library of the House.

The Unit's final report, which builds on the interim report and examines the links between transport provision, the location of services, and social exclusion, will be published shortly.

Council Housing

21. Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his plans to increase the provision of council housing. [86339]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans to increase the provision of council housing.

Increases in the supply of affordable housing are now delivered through Registered Social Landlords.

Housing

22. Margaret Moran: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he is taking to further encourage development of housing on brown-field sites and through refurbishment. [86340]

Mr. McNulty: Planning Policy Guidance Note 3, 'Housing' gives priority to re-using previously-developed land within urban areas, bringing empty homes back into use and converting existing buildings in preference to the development of green-field sites. Planning policies are backed by a package of fiscal measures, including a 150 per cent. tax credit for cleaning up contaminated land, reductions in VAT to encourage conversions of existing property into dwellings and the re-use of long-term empty homes, and a tax allowance for flats over shops to encourage use of redundant space.

British Standards (Compliance Costs)

23. Mr. Randall: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has had regarding compliance costs relating to British Standard EN 54.4 and EN 54.2. [86341]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not received any recent representations about compliance costs relating to British Standard EN 54.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

24. Mr. Reed: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will introduce legislation to license landlords of houses in multiple occupation. [86342]

Mr. McNulty: As announced in the Queen's Speech, the Government intend to publish a draft Housing Bill this session. The Bill will, among other measures, include provisions to introduce a mandatory licensing scheme for houses in multiple occupation.

Following consultation and scrutiny of the draft Bill, it is the Government's intention that it be introduced to Parliament at the earliest possible opportunity.

Firefighters' Dispute

25. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress he has made towards resolving the firefighters' dispute. [86343]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member for Vale of York to the answer given by my right. hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 18 December 2002, Official Report.

Council Tax Banding

26. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to review the council tax banding system. [86344]

Mr. Leslie: The Local Government Bill currently before this House clarifies the power to vary the number of council tax bands. Ahead of the next English council tax revaluation in 2005, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will listen to the views of local government and taxpayers about council tax bands.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to change the housing bands for council tax; how he estimates they will benefit poorer people; and if he will make a statement. [87372]

Mr. Leslie: The Local Government Bill currently before Parliament clarifies the power to vary the number of council tax bands. Work on an English council tax revaluation will begin in 2005, with council tax bills based on updated property values issuing in 2007. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware of the concerns of people who live in low value houses about the current width of band A. Ahead of revaluation the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will listen to the views of local government and taxpayers about council tax bands. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will decide on any changes to the banding structure nearer to the time of the revaluation.

Local Authority Performance Measures

27. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will review the measures he uses to assess the performance of local authorities with reference to the initial experience of such measures. [86345]

Mr. Raynsford: The Local Government White Paper, "Strong Local Leadership-Quality Public Services", charged the Audit Commission with developing and implementing the methodology for Comprehensive Performance Assessment (CPA) of local authorities in England. The Commission reported the CPA outcomes for county and unitary authorities last week. An assessment framework for district councils is currently being developed and trialed.

Both the Audit Commission and the Government will wish to reflect on what has been learnt from CPA this year.

High Performing Councils

28. Valerie Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what additional freedoms and flexibilities he expects to be able to give to high performing councils. [86346]

Mr. Raynsford: For the very best authorities there will be no ring-fencing of funding (other than grants passed to schools); a three year 'inspection holiday'; removal of almost all requirements to produce plans and an opportunity to discuss with Government further freedoms through an Innovations Forum.

South-east Regional Assembly

29. Mr. Cameron: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many representations he has received about the establishment of a regional assembly in the South East in the last 12 months. [86347]

Mr. Raynsford: Between 9 May 2002, when the White Paper "Your Region, Your Choice" was published, and 6 December 2002, we received 215 written or e-mailed responses to the White Paper which can be identified as having come from the South East. In addition we have received 2,333 cut-out coupons, in response to a campaign organised by Conservative MEPs in the South East, which express opposition to an elected assembly in the region.

Electoral Pilot

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which local authorities have applied to participate in the May 2003 electoral pilot programme; and which type of programme they have applied for, in each case. [87464]

Mr. Leslie: Sixty three applications to hold an electoral pilot scheme at the May 2003 local elections have been received. My right hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich issued on 17 December 2002 a written statement which lists the 41 applications which have been accepted, relating to non e-voting pilot schemes.

A further 20 applications were submitted by councils wishing to run e-voting pilots. As set out in the prospectus that we published in September, the successful applicants for e-voting pilots will be announced in January. The 20 applicants for e-voting pilots schemes is tabled as follows:

E-Voting—Total: 20

Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council
Chester City Council
Chorley Borough Council
East Northamptonshire Council
Epping Forest District Council
Ipswich Borough Council
Kerrier District Council
Malvern Hills District Council
Norwich City Council
Rushmoor Borough Council
Sheffield City Council
Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough Council
South Somerset District Council
South Tyneside Metropolitan Borough Council
St Albans City and District Council
Stratford-on-Avon District Council
Stroud District Council
Swindon Borough Council
Vale Royal Borough Council
Waveney District Council

The applications submitted by Nottingham City Council (dual early-postal and traditional voting pilot) and by Mid-Suffolk District Council (all-postal pilot in three wards only) have not been accepted at this stage. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister officials will be in discussion with those authorities to consider whether revised applications can be put forward.

Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his Answer of 12 December ref. 86872, on environmental impact assessments, for what types of project an environmental impact assessment is mandatory. [87906]

Mr. Leslie: Projects for which Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) is required are set out in the Town and Country Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) (England and Wales) Regulations 1999. Schedule 1 to the Regulations lists projects for which EIA is always required. Schedule 2 lists those that the planning authority must screen to establish whether they are likely to have significant effects on the environment, in which case EIA will be required. There is nothing to prevent a developer voluntarily undertaking an assessment for a project for which there is no statutory requirement for EIA.

Fire Safety Bill

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to publish a fire safety bill. [87800]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government will publish a White Paper on the Fire Service in the spring. This will set out in detail the legislative and other changes required to take forward the modernisation programmes set out in the final report of the Independent Review of the Fire Service.

Fire Services

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Government intend to review the funding formula for the fire service with regard to the funding of specialist non-fire services undertaken by the fire service. [87802]

Mr. Raynsford: On 5 December, as part of the provisional local government finance settlement for England for 2003–04, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister announced proposals resulting from the review of the local government grant distribution system. This includes a new fire distribution formula which takes account of the widening role of the fire service as a fire and rescue service. The Bain report, published on 16 December 2002, recommended that the Government look again at the formula.

We will consider this and Bain's other recommendations in a White Paper to be published next year.

Helplines and Hotlines

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many calls (a) Supporting People helpline and (b) High Hedges hotline have received so far. [87467]

Mr. McNulty: Up to 13 December the Supporting People helpline has received 2,987 calls. We do not have a dedicated high hedges hotline. However, we estimate that since June we have taken about 100 telephone calls on high hedges and our Trees and Problem Hedges website has attracted almost 5,000 visitors.

Homeless People

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many homeless people are living rough, broken down by health authority. [87203]

Mrs. Roche: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

On 12 September 2002, it was announced that an estimated 596 people are sleeping rough on any one night in England based on data collated from local authorities in the summer of 2002. Because health authority areas and local authority areas are not coterminous, it is not possible to give the number of people sleeping rough broken down by local health authority area.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what support he gives to homeless people discharged from hospital. [87206]

Mrs. Roche: Under the homelessness legislation, local housing authorities must ensure that suitable accommodation is available for people who are unintentionally homeless and who have a priority need for accommodation. This would include people who are vulnerable and unintentionally homeless on leaving hospital.

In addition, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working with the Department of Health on its revision of the Hospital Discharge Workbook, due to be published shortly. This emphasises that all acute hospitals should have formal admission and discharge policies, which will ensure that homeless people are identified on admission, and their pending discharge notified to relevant primary health care services and to homeless service providers, so that people are not in a position of being made homeless at this point.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made on improving the access of homeless people to health care under the national homelessness strategy. [87447]

Mrs. Roche: The Homelessness Directorate's report, "More than a roof", set out a new approach to tackling homelessness, focused on the problems that homeless people face in the places where they live. It identified addressing health needs as critical in helping homeless people as well as preventing homelessness.

In the Cross-Cutting Review on health inequalities, which the Government published on 20 November, inequalities faced by vulnerable groups—including homeless people—were identified as a top-line priority. As part of Government's response to this through measures to improve access to health services for vulnerable groups and others, the Government have put in place more than 1,300 Personal Medical Service Pilots and 42 NHS Walk-in Centres. Local authorities are expected to work with a range of organisations to deliver their homelessness strategies, including Primary Care Trusts on appropriate health services.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many copies of Drug Services for Homeless People: A good practice handbook have been distributed; and what range of organisations has received it. [87465]

Mrs. Roche: All Drug Action Teams (DATs) and key local authorities and homelessness agencies were e-mailed a letter from the Under-Secretary of State, Home Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) and myself about Drug Services for Homeless People: a good practice handbook on 4 December. They were directed to www.homelessness.odpm.gov.uk/homelessness/pubs/drug-services/index.htm where the document can be downloaded, and were given the opportunity to be e-mailed the document directly. In addition, over 700 hard copies of the handbook are being posted this week to all DATs, Drugs Prevention Advisory Service (DPAS) co-ordinators, local authority Housing Directors and other key contacts. Further free copies are available from my Department's free distribution centre.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding his Department is setting aside for (a) the research into the impact of temporary accommodation on health and education of homeless families and (b) the project to evaluate different models of family support to establish good practice announced in his press release of 3 December; when he expects this work to be completed; and which Government and non-Government groups will be involved. [87466]

Mrs. Roche: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will be commissioning a major survey of homeless households in temporary accommodation early in the new year. The research will examine the factors that led to homelessness among a representative sample of households placed in temporary accommodation under the homelessness legislation, and the impact of homelessness and life in temporary accommodation on those households.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's procurement guidance strongly advises against releasing the project budget in advance of commissioning the work as this can distort competition. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will ensure that sufficient funding is available to cover the estimated cost of the research which we anticipate will take up to two years to be completed.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will consult other Government Departments, including the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills, on the research. In taking forward the work, the appointed contractors will be expected to consult local authorities and other interest groups.

In line with the commitment to tackle homelessness more effectively we are also commissioning a project to evaluate different models of family support. The project will examine models led by different agencies, the voluntary sector, Primary Care Trust and a local authority (Hull City Primary Care Trust, Blackpool City Primary Care Trust, Leicester City Council and the Field Lane Foundation in London). All the models chosen demonstrate multi-agency working and have a health focus. The research will examine the effectiveness of the models in preventing repeat homelessness and will identify good practice to influence future delivery of services.

The evaluation will commence in February 2003 with a review of each service by June 2003, and a final paper by December 2003. Again, it is not appropriate to release the project budget at this stage but we will ensure that there is sufficient funding available to cover the estimated cost of the evaluation. In taking forward the work, the appointed researchers will be expected to consult other relevant interest groups and agencies, drawing on other examples of good practice in the field of family homelessness.

Local Strategic Partnerships

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if it is his policy that local community and strategic partnerships should be subject to legislation on admission to meetings. [87905]

Mr. Leslie: Local strategic partnerships are not statutory bodies. However, each LSP must work for, and be seen to work for the people it serves. We consider that there should be transparency and openness in the way LSPs operate and that information should be easily accessible. The accreditation of LSPs in receipt of the neighbourhood renewal fund specifically addresses these issues in respect of decision making and other processes of an LSP.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list, for the last year for which information is available, the SSA and net spending of each local authority, and the percentage by which the latter varies from the former. [87917]

Mr. Raynsford: The information for 2002–03 budgets has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total central government grant to (a) Taunton Deane Borough Council and (b) Somerset County Council was, broken down by type of grant, in each year since 1990. [87720]

Mr. Raynsford: The total central government grant for Taunton Deane and Somerset County Council since 1990–91, as reported by the local authority, is set out in the tables.

(a) Taunton Deane

Between 1990–91 and 1992–93, under the community charge system, these grants were paid into Taunton Deane's collection fund, and supported expenditure by both Taunton Deane and Somerset county council.

[2] General grants include revenue support grant, SSA reduction grant, central support protection grant, GLA general grant, redistributed business rates and neighbourhood renewal fund. Between 1990–91 and 1992–93, under the community charge system, these grants were paid into the collection funds of the district councils in Somerset, and supported expenditure by both the districts and Somerset county council.

[3] Between 1990–91 and 1994–95 this includes police grant. From 1995–96 police grant was paid directly to Avon and Somerset Police. The rise in specific grants in 2000–01 can be attributed mainly to extra grants related to Education Standards Fund, Teachers Pay Reform and Magistrates Court.

Local Sport

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to ensure that sport is provided for within local authority community plans; and if he will make a statement. [87650]

Mr. Leslie: The content of each local authority's community strategy will vary from one area to another, depending on local priorities as established in consultation with the local community and other partner organisations. The recent announcement concerning freedoms and flexibilities for local authorities recommended that local cultural strategies should be subsumed within community strategies. Where this happens, the profile of sport will be raised in forming part of the strategic vision for the area. In addition, the role of all cultural and leisure services within community strategies will be included in the forthcoming evaluation which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will commission early in 2003.

New Deal for Communities

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much money has been distributed through the New Deal for Communities to fund programmes aimed at increasing benefit take-up. [86739]

Mrs. Roche: New Deal for Communities is a key programme in the Government's national strategy to renew the most deprived neighbourhoods in the country. It tests out the new approaches in the strategy, in 39 neighbourhoods across England.

The Government have provided the following funding to enable Benefits Agency—and latterly, Jobcentre Plus staff—to work with New Deal for Communities partnerships on issues relating to benefits and helping people to find jobs.

2000–01—£1.6 million
2001–02—£1.7 million

This funding initially aimed to provide information and advice on all Social Security benefits including housing benefit, which can be paid to people on low incomes, and other in-work benefits. Following the creation of the Department for Work and Pensions—bringing together the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service—there has been an equal emphasis on moving people to a more work ready state, job brokering, advising about the various New Deal programmes and in-work benefit advice.

The NRU pays for additional DWP/Jobcentre Plus staff to work in each NDC area. This equates to an extra £50,000 per year for each neighbourhood. Typically, it enables DWP to provide 1–2 dedicated members of staff to work in support of the partnership.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information centrally about the amount of funding allocated by individual partnerships to programmes to increase benefits take-up.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list (a) the number of staff in and (b) the cost of the (i) Rough Sleepers Unit and (ii) Homelessness Directorate in each year since each was established. [87434]

Mrs. Roche: The information is in the table.

Year	Number of staff	Administration budget cost (£ million)
1999–2000	19	0.73
2000–01	36	1.34
2001–02[1]	30	1.3

[1] Homelessness Directorate which incorporated the Rough Sleepers Unit was announced by Lord Falconer on 3 December 2001 and came into being on 1 April 2002.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 267W, if he will require the Rough Sleepers Unit to record rough sleepers who are also asylum seekers separately from other rough sleepers for the purposes of the street count. [87932]

Mrs. Roche: Information from counts undertaken by local authorities does not identify rough sleepers who are asylum seekers. As rough sleepers are not woken, it is not possible to obtain information on their personal status. However outreach teams are encouraged to get as much information about people sleeping rough in their areas as possible so that individual solutions can be found to their rough sleeping where it is possible.

Rural Services

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he is taking to ensure the delivery of services to sparsely populated rural areas; and what resources he is making available. [87707]

Mr. Leslie: Service provision in rural areas is a matter for the delivery bodies in the first instance. For local authorities, the recent provisional local government finance settlement gave every authority a grant increase of at least 3.0 per cent., with education authorities receiving at least 3.5 per cent., Rural shire districts did particularly well, their grant increasing by an average of 7.6 per cent.

Standards Board

Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was of distributing the Standards Board leaflets to hon. Members' offices (a) in their constituency and (b) in the House in December. [87834]

Mr. Leslie: Information about how to make a complaint about breaches of the Local Authorities Codes of Conduct was distributed by the Standards Board for England to hon. Members (a) in their constituencies at a total cost of £5,019 and (b) in the House at a total cost of £622.

HEALTH

"Valuing People"

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding is being provided to each local authority to meet the requirements of "Valuing People". [85501]

Jacqui Smith: Our policies for improving services for people with learning disabilities, their families and carers are set out in the White Paper "Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century" (Cm 5086), published in March 2001.

Some £3 billion a year is already spent on health and social care provision for people with learning disabilities. The proposals in "Valuing People" will help to ensure that this money is spent effectively and efficiently. People with learning disabilities will also benefit from the general growth in total health and social services spending and from specific initiatives.

The White Paper announced the creation of two new funds, the implementation support fund and the learning disability development fund. The support fund, £2.3 million a year for three years from April 2001, is being used to support a range of initiatives connected with the White Paper's programme of action. These include developing and expanding advocacy services across the country.

The development fund has both revenue (£22.6 million) and capital (£20 million) elements. £2 million of the revenue element is being used to fund the "Valuing People" support team and its related activities, with the remainder being distributed to health authorities. It was distributed to the then health authorities (HAs) in March 2002 to support priorities for service change as outlined in joint investment plans they drew up with their partner local authorities. The distribution was based on the NHS general allocation formula except that five authorities received additional money to help them meet the needs of their old long stay population. Where a health authority related to more than one local authority, the allocation was to be divided according to the size of their respective resident populations unless all the parties agreed to an alternative distribution.

The distribution by HA has been placed in the Library.

Learning Disability Partnership Boards were invited to bid for funding from the capital element of the Development Fund. A list of the successful boards has been placed in the Library, but the money will not all be spent in this first financial year.

Child Care

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the number of children in residential care and (b) the total number of staff in residential care establishments for children on 1 June in each of the years since 1997 [80474]

Jacqui Smith: Information about the numbers of looked after children placed in residential placements is shown in the table. This includes children looked after in local authority children's homes and in residential accommodation provided by voluntary and private sector organisations.

Children looked after in residential placements at 31 March 1997 to 2001

	Number of looked after children in residential placements	Total looked after children
1997	6,600	51,200
1998	6,700	53,300
1999	6,600	55,500
2000	7,000	58,100
2001	6,800	58,900

Notes:

1. Data exclude children being looked after under any agreed series of short-term placements.
2. Residential placements include children's homes and hostels and secure units.
3. It excludes residential schools.

Department of Health Form—CLA 100.

Information about the numbers of staff employed in residential care establishments for children is not available as at 1 June. The table shows the whole time equivalent (wte) number of staff employed by local authorities in England in residential care establishments for children as at 30 September, for each year from 1997 to 2001 (the latest year for which data are available). Similar information is not available about the numbers of staff employed by the independent sector.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs retired (a) early and (b) due to ill-health in each year since 1977; and how many left the profession in each year. [84495]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 2 December 2002]: Data in the format requested is not readily available. The number of principal and assistant general medical and ophthalmic practitioners in England and Wales who have received a retirement pension before age 60 and on the grounds of ill-health in each of the financial years 1985 to 2002 is shown in the table.

Acute Trusts

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which acute trusts are running a deficit in this financial year. [87423]

Mr. Hutton: The audited information in respect of the 2002–03 financial performance of National Health Service trusts, including acute trusts, will be published in their individual annual accounts. The audited information will be available centrally in autumn 2003.

Brain Injuries

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding his Department has made available for rehabilitation services for brain-injury patients in London in each of the last three years; what funding he will make available for the next financial year; and if he will make a statement. [86281]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not earmark funds for particular services, such as brain injury rehabilitation. Primary care trusts are responsible for ensuring that services for patients needing brain injury rehabilitation are in place. The configuration of this service provision, however, is a matter for local decision makers as they are best placed to understand the health needs of their local populations.

We would expect that the substantial extra funds this Government have provided to the national health service will help provide improved services for all patients including those needing rehabilitation after a brain injury.

Care Beds

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what changes to the number of (a) private care beds and (b) council care beds he expects to occur in Chorley council area over the next five years; [87048]

(2) how many care beds there are in the Chorley council area; and how many he estimates there will be in each year from 2003 to 2008. [87047]

Jacqui Smith: Information is not available for Chorley council area.

At 31 March 2001 there were 11,600 residential care beds in Lancashire local authority and 1,700 nursing care beds in south Lancashire health authority. Data for 2002 are not yet available.

Forecasts of the number of care home places are not made centrally.

On 23 July 2002, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced additional funding to provide more help for older people. The funding is intended to support 6,000 more care home places in England by March 2006.

Care Housing Places (Elderly)

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of the 50 per cent. increase in the number of extra care housing places for older people, announced on 23 July 2002. [81686]

Jacqui Smith: We propose to increase extra care housing places for older people by 50 per cent. between 1997 and 2006. A further announcement will be made in due course.

Consultant Surgeons (Suspensions)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant surgeons were suspended from clinical duties in the past two years. [87891]

Mr. Hutton: National health service trusts report suspensions lasting longer than six months or longer to the Department. The number of consultants reported has decreased since 30 September 2000.

Year	Total consultants suspended in period
October 2000 to September 2001	23
October 2001 to September 2002	18

Delayed Discharges

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients experienced delayed discharge from hospitals in (a) England and (b) Wales in the last quarter; [82835]

(2) if he will make a statement on the duration of delayed discharges, as a percentage of delayed discharges, waiting (a) less than eight days, (b) eight to 14 days, (c) 15 to 28 days and (d) more than 28 days in the last quarter; [82486]

(3) what proportion of patients awaiting discharge from hospital were delayed from being discharged due to awaiting (a) a care home placement, (b) assessment, (c) public funding, (d) a domiciliary package and (e) other reasons in the last quarter. [82487]

Jacqui Smith [holding answers 25 November 2002]: Delayed Discharge figures for Quarter 1, 2002–03 are available in the Library.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of Welsh resident patients who have had their discharge from hospital in England delayed, in each hospital with more than 20 patients in this category. [87157]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not available centrally. However, in preparing for the introduction of the Community Care (Delayed Discharges, etc) Bill, it was established that the percentage of Welsh resident patients admitted to hospitals in English health authorities near to the border in 2000–01 was very small, an average of 7.5 per cent. of all admissions. No health and social care communities are reporting as many as 20 delays.

Epilepsy

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if an initial health needs assessment of epilepsy has been produced by (a) eastern, (b) London, (c) north-west Greater Manchester, (d) north-west Lancashire, (e) north-west Mersey and Cheshire, (f) northern region, (g) Yorkshire, (h) central south-east, (i) Kent, Surrey and Sussex, (j) south-east five counties, (k) south-west, (l) Trent NORCOM and (m) west midlands NHS regions; which of these NHS regions has agreed a common service strategy for the commissioning of epilepsy services, involving providers and patients/carers representatives in the process; and which of them has agreed common standards, implementation and investment plans for the provision of epilepsy services; [86238]

(2) whether the necessary purchasing arrangements, including setting up service agreements, financial risk-sharing models and establishing primary care trust-led consortia, have been put in place by (a) eastern, (b) London, (c) north-west Greater Manchester, (d) north-west Lancashire, (e) north-west Mersey and Cheshire, (f) northern region, (g) Yorkshire, (h) central south-east, (i) Kent, Surrey and Sussex, (j) south-east five counties, (k) south-west, (l) Trent NORCOM and (m) west midlands NHS regions. [86239]

Mr. Hutton: The majority of epilepsy services are provided in a primary or secondary care setting and are not specialised services. The organisations listed in the question are regional specialised commissioning groups whose function is to commission specialised services, generally located in tertiary hospitals; non-specialised services such as epilepsy services are not within their remit. Surgery is appropriate for less than 5 per cent. of epilepsy patients. It is provided in neurosciences centres and is subject to the same access targets as other forms of elective surgery.

We expect to publish an action plan for epilepsy services following the recommendation in the chief medical officer's 2001 annual report that we should improve the standard of services for people with epilepsy. The action plan will also address the findings of the national clinical audit of epilepsy-related death, which was published in May 2002.

In addition to the epilepsy action plan, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will publish an appraisal of anti-epilepsy drugs next year, followed by a guideline on the diagnosis, management and treatment of epilepsy in 2004. We are also developing the national service framework (NSF) for long-term conditions, which will focus on improving services for neurological conditions, including epilepsy. We expect to publish the NSF in 2004.

General Practitioners

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the age distribution of general practitioners in (a) Hampshire and (b) England. [87236]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The age distribution of general practitioners in England and in Hampshire and Isle of Wight Strategic Health Authority as at March 2002 is shown in the table.

Health Funding

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was granted from each source of support within his Department to (a) Westminster City Council and (b) the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea, outside the revenue support grant settlements, in each year since 1997. [85832]

Jacqui Smith: The tables show the funding made available by the Department to Westminster City Council and the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea outside the revenue support grant settlements in each year since 1997.

Homeless People

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of homeless people are addicted to (a) alcohol and (b) drugs. [87204]

Mrs. Roche: I have been asked to reply.

In 1998, the Social Exclusion Unit's report into rough sleeping stated that 20 per cent. of rough sleepers were misusing drugs. In July 2002, research by the charity Crisis found that 83 per cent. of single homeless people were drug users. Figures for people misusing alcohol were at around 30 to 50 per cent. in the SEU report, and recent anecdotal evidence suggests that this figure is still around the same.

On 4 December 2002, the Home Office's Drug Strategy Directorate and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Homelessness Directorate published new guidance entitled "Drug Services for Homeless People: a Good Practice Handbook", which is aimed at addressing these figures through mainstream and specialised drug services.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Homelessness Directorate is taking to improve the health care of homeless ple. [87435]

Mrs. Roche: I have been asked to reply.

The Homelessness Directorate's report, "More than a Roof", set out a new approach to tackling homelessness, focused on the problems that homeless people face in the places where they live. It identified addressing health needs as critical in helping homeless people, as well as preventing homelessness.

In the Cross-Cutting Review on health inequalities, which the Government published on 20 November 2002, inequalities faced by vulnerable groups, including homeless people, were identified as a top-line priority. As part of Government's response to this through measures to improve access to health services for vulnerable groups and others, the Government have put in place more than 1,300 Personal Medical Service Pilots and 42 NHS Walk-in Centres. Local authorities are expected to work with a range of organisations to deliver their homelessness strategies, including primary care trusts on appropriate health services.

In addition, all local housing authorities are now required, under the Homelessness Act 2002, to conduct a review of homelessness in their district and to adopt a strategy, by July 2003, which must include plans for ensuring that accommodation and support are available for homeless people. As made clear in the statutory Homelessness Code of Guidance for local authorities, published jointly by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Department of Health, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects local housing authorities to work with a range of organisations to deliver the aims of the homelessness strategy and ensure that all the support needs of homeless people are taken into account. This includes working with primary care trusts (PCTs), to deliver appropriate health services to this client group.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training general practitioners receive in relation to the health needs of homeless people. [87436]

Mr. Hutton: Government do not specify the content of the general practitioner training curriculum. This is the job of the joint committee on postgraduate training for general practice (JCPTGP), which is the competent authority for general practice training in the United Kingdom. The JCPTGP is an independent professional body, and it is required by section 9(3) of the Vocational Training Regulations 1997 to determine and publish the curriculum to be followed by a GP registrar, a trainee GP.

The Regulations do specify seven competencies which must be tested, and which the curriculum must therefore teach:

factual medical knowledge sufficient to enable the doctor to perform the duties of a GP;

the ability to apply factual medical knowledge to the management of problems presented by patients in general practice; effective communication, both orally and in writing;

the ability to consult satisfactorily with general practice patients;

the ability to review and critically analyse the practitioner's own working practices and to manage any necessary changes appropriately;

clinical skills; and the ability to synthesise all the above competencies and apply them appropriately in a general practice setting.

GPs are expected therefore to learn in training the skills needed to deal with all their patients.

Invoice Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of external suppliers his Department paid in (a) accordance with agreed contractual conditions and (b) where no such conditions exist, within 30 days of receipt of an undisputed invoice in each of the last five years. [86878]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 12 December 2002]: The Department's payment performance in each of the last five completed financial years is shown in the table.

Financial year	Percentage paid
1997–98	95.3
1998–99	94.4
1999–2000	95.3
2000–01	95.8
2001–02	94.7

Mental Health Acts

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to expedite hearings of people detained under the Mental Health Acts. [82694]

Jacqui Smith: The Secretary of State for Health is required to provide all detained patients with a speedy review of their detention. This responsibility is supported by a secretariat who manage the process and organise the hearings from four regional offices working within a national listing policy. Patients detained under section 2 of the Mental Health Act 1983 are listed within seven days of their application being filed and all other patients as soon as is practically possible, having regard to the interests of justice.

All four Mental Health Review Tribunal (MHRT) offices work within these national procedures and the throughput of cases is managed by a team, headed by a case manager.

In April 2002, an independent review of the MHRT administration was undertaken. The Department is considering the results of the review and what action might be taken further to improve the service.

A project to support a better IT system is in progress and additional staff resources have been provided to the offices since the review began.

Officials from the Department of Health and the Lord Chancellor's Department have been working closely with the Royal College of Psychiatrists to speed up recruitment of members and to elicit a better response to recruitment campaigns.

Prisons

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether prisoners in (a) Garth and (b) Wymott prisons are included in the funding calculation for Chorley South Ribble PCT. [87046]

Jacqui Smith: Prisoners classified by the Office for National Statistics as normally resident in Her Majesty's Prison Garth and HMP Wymott are included in the population figures on which funding calculations for Chorley and South Ribble Primary Care Trust are based. From April 2003 the methodology for taking account of prisoners in PCT allocations will change. PCTs with prisons in their boundaries will receive allocations that take into account the secondary physical health care needs of whole of the local prison population.

Prisons (Mental Health)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of prisoners suffer from psychiatric morbidity. [87444]

Jacqui Smith: A survey of mental ill health in the prison population of England and Wales, undertaken in 1997 by the Office for National Statistics, estimated that around 90 per cent. of prisoners had at least one of the five disorders; personality disorder, psychosis, neurosis, alcohol misuse and drug dependence, considered in the survey.

Public Health Laboratories

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which bodies will undertake the work of the Public Health Laboratories until the Managed Pathology Networks are in operation. [87724]

Mr. Hutton: As outlined in the recently published document, Future arrangements for microbiology laboratory services, all Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) laboratories, except for those designated as Health Protection Agency (HPA) laboratories, will transfer into the management of National Health Service trusts on 1 April 2003.

The Department of Health document, Pathology—the essential service, draft guidance on modernising pathology services, supported the development of managed pathology networks as an effective means of delivering improved pathology services.

The consultation period for this document ended on 30 September 2002. The results of the consultation are currently being considered. It is expected that new guidance will be released to the NHS in the new year.

Sheltered Accommodation

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the definition of very sheltered accommodation is; and how many very sheltered accommodation places there were in each year since 1996. [86292]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The definition of very sheltered housing used by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for housing investment programme purposes is:

Very sheltered housing covers schemes for frail older people that have more provision of a greater level of care than ordinary sheltered housing: for example; the provision of meals, extra wardens, care assistants and additional communal facilities such as special bathrooms and sluice rooms.

The number of very sheltered housing places between 1996 and 2000 is:

	Number of places
1996	17,577
1997	18,041
1998	19,062
1999	19,577
2000	20,269

For 2001 and subsequently, figures will be available from "Supporting People" supply mapping.

Specialised Services (Commissioning)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses he received as part of its review of commissioning arrangements for specialised services from (a) regional specialised commissioning groups, (b) local service providers, (c) commissioners, (d) patients' representatives and (e) carers' representatives. [86236]

Mr. Hutton: A total of 53 responses were directly submitted to the review of commissioning arrangements for specialised services of which many were composite responses:

Regional specialised commissioning groups: 11 responses

Local service providers: 14 responses

Commissioners: 3 responses

Patients' representatives, including voluntary sector organisations and carer's representatives: 14 responses

Plus a further four responses from medical professional bodies, three responses from joint Department/national health service bodies and other four responses.

Trust Mergers

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the acute hospitals in England and Wales that are subject to (a) merger and (b) restructuring proposals. [85792]

Mr. Hutton: The following acute hospitals in England are subject to merger proposals: Princess Royal Hospital NHS Trust and Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust.

Information on individual trust based restructuring proposals is not held centrally.

Issues related to acute hospitals in Wales are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Vaccinations

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what stocks of vaccines are held by the NHS for illnesses known to have the potential to be used in biological warfare. [86034]

Mr. Hutton: The Department holds stocks of anthrax and smallpox vaccines centrally on behalf of the national health service. Such stocks can be rapidly deployed across the United Kingdom for use in the NHS in the event of a bioterrorist incident. A small stock of Anthrax vaccine for protection against occupational exposure is held by the Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS). A stock of botulinum antitoxin is also held by the PHLS for use in the NHS.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Clergy

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the honourable Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what plans there are to establish clergy on civil service terms. [87986]

Mr. Bell: The Archbishops' Council, acting as the Church of England's Central Stipends Authority, bases its recommendations for maternity and paternity provision and long term sick leave for parish clergy upon civil service terms and conditions. Most of the (relatively few) anglican clergy directly employed by the Council or by diocesan offices will also be on civil service terms.

On the wider question of future options in respect of clergy employment rights I refer the hon .Member to my answers earlier this month.

Statutory Employment Rights

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the honourable Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners (1) if he will make a statement on the timetable for the Commissioners' response to the DTI's discussion document on Employment Status in relation to Statutory Employment Rights; [87260]

(2) how many people whose salaries are paid by Church funds are not covered by employment legislation; [87261]

(3) what the terms of reference of the working group on clergy employment arrangements established by the Archbishops' Council are, and who the members are; [87281]

(4) if he would make a statement on the Archbishops' Council's announcement of 10th December on clergy employment.rights [87275]

Mr. Bell: The Archbishops' Council has responded to the DTI's discussion document on Employment Status in relation to Statutory Employment Rights. A copy of the response has been placed in the Library, along with the terms of reference and membership of the working group, and I am happy to provide the hon. Gentleman with his own copy.

From this he will note that there are approximately 9,000 clergy on the central payroll not covered by employment legislation, of which 5,500 have the freehold (and thus have greater employment security than most employees) and 3,500 operate under a bishop's licence (and have less).

CABINET OFFICE

Contingency Planning

Tom Brake: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what discussions his Department has had with the Local Government Association and Emergency Planning Society regarding funding levels for emergency planning. [86599]

Mr. Alexander: Government provides funding for emergency planning in local authorities in England and Wales through the civil defence grant. The Government determines that level at which the grant is set. The LGA were involved in discussions earlier this year on how the grant should be allocated to local authorities.

Tom Brake: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the principal and common medium is for effective and secure communication between emergency services involved in contingency provision, with particular reference to when more than one major geographical area of England is involved. [86600]

Mr. Alexander: The PSTN (Public Switched Telephone Network) is the principal common medium for communication between emergency services throughout the UK. Encrypted telephone instruments are available, for use with the PSTN, to provide secure communication.

Tom Brake: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what arrangements are in place to ensure that emergency services are able to efficiently and effectively liaise and work together in the event of a major civil disaster; and what common training and instructions exist to ensure that emergency services are able to efficiently work and communicate together in such an event. [86597]

Mr. Alexander: The Government's "Dealing with Disaster" (3rd Edition) sets out core guidance for all emergency services in achieving a co-ordinated response in the event of a major incident or disaster. The emergency procedures manuals of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association (CACFOA) and the Ambulance Services Association (ASA) all contain guidance on the management of emergencies.

Because of the lead role of the police in co-ordinating the emergency services response to major incidents, the ACPO guidance sets out, in detail, the relationships and working arrangements between all of the emergency services in responding to a major incident. These arrangements are jointly exercised against different scenarios.

The emergency services each have an emergency procedures sub-committee, which meets regularly to ensure that they abide by best practice in co-ordinating responses.

Apart from their own individual service training and exercise schedules, the emergency services regularly run joint exercises both to train for and to validate their joint response arrangements, especially command, control, and communications. The Cabinet Office Emergency Planning College regularly hosts and runs multi-agency major incident management events. For specific scenario exercising and training, such as those around chemical plants, civil nuclear power stations and major transport arrangements (by rail, sea and air), scenario-based multi-agency exercises are regularly carried out (often as a requirement under licensing regulations). Post Exercise Reports are regularly lodged, for wider dissemination and information, at the Emergency Planning College.

Government Car Service

Andrew Selous: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many cars manufactured outside the United Kingdom are used by the Government car service, broken down by manufacturer. [87833]

Mr. Alexander: Responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers has been delegated under the terms of the framework document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. Nick Matheson, to write to the hon. Member.

WALES

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many departmental Christmas cards he and his Ministers intend to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if he will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card he has sent this year; [88105]

(2) how much will be spent on (a) entertaining, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) other festive activities this Christmas season by his Department and government agencies answerable to his Department; and of this sum how much will be spent in Ministers' (i) private offices and (ii) official residences. [88133]

Peter Hain: I anticipate sending some 600 Christmas cards; my ministerial colleague expects to send up to 500. The total cost of printing these cards is expected to be some £484, postage will be payable on many but not all. It is not possible to accurately measure the staff time involved in issuing them.

I am placing a sample of my card in the Library.

My Department has spent £15 on hosting a party for "Daffodil Kids"—an organisation which provides outings for seriously ill Welsh children.

Other than these, there has been no cost to the public purse arising from Christmas entertaining, decorating, or related festive activities this year.

My Department has no agencies and I have no official residence.

Cockle Industry (Burry Inlet)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to the cockle industry in the Burry Inlet. [86770]

Peter Hain: None. However, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary has received representations from hon. Members representing affected areas of the cockle industry in Wales. These include the Burry Inlet. I am aware that the fishery has been closed for many months during the past two years, following an outbreak of Diarrhetic Shellfish Poisoning (DSP) in cockles. I understand that the fishery is open at the moment.

I understand that the National Assembly for Wales, which has responsibility for fisheries issues, is working with the Food Standards Agency, with the Environment Agency and with Carmarthen and Swansea unitary authorities, to identify the causes of the outbreak, and to agree possible solutions.

I am also advised that the National Assembly for Wales is in the final stages of negotiations with the European Commission about state aids clearance for a compensation scheme for cockle gatherers who have suffered financial hardship because of the closure of the fishery.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87704]

Peter Hain [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The creation of the National Assembly for Wales in July 1999 means that any extant 1998 targets will now lie with the Assembly rather than with my Department.

Statutory Instruments

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Statutory Instruments subject to negative procedure made by his Department (a) came into force and (b) were considered by a delegated legislation committee in each of the last three sessions. [88035]

Peter Hain: The number of negative resolution statutory instruments made solely by my Department in each of the last three Sessions is as follows:

Session	Number
1999–2000	1
2000–01	2
2001–02	1

These statutory instruments were considered by the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments but no points were raised. My Department is also responsible for drafting Orders in Council relating to Wales, some of which may be subject to negative resolution procedure.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Transsexual People

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister for Women what her policy is on including the treatment of transsexuals who are now women within her Department's work. [87277]

Ms Hewitt: The treatment of transsexual people under the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 is already part of the Department of Trade and Industry's responsibilities. The Sex Discrimination Act (Gender Reassignment) Regulations 1999 amended the 1975 Act to protect people intending to undergo, undergoing, or who have undergone gender reassignment from discrimination at work and in vocational training.

The part of the Department with responsibility for these Regulations is the Women and Equality Unit. The wider issue of the legal status of transsexual people is the lead responsibility of the Lord Chancellor's Department.

DEFENCE

Accident Inquiries

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 5 December 2002, Official Report, column 926W, on accident inquiries, whether his Department records the results of boards of inquiry; how many boards of inquiry have been held by his Department in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [87936]

Dr. Moonie: The results of boards of inquiry are recorded by the authority that convenes the board, but there are no central records.

I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 25 November 2002, Official Report, column 1W, and 5 December 2002, Official Report, column 926W. The information concerning the number of boards of inquiry in the Ministry of Defence is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many accidents in each of the last five years in which damage was done to MOD property or equipment cost over £100,000 to repair; and if he will make a statement. [87924]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 25 November 2002, Official Report, column 1W, and 5 December 2002, Official Report, column 926W. Information concerning the number of accidents involving Ministry of Defence property and equipment that have cost over £100,000 to repair is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Alcohol/Drug Misuse

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to reduce (a) alcohol and (b) drug misuse in the armed forces. [86955]

Dr. Moonie: The armed forces employ vigorous education programmes-including pamphlets, films and lectures-at all stages of military training and service to ensure that personnel are aware of the dangers of alcohol and drug misuse. The programmes are regularly reviewed and updated as necessary, and are complemented by administrative and disciplinary measures to deter misuse.

Defence Procurement

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total expenditure on defence procurement was for the last year in which figures are available; and how much of it was spent in Scotland. [86005]

Dr. Moonie: In 2000–01 (the latest year for which published figures are available) procurement expenditure was estimated to be £10,408 million (Table 1.7 UK Defence Statistics, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House, refers). Of this approximately £2,800 million was for the sum of associated costs, intramural research and development spending, overseas equipment expenditure and unrecoverable VAT. The balance, which represents estimated equipment expenditure with United Kingdom industry and commerce, is some £7,600 million. It is not possible to provide a regional breakdown from data available. All of these figures exclude Ministry of Defence non-equipment expenditure on items such as fuel, utilities and some support activities.

Iraq

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contingency plans he has for emergency medical procedures being carried out in the field to troops encountering (a) biological and (b) chemical weapons in Iraq in the event of a war; and if he will make a statement. [86490]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 10 December 2002]: No decisions have yet been made concerning military action against Iraq.

Members of the United Kingdom armed forces are afforded a range of countermeasures which would help protect them against the adverse health effects of chemical and biological weapons. These include physical protection, vaccines and antibiotics against biological agents, and nerve agent pre-treatment sets and Combopen injectors against chemical agents.

Procedures exist for the medical treatment and, if necessary, evacuation of personnel in the event of exposure, or possible exposure, to chemical or biological agents.

Legal Fees

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has (a) spent on legal fees as a result of cases brought against his Department, (b) paid out in out of court settlements and (c) paid out in court-ordered compensation in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [87923]

Dr. Moonie: The amount spent on legal fees as a result of cases brought against the Ministry of Defence is not recorded separately for the years in question and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The amounts paid in out of court settlements and in court-ordered payments are not recorded separately, but the total amounts paid in compensation and legal costs in both categories for the last five years were:

£ million

Financial year	Amount paid
1997–98	69.22
1998–99	75.20
1999–2000	75.57
2000–01	87.53
2001–02	91.26

Military Bases

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 5 December 2002, Official Report, column 930W, on military bases (legal officers), what welfare and support services there are separate from the chain of command offered to members of the armed forces by his Department; what legal advice is available for members of the armed forces through the range of welfare and support services separate from the chain of command offered by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [87935]

Dr. Moonie: Welfare and support services available to service personnel on military bases include chaplains, medical officers, unit welfare officers and agencies such as SSAFA—Forces Help, RELATE and WRVS. A confidential helpline is also available. These services enjoy varying degrees of separateness or independence from the chain of command. All have appropriate rules of confidentiality.

None of the welfare services provide legal advice per se. However, they may advise an individual to seek independent legal advice where it is felt appropriate. Any service person who is interviewed in connection with a possible offence may make use of the duty solicitor scheme.

Military Training

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the enforcement of preventing public access on byelawed land when military training takes place. [87377]

Dr. Moonie: Every training area and range affected by military byelaws is subject to a risk assessment in accordance with the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999. This risk assessment considers the hazard to the general public if they should enter a byelawed training area or range in error or with intent. Various control measures, which can include signing, flagging or local notification, are then implemented in light of the risk assessment. We are satisfied with the effectiveness of these arrangements.

Nuclear Weapons Tests

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress in the clean-up and environmental restoration of the contamination caused by nuclear weapons testing on Christmas Island since 1992. [87727]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence arranged and took part in a specialist Reconnaissance Survey to Kiritimati during September 1998. This was to identify the types and quantities of waste materials, including an assessment of environmental risks associated with the nuclear test programme in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

A further visit was made to Kiritimati in August 2000 by MOD and independent specialists to gather further detailed information for the proposed clean-up project.

The clean-up of the waste material is to be undertaken by contractors appointed and managed by specialists from the MOD. Preparatory work is currently under way with the actual clean-up work on site expected to start during 2003.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Adulterated Food

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how many successful prosecutions have been brought since 1997 against persons who have doctored and sold on to retailers adulterated food which is unfit for human consumption; what the (a) average length of imprisonment and (b) fine levied was; and if he will make a statement. [86589]

Hilary Benn: I have been asked to reply.

The available information is given in the table.

[1] Staffordshire Police Force were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates' courts for the year 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust enough at a detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Transsexual People

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to amend the genuine occupation requirements included in the Sex Discrimination (Gender Reassignment) Regulations 1999 to remove reasons for refusing transsexuals jobs. [87279]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The Government is now considering whether, once legal recognition is given to a transsexual person's acquired gender, the Genuine Occupational Qualifications exceptions in the Gender Reassignment Regulations should be modified.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Military Exports

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has in respect of military exports to ensure that end-use certificates specify final user and destination. [87287]

Nigel Griffiths: End user undertakings must be consistent with the model format published on the Department of Trade & Industry's Export Control Organisation website, which specifies the end user and destination.

The website address is http://www.dti.gov.uk/export.control

Nuclear Materials

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress of the UK's contribution to clearing-up nuclear materials in the former Soviet Union. [86956]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has now completed putting in place a fairly complex project and risk management framework to allow us to commit substantial UK funding to assist Russia in particular through our Former Soviet Union Nuclear Legacy Programme. The budget for this programme is some £32 million next year and is expected to run at least this level for the foreseeable future. The programme covers a wide range of nuclear legacy issues including supporting work on weapons plutonium disposition, closed nuclear cities, nuclear safety technical assistance, nuclear security projects, social consequences projects and contributing funding to multilateral projects on decommissioning and the Chernobyl Shelter.

A number of important projects have already been identified and the means of delivery is now in place to assist in tackling the nuclear legacy in NW Russia an area where we expect up to a third of our funding to be focused over the next few years. UK grant-aid funding for work to provide for the safe management of spent nuclear fuel stocks and for dismantling decommissioned nuclear submarines is therefore ready to flow now. However, before this funding can commence with actual projects on the ground, a suitable legal framework must be agreed with Russia to cover important issues such as third part liability, taxation and access. Hopefully, and after some delay, we are in the final stages of concluding just such a bilateral agreement under which substantive project work will begin. A similar multilateral agreement is also, again hopefully, in its final stages and will provide the mechanism for substantial multilateral assistance. I would emphasise however that the delay in signing the bilateral agreement has not delayed the preparation of projects and a number will be ready to go as soon as the agreement is in place next year.

The nuclear legacy in NW Russia, as represented by the 100 or so decommissioned nuclear submarines and their associated spent fuel and waste, is such that it is only by active bilateral and multilateral funding that they can be tackled quickly and safely. The UK is playing a leading role in ensuring co-operation and coordination with Russia and between the various donor countries in order that this funding is effective.

Attending the Baltic Conference of Energy Ministers in Vilnius, Lithuania in November, I committed £700,000 to purchase and install physical protection equipment for two Russian nuclear-powered icebreakers. During this visit I also met with representatives of the UK industry actively involved in planning for the decommissioning of the Ignalina nuclear power station and ameliorating the social consequences of nuclear power plant closure. UK companies have vast experience in these areas and through our social consequences work, we are supporting a number of regeneration and economic projects in Lithuania and Ukraine.

We will be publishing the first annual report about progress in establishing this programme early next year and further details of specific projects and the programme will be made available on the DTI web site.

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to which bodies her Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87397]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 607W.

Civil Servants

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many civil servants are employed by his Department; and how much money was spent by her Department in the last 12 months, broken down by local authority area. [87181]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister of State, Cabinet Office, on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 608W.

Details of DTI expenditure is not broken down by local authority area.

Debt Advisory Agencies

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the rates of interest charged by debt advisory agencies is included in her review of customer credit legislation. [88043]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A specific investigation of the rates charged by debt advisory agencies will not form a part of the Consumer Credit Review. We are, however, planning to consult on ways to improve the consumer credit licensing regime and to increase protection for consumers in respect of extortionate credit in general.

All providers of debt management and advisory services are required to be licensed by the Director General of Fair Trading under the Consumer Credit Act 1974. In December 2001, the Office of Fair Trading issued guidance to consumer credit licence holders and applicants on how it expects debt management companies to conduct their affairs.

Export Licences

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the (a) items and (b) value of the items, exported under the open individual export licences (i) Bolivia, numbers 1 to 9, (ii) Kenya, numbers 1 to 30, (iii) Ghana, numbers 1 to 16, (iv) Angola, numbers 1 to 4, (v) Zambia, numbers 1 to 5, (vi) Yemen, numbers 1 to 3 and (vii) Tanzania, numbers 1 and 2 granted in 2001. [87259]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 53W.

Intellectual Property Rights

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she has recently consulted trade bodies and user groups about proposals to change the UK's powers over intellectual property rights in international forums. [88008]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Changes are under consideration in the Convention on the Future of Europe whose working documents are in the public arena. The work of the Convention has been drawn to the attention of industry and user representatives. Formal proposals have not yet emerged, but two relevant recommendations under discussion include a separate article for IP issues within a new EU treaty and extension of qualified majority voting to all areas of commercial policy including intellectual property. Further discussion on these issues will take place in the coming months.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to recommend changes to the division of responsibilities for intellectual property rights between the EU and the UK. [88009]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Changes are under consideration in the Convention on the Future of Europe. Formal proposals have not yet emerged, but two relevant recommendations under discussion include a separate article for IP issues within a new EU treaty and extension of qualified majority voting to all areas of commercial policy including intellectual property. Further discussion on these issues will take place in the coming months.

Small Business Charter

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the implementation of the Small Business Charter, announced at the Lisbon summit. [88045]

Nigel Griffiths: The UK and its European partners are continuing to implement the 10 key enterprise measures in the European Charter for Small Enterprises. The European Commission's second annual implementation report to the last Spring Council noted that progress has undoubtedly been made, but that there was clearly scope for further development. The Commission will produce its third annual implementation report early in 2003. This report will again take account of national reports. The UK's report recounted further progress across all areas in the period up to September 2002. The UK's report has been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Abuja Talks

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the outcome of the talks in Abuja, Nigeria, organised by the African Development Bank and the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organisation, regarding Africa's agricultural problems, held on 11–12 December. [88078]

Clare Short: Talks on the NEPAD Vision for Agricultural Development and Food Security in Africa were held in Abuja from 11–12 December 2002. The talks pledged African governments and regional organisations to working on action plans and programmes on food security and agricultural development, to be implemented especially at a regional level. There was recognition of the opportunities presented by NEPAD and the need to prepare and implement short, medium and long-term bankable projects.

Afghanistan

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, with regard to health programmes in Afghanistan, what monies (a) her Department has pledged, (b) her Department has delivered, (c) other G8 countries have pledged and (d) other G8 countries have delivered. [61757]

Clare Short: In the current financial year, we have disbursed £2 million to the World Health Organisation. This is in addition to funds that have supported NGOs working in the health sector through the QIPs (Quick Impact Projects) scheme. A further £1 million has also been earmarked for the health sector for this year. The manner in which it will be disbursed has yet to be decided. Capacity building for the Ministry of Health has, however, been flagged as a priority.

It is not possible at this time to give detailed information on the activities of other donors in the health sector. We have supported the Afghanistan Transitional Authority (ATA) in developing a database that will begin to capture such information from 2003. Aid pledged in support of health programmes is delivered in a variety of different manners: bilaterally, multilaterally and through the Afghan Reconstruction Trust fund.

However, we are aware of specific pledges for the health sector of at least US$100 million from donors, including the World bank, the Asian Development bank, USAID, GTZ, the EU, JICA and the Canadian and Norwegian Governments.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions her Department has had with government ministers in Afghanistan to ensure the safety of Afghan girls attending school. [80562]

Clare Short: We are concerned about the reports of attacks on girls' schools in various parts of Afghanistan. Although we are only aware of a limited number of incidents and millions of girls are going back to school, this is a worrying signal of the threat to the equal status of women and girls in Afghanistan. This must be addressed through a comprehensive effort to improve gender equality. During my recent visit to Afghanistan I met the Afghan Affairs Minister, Dr. Habiba Sorabi, and representatives of women's groups. We discussed the factors affecting girls returning to school as well as the wider issue of women's rights.

African Development

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the US Government about the role of the Millennium Challenge Corporation in Africa; and if she will make a statement. [87872]

Clare Short: DFID has had frequent senior level contact with the US Administration on the development of its Millennium Challenge Account since it was announced in March this year. We have encouraged the USA to focus the Account's resources on the poorest countries, many of which are in Africa.

The US Administration has recently announced the criteria against which it proposes that the Millennium Challenge Corporation should manage the Account. But it is not yet clear how many, or which, African countries can be expected to qualify, or how much of the funding will go to Africa.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the members of the New Partnership for Africa's Development, regarding the role of the US Millennium Challenge Corporation in Africa. [87873]

Clare Short: Baroness Amos (the Prime Minister's G8 Special Representative on Africa) recently met G8 colleagues and NEPAD representatives in Accra to discuss implementation of the G8 Africa Action Plan, which includes a section on aid volume and effectiveness. The role of the Millennium Challenge Corporation in Africa was not discussed explicitly in Accra. We continue to work with African governments and other donors on aid effectiveness and are encouraging the US Administration to focus the work of the Millennium Challenge Corporation on low income countries, many of which are in Africa.

African Union

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which member states of the African Union have adopted the Declaration on Democracy, Political, Economic and Corporate Governance. [87215]

Clare Short: The Declaration on Democracy, Political, Economic and Corporate Governance was jointly made by all member states of the African Union at the inaugural Durban meeting of the African Union in June 2002. It affirms commitment to the governance codes and standards which will be used as the basis for peer reviews.

Good Governance

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the Treasury on the interaction between the new US Government programme to reward emerging markets that meet their criteria of good governance and the Chancellor of the Exchequer's new International Development Finance Facility. [87874]

Clare Short: The UK's proposal to establish a new International Financing Facility would allow participating Governments to disburse resources through existing effective bilateral and multilateral mechanisms. If the US Government wishes, this could include the US Millennium Challenge Account. The Government's view is that an increased share of development assistance should go to the countries in which aid is used most effectively, i.e. countries with high levels of poverty and a good policy environment, and be delivered through development agencies which share a commitment to the improved management of aid. The Chancellor of the Exchequer and I and our respective Departments are working closely together on this proposal.

Health Care and Education

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which countries her Department has financed (a) health care and (b) education projects that have involved an element of privatisation. [87428]

Clare Short: My Department is focused on improving health and education services for the poor and favours policies that achieve this objective. We do, however, recognise the importance of the private sector in delivering services to the poor. For example, 50–80 per cent. of all health care expenditures in developing countries are through the private sector. In parallel to our work to strengthen public sector health systems, DFID support to private sector providers seeks to increase access to high quality health services for the poor. Examples of interventions include support to social marketing of condoms and contraceptives and bed nets to prevent malaria.

HIV/AIDS

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries have benefited from the investment by the Department of International Development on HIV/AIDS related bilateral work since last year; and by how much. [88057]

Clare Short: The information requested is set out as follows. Please note these figures do not include expenditure on regional programmes or non region specific work on programmes and research based in the UK.

Information Communication Technology

Mr. Bercow: Asked the Secretary of State for International Development, if she will make a statement on the progress of the work of the United Nations Development Programme in information and communications technology. [64978]

Clare Short: UNDP has been active in the field of information communication technology (ICT) since 1993 in close to 90 countries through a combination of global, regional and national programmes. In the initial phases of its work, UNDP's focus was largely on creating awareness, building capacity, and supporting ICT for development at the community and national level. The focus has now widened following discussions with UNDP's Executive Board in June 2001. UNDP now includes assisting countries with ICT for development policies, the formulation and implementation of prioritised national e-development strategies. Other programme initiatives which signify further progress are that of ICT to enhance democratic governance (e-governance), economic and social development (for example, micro finance, e-business, ICT to support local development) at local and national levels.

Kenya

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of levels of food security in north-west Kenya; and if she will make a statement. [88079]

Clare Short: Following several years of poor rains and drought, the food security situation in north-west Kenya remains precarious. But heavy rainfall is now bringing both immediate respite and better prospects for significant improvements in the availability of water, pasture and browse. For the first time in two years, recovery is now a real possibility. DFID continues to monitor the situation in close collaboration with the Government of Kenya, the UN, NGO's and other donors.

Since 1999, DFID has spent over £18 million on drought-related assistance to Kenya. Most of this has been targeted on the north of the country.

New Partnership for Africa's Development

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made on the African Peer Review Mechanism within NEPAD on (a) economic values, (b) governance values and (c) corporate values. [87213]

Clare Short: At the Abuja meeting of the NEPAD Implementation Committee, 13 countries signed up for peer review. The full details of the process will be settled in January, but we understand that a group of eminent persons will oversee reviews carried out by technical experts. The United Nations Economic Commission for Africa will be involved in the technical reviews of economic governance, and has had a series of useful exchanges on the process of peer review with the OECD DAC.

Poverty Reduction

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial assistance her Department is providing in 2002–03 to (a) Bolivia, (b) Pakistan and (c) India in support of policy reforms and poverty reduction measures. [67484]

Clare Short: The information is as follows:

Bolivia

We have allocated some £10 million for our total bilateral development assistance programme for 2002–03 in Bolivia. Additionally, Bolivia will benefit from DFID funds contributed to multilateral organisations such as the World bank and IADB, through grants to civil society organisations. The EC is providing £80.7 million for 2002–06, of which DFID's share is around 19 per cent.

We have now moved away from supporting discrete bilateral projects to support for government-led policy reforms within the context of the Bolivian poverty reduction strategy, concentrating on adding value to the international community's support to Bolivia's development effort. We are focusing our support in two areas—the integration of economic and social policy, recognising the key role of the informal economy for poor people's livelihoods, and enhancing social inclusion and participation in political processes within a more accountable and transparent institutional framework.

India

DFID has allocated £230 million of development assistance to India in financial year 2002–03. The EC is providing £17.9 million in 2002–03, of which DFID's share is around 19 per cent.

Our development programme in India, where on in three of the world's poor live, is aimed at helping Government, at both national and state level, to deliver pro-poor policies and services. We are working closely with four partner states committed to poverty reduction, including on their programmes of fiscal and public service reform.

We are also working on increasing access to basic health, education, and water and sanitation services for the poor, on promoting better management of the natural and physical environment, and on promoting greater empowerment of the poor, especially women and the marginalised.

Pakistan

DFID has allocated £60 million of development assistance to Pakistan in financial year 2002–03, of which £40 million is financial aid. £105.7 million is being provided by the EC for 2002–06, again with DFID's share being around 19 per cent.

We are committed to supporting Pakistan's economic and social development for the long haul. The ultimate aim is the reduction of poverty as set out in the Government of Pakistan's interim poverty reduction strategy paper.

DFID's bilateral programme is focused on three objectives: creating the economic conditions for poverty reduction; improving health outcomes for poor people and improving education outcomes for poor people.

River Congo

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to the answer of 9 December 2002, Official Report, column 62W, on the River Congo, what preventive measures are being taken to reduce the impact of a flooding of the river. [88148]

Clare Short: DFID funds a number of humanitarian agencies in DRC that specialise in interventions to minimise the effects of man made and natural disasters. Specifically, the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs operates an emergency response programme to which DFID has contributed £500,000. The International Committee of the Red Cross is also mandated to respond to provide humanitarian assistance, should urgent needs arise. DFID is in the process of finalising a contribution of £2.5 million to the ICRC for DRC. We have also provided support to an OXFAM water and sanitation programme in Kinshasa. Effective intervention in this sector will be critical if significant flooding does occur.

South Africa

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department is giving in 2002–03 to provide safe water for the people of South Africa; and if she will make a statement. [87869]

Clare Short: My Department anticipates spending £1.36 million on water and sanitation in South Africa in 2002–03. A new £11.54 million DFID support programme started in September 2002. The programme will run for five years, with an anticipated spend in 2003–04 of £2.9 million.

In addition, we contribute around £2.7 million per year to EU water and sanitation programmes in South Africa.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the US Aid Padco Report on water privatisation in South Africa. [87870]

Clare Short: I have made no assessment of the report. The report was commissioned by the Municipal Infrastructure Investment Unit, a body set up by, and accountable to, the South African Department of Provincial and Local Government, using funding from USAID. It is part of a broad series of small research projects to help inform the Government of South Africa's policy thinking around PPPs.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had on water privatisation in South Africa with (a) the South African Municipal Workers Union and (b) non-governmental organisations working in the country. [87871]

Clare Short: My Department has not engaged in bilateral discussions on the subject of water privatisation with either the South African Municipal Workers Union (SAMWU) or NGOs. However, SAMWU and the NGO community are represented on both the Water Sector Leadership Group (WSLG) and the Steering Committee for the SA Government's Masibambane water and sanitation programme. My Department is also represented on both committees. The subject of water privatisation has on occasions been discussed at both the Masibambane meetings and WSLG.

Southern Africa

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what efforts there have been to overcome delays to food imports in Zambia caused by the issuing of import licences. [88480]

Clare Short: DFID became aware of the delay in the issuing of import licences for food imports in Zambia in mid November. The WFP brought this up at a meeting with the Deputy Minister of Finance at the end of November and he agreed to facilitate the prompt issue of import licences if this remained a problem. My officials have encouraged WFP to pursue this issue.

Import licences are currently being issued within a week of request, which is sufficient to avoid delays to the WFP food pipeline.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made by the World Food Programme in completing the contract for the transportation of food aid to southern Africa. [88482]

Clare Short: The World Food Programme is doing an excellent job in trying to meet the needs of the most vulnerable people in the southern Africa region. Food Aid received in Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia, and Zimbabwe since July 2002 amounts to 344,830MT. WFP, with help from DFID, is actively trying to avoid any break in the food pipeline this month. WFP's key constraint in maintaining and building up the pipeline for the height of the humanitarian crisis in January and February is getting the funding it needs from donors. We are continuing to press other donors to do more, and the UK remains the second largest bilateral donor to the crisis.

Sustainable Crops (Africa)

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance the UK is giving the underdeveloped countries of Africa to produce sustainable crops. [87766]

Clare Short: My Department works with developing countries to ensure that their poverty reduction strategies reflect the need to manage environmental resources, including agricultural production, sustainably. Sustainability must be seen in its widest context. It is not just a matter of the ecology of agricultural systems themselves, but the impact of these systems on the lives and opportunities of others, particularly poor consumers and producers. Sustainability in one system cannot be at the expense of sustainability in others.

My Department also supports a significant number of programmes and projects throughout the developing world that seek to provide direct benefits to poor people whose livelihoods are dependent on agriculture. Many of these include the provision of support to sustainable agriculture, either through training and knowledge/technology transfer, institutional capacity building and reform (e.g. strengthening co-operatives and other forms of producer groups and improving agricultural service delivery) or the funding of research, both national and international.

This year, DFID expects to spend about £35 million on natural resources research. While sustainability is a cornerstone for all our research programmes, a significant proportion of the programme is focused on developing and transferring technologies specifically for sustainable agriculture.

Copies of the DFID issues paper "Better Livelihoods for Poor People: The Role of Agriculture and the Renewable Natural Resources Research Strategy" publication are available in the Libraries of the House.

Uganda

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the plans for privatisation of water in towns in Uganda; and if she will make a statement. [87876]

Clare Short: The central theme of the urban reform process in Uganda is private sector management of existing utilities, as opposed to privatisation. A recent review by the World bank revealed that this shift has realised efficiency gains, with the National Water and Sanitation Corporation now showing an operating profit. DFID has a £5 million programme of support to the water and sanitation sector in Uganda, focused on financing the rural sector, but through which we also engage in policy dialogue on urban reform. In addition, we provide technical assistance to the Utility Reform Unit, which is leading the urban water reform programme. We have recently commissioned a review of lessons learned from private sector participation in the water sector, with the view to considering further support for assessing the social impact of new policies.

Urban Sewage Projects

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department is giving to urban sewage projects in (a) Africa, (b) Asia and (c) Latin America in 2002–03. [87875]

Clare Short: The latest period for which details of expenditure are available is 2001–02. Allocation is defined by current DAC categories for the water sector, which do not differentiate between water supply and sanitation. My Department's bilateral expenditure on urban water supply and sanitation in the period 2001–02 was as follows:

Africa	8 million
Asia	12.7 million
Central and South America	100,000

Uzbekistan

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total amount of UK bilateral aid to Uzbekistan was in the last year for which figures are available. [87652]

Clare Short: In 2001–02, the last year for which figures are available, the total amount of UK bilateral aid to Uzbekistan was £362,000.

Funding is also provided via the EC, of which DFID's share is around 19 per cent. In 2000, our contribution to Uzbekistan was approximately £1.3 million.

Working Group on Access to Medicines

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what research and development into medicines and vaccines her Department's Working Group on Access to Medicines has undertaken since it was established. [88022]

Clare Short: The High Level Working Group on Access to Medicines' task, among others, was to consider ways to increase research and development (R&D) for diseases that affect poor people in the developing world. The group has now reported to the Prime Minister and put forward options for partnerships and policies that can help resolve market failure and re-shape incentives for industry, and to ensure investment by the pharmaceutical industry on R&D for diseases of poor people is monitored. One positive advance has been the Government's announcement, in April, to extend tax relief to companies involved in R&D for HIV/AIDS, TB and malaria relevant to the developing world.

The group recognised that investment in R&D for childhood diseases and six additional tropical diseases remains critically short. My Department currently invests in a number of R&D partnerships in this area and will continue to look at policy options that can further increase R&D for neglected diseases. The Government are taking forward a High Level Working Group recommendation to look at the potential that modified Orphaned Drug legislation might have to stimulate R&D investments for these neglected diseases.

Yemen

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made on the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper of the Yemen. [87548]

Clare Short: The Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper was submitted by the Government of Yemen to the Boards of the World bank and the IMF at the end of July, and subsequently approved by both.

The World bank hosted a Consultative Group meeting in Paris during October, which was attended by representatives from the Government and from donor agencies operating in Yemen. At this meeting, both the Government and the donor community affirmed their commitment to work together in implementing the Poverty Reduction Strategy over the course of the next three years.

Detailed discussions are now under way in Sana'a about how to implement that commitment and monitor progress.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her Department is doing to work with the Government of Yemen (a) on their basic education programme and (b) reproductive health. [87549]

Clare Short: My Department does not currently have a programme of work with the Government of Yemen in either the basic education or reproductive ealth sectors. Through the Small Grants Scheme administered by the British Embassy, we are supporting some small-scale activities which are being implemented by non-governmental organisations at a local level.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department will give to the Yemen in 2002–03 and if this will increase within the Framework of the Resource Allocation Round. [87550]

Clare Short: My Department expects to provide funding worth around £2.28 million to Yemen in 2002–03. The outcome of the Resource Allocation Round for future years will be known early in 2003.

Zimbabwe

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken to encourage school attendance in Zimbabwe. [88478]

Clare Short: There are programmes in Zimbabwe which aim to provide all primary school children with supplementary food. But there is a lack of funds to implement these programmes fully. Direct bilateral programmes, including DFID's supplementary feeding programme, are now providing over one million school children with a supplementary meal a day. Monitoring indicates that where feeding is being conducted, this has been successful in reducing drop-out rates.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to the answer of 10 July, Official Report, columns 957–8W, on HIV/AIDS, how money has been (a) allocated and (b) spent for HIV/AIDS-related programmes, broken down by country. [72433]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Marsden) 23 July 2002, Official Report, columns 894–5W.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the impact which the decision of the Zimbabwean Government to ban the milling of GM maize has had on food relief efforts in the country. [88477]

Clare Short: Last week, the Government of Zimbabwe rescinded its decision to ban the importation of GM maize for milling in-country. Milling of GM food already in the country has resumed, agreement has been reached on the import of 17,500MT of GM grain which will also be milled in country. The National Food mill at Bulawayo has continued to mill, and the Gweru plant will also be brought on stream, bringing the authorised milling capacity in Zimbabwe to about 16,000MT/month.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what impact the break in food aid in the first two weeks of December has had in (a) Zimbabwe and (b) Zambia. [88479]

Clare Short: It is now unlikely that there will be breaks in the food pipelines to either country during December, although the situation remains fragile. For Zimbabwe, against a target distribution of 50,000MT of maize for 4.5 million beneficiaries in 44 districts, the realistic distribution figure may be as low as 20,000MT. In order to allow for this shortage, WFP has introduced two ration scales: (i) 5Kg of maize will be distributed to families in districts that have been receiving food aid on a regular basis; and (ii) 10Kg of maize will be distributed to families in areas that have not received food aid thus far. All families will receive 1Kg of CSB and 1Kg of pulses. For Zambia, DFID has helped strengthen the WFP pipeline with a unique agreement between the Government of the Republic of Zambia (GRZ) and WFP. This involves distributing 23,000MT of GRZ purchased maize through the WFP pipeline with transportation costs being met by DFID. This will ensure a full maize pipeline for Zambia during December.

SCOTLAND

Civil Defence

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the civil defence grant allocations by local authority, in (a) cash and (b) real terms; and if she will make a statement on civil defence in Scotland. [87035]

Mrs. Liddell: Civil Defence grant to Scottish local authorities ceased with the signing of the Civil Defence (Grant) (Scotland) Regulations 2001 in March 2001. Financial support for local authorities for the emergency planning work which they carry out continues to be provided at the request of local authorities through the normal GAE mechanism.

In Scotland there are well-established procedures for dealing with a wide range of civil emergencies. Following the events of 11 September a range of additional measures have been put in place. These provide significant funding for new equipment for the emergency services; new procedures for dealing with suspect packages; and guidance on dealing with the threat from, and consequences of, chemical and biological incidents. In addition my Department and Scottish Executive colleagues are fully involved in the work being led by the Cabinet Office in resilience planning across the UK.

Expenditure Limit

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to her Written Ministerial Statement of 27 November 2002, Official Report, column 29WS, whether the Scotland Office is running a budget surplus in the current financial year. [85194]

Mrs. Liddell: I expect Scotland Office expenditure to be contained within the Department Expenditure Limit in the current financial year.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to her Written Ministerial Statement of 27 November 2002, Official Report, column 29WS, what factors account for the increase in the Scotland Departmental Expenditure Limit arising from the take-up of the End Year Flexibility. [85195]

Mrs. Liddell: The increase in the Scotland Departmental Expenditure Limit is required to meet planned expenditure by the Scottish Executive and the Boundary Commission for Scotland, and to enable the Scotland Office to move towards its full staffing level.

Industrial and Provident Society Law

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive about amending industrial and provident society law; and if she will make a statement. [87888]

Mrs. McGuire: Scotland Office officials have discussed with executive officials the implications of the report by the Strategy Unit, "Private Action, Public Benefit", on charities and the wider not for profit sector. This report contains recommendations on bringing Industrial and Provident Society law up to date.

Official Travel

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total expenditure of (a) her Department and (b) its agencies was on official travel in 2001–02. [84794]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 3 December 2002]: Since 1999, the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Details of travel undertaken during the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 were published on 24 July 2002, Official Report, column 75W. The cost of Ministers' visits overseas for 2002–03 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Total expenditure on travel by my Department in 2001–02 was £305,000.

Organic Food

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how the target for increasing the market share of UK-produced organic foods over organic imports in the DEFRA Organic Action Plan will apply in Scotland. [87915]

Mrs. Liddell: Responsibility for agriculture in Scotland is devolved. While some of the elements of the DEFRA plan such as the compendium of standards will apply on a UK basis, the targets will not apply to Scotland. Scottish Executive Ministers have appointed an Organic Stakeholder Group to deliver an action plan with recommendations for future executive support for the organic sector in Scotland. The Group will consider a wide range of issues including future executive support for organic conversion, development of the organic food chain, research priorities and organic standards and certification. The group is due to report in January 2003.

Rail Links

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive regarding the proposed plans to redevelop a rail link between Edinburgh and the Scottish borders. [87761]

Mrs. Liddell: Following approval in July of an Order under Section 30 of the Scotland Act 1998, the Scottish Parliament now has legislative competence for the promotion and construction of railways wholly within Scotland. I understand that the Scottish Executive has provided £2 million to the promoter, the Waverley Railway Partnership, to help towards the costs of securing the necessary parliamentary powers for reinstating a railway connection between Edinburgh and the central Borders.

Sustainability Strategy

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the sustainability strategy is for her Department; and if she will make a statement on how it has changed since the World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. [83505]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department has limited executive responsibilities, but it is committed to the Government's sustainability development strategy in carrying out its functions.

Following devolution, most aspects of sustainable development in Scotland are the responsibility of the Scottish Executive. In April this year, the Executive published "Meeting the Needs—Priorities, Actions and Targets for Sustainable Development in Scotland". This identified resource use, energy and travel as the main priorities for action and set out indicators and targets for monitoring progress.

The outcome of the World Summit on Sustainable Development, and first views on follow up, will be reflected in the annual report on UK progress on sustainable development for 2002.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Canoeing

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to increase access to water for canoeing; and if he will make a statement. [87886]

Angela Smith: The Department for Culture, Arts and Leisure has a water recreation remit which allows it to provide and improve facilities for promoting the recreational or navigational use of waterways. The Department has funded the installation of public canoe steps and associated facilities on a number of Northern Ireland rivers under this programme. The Department is also administering a European-funded Water Recreation Development Programme 2001–04 for projects designed to develop the inland waterway network and improve water recreation facilities available to both local and tourist users.

In December this year the Countryside Access and Activities Network for Northern Ireland (CAAN) published a Report on "Canoeing in Northern Ireland—Strategic Review" which sets out a recommended way forward for the future development of canoeing.

Foetal Health

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what obligations there are on employers to provide protection for an unborn child at the mother's workplace. [88070]

Mr. Pearson: Obligations on employers to provide protection for an unborn child at the mother's workplace are provided through the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2000. These regulations require employers to carry out risk assessments to identify hazards and take appropriate action to protect the health and safety of the expectant mother and her unborn child.

Local Government

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will meet the National Association of Local Councillors (Northern Ireland Region) to discuss (a) members' allowances, (b) the future of local government and (c) other matters of mutual interest. [87320]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have no immediate plans to meet the National Association of Councillors (Northern Ireland Region). Local Government issues are the responsibility of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Angela Smith), who has responsibility for the Department of the Environment. I understand she plans to meet members of the Association on a regular basis, as was the practice of the former Minister of the Environment (Dermot Nesbitt). Preparations for a meeting early in the new year are currently underway.

Sickness (Teachers)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are in place to reduce the number of teacher sickness absences in Northern Ireland. [88077]

Jane Kennedy: The monitoring of sick absences is the responsibility of teachers' employers.

Information on teacher absences in the controlled and maintained sectors is routinely made available by the Department to each Education and Library Board and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools.

The Department of Education and the employing authorities are very much aware of the pressures and challenges facing teachers and are working closely with teacher representatives to seek ways of maintaining and improving the health of teachers. The Teachers' Health and Well-being Survey Report has just been published and a strategy group has been established to take forward its recommendations.

The Department and employers will also be looking very carefully at the recommendations in the Northern Ireland Audit Office Report on The Management of Substitution Cover for Teachers, about identifying local patterns and trends so that reasonable targets for reducing sick absences can be set and monitored.

Supply Teachers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what efforts he is making to ensure that schools in Northern Ireland give priority to offering supply teaching vacancies to young unemployed qualified teachers. [88076]

Jane Kennedy: The recruitment of substitute teachers is the responsibility of teachers' employers. Employers are encouraged to give preference to newly qualified teachers and experienced non-retired teachers who are seeking employment. Retired teachers should only be re-employed to provide short-term cover where newly qualified teachers or experienced non-retired teachers unavailable. Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment's (DETI) statistics for February 2002 (the latest month for which statistics are available) indicate there were only three teachers under 25 years of age registered as unemployed for more than six months.

Capping of the levels of the central reimbursement of the costs of substitute cover also provides an incentive for schools to employ newly qualified teachers as substitutes.

Youth Services

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much is being spent in 2002–03 on youth service provision in (a) North Belfast, (b) East Belfast, (c) South Belfast and (d) West Belfast; and how many people are employed as (i) full-time staff and (ii) part-time staff in each area. [87406]

Jane Kennedy: It has not been possible to divide Belfast into areas corresponding to parliamentary constituencies. However, for Education and Library Board controlled and voluntary youth projects an attempt has been made to define the boundaries that are currently considered North, South, East and West within the Belfast Youth Service. The position in respect of 2002–03 for youth projects in these areas is as follows:

Area	Spending (approx.) (£000)	Staffing
		Full-time	Part-time
(a) North	908	20	40
(b) East	413	9	49
(c) South	482	11	64
(d) West	812	24	63
Total	2,615	64	216

As Education and Library Board Support and other services such as outdoor education centres, support to uniform organisations, training, Duke of Edinburgh and headquarter staffing are city wide or city centre initiatives it has not been possible to breakdown the remaining spending of around £1 million or the remaining staffing provision.

The Belfast Regeneration Office of the Department for Social Development will have a total spend, during 2002–03, of £371,833 on youth service provision in North, South, East and West Belfast and will employ seven full time and one part time staff during this period. Please see details of the breakdown of these figures in the following table.

Area/project name	Funding 2002–03 (£)	Number of employees
North Belfast
Ballysillan Elim Church	1,456.00	0
Ardoyne Youth Providers' Forum	17,154.00	0
Artillery Youth Centre	23,143.00	0
Manor Street/Cliftonville Community Group	9,239.00	0
Total	50,992.00	0

TREASURY

National Insurance

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it Government policy not to (a) employ and (b) award contracts to a financial institution which uses offshore arrangements intended to avoid employers' national insurance liabilities, or has done so in the last three years. [R] [87712]

Mr. Boateng: Individual Government Departments are responsible for taking decisions on the goods and services they acquire—and from whom they acquire them—taking account of the Government's procurement policy of seeking value for money for the taxpayer. Under Regulation 14 (1) (f) and (g) of the Public Works, Services and Supply Contracts Regulations (SIs: 1991/2680, 1993/3228 and 1995/201 respectively), Departments may reject any potential supplier who has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of social security contributions or of taxes under the law of the UK and, where relevant, of another member state. This provision is not time limited.

Annual Convergence Programme

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to submit an updated, annual Convergence Programme, as required by the Stability and Growth Pact. [88638]

Ruth Kelly: As required under the Stability and Growth Pact, an updated, annual Convergence Programme has today been submitted to the European Commission. Copies of the Programme are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Community Care Grant and Budgeting Loan

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will increase the amount of money available to (a) the Community Care Grant and (b) the Budgeting Loan budget. [85289]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The discretionary Social Fund provides people on low incomes with grants and loans to help them manage a wide range of unexpected or occasional costs, including the purchase of beds and cookers, depending on their individual circumstances.

On 27 November, we announced that from April 2003, £90 million will be added to the discretionary Fund over the three years to 2005–06. This extra investment will enhance the fund's ability to help those on low incomes manage their finances.

We have already introduced a number of important changes to the Social Fund. We have simplified the budgeting loan scheme so that all applicants who satisfy the qualifying conditions, and have no outstanding Social Fund debt, will be offered a loan. We have also extended the qualifying conditions for community care grants to help people setting up home in the community who have been without a settled way of life.

ECOFIN

Mr. Hood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the outcome was of the Special ECOFIN Council held on 11 December 2002; and what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [87768]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I attended the special ECOFIN meeting on 11 December 2002.

There was a discussion of draft conclusions on the tax package, based on the proposals outlined by the Presidency at the 3 December 2002 ECOFIN meeting.

The Presidency confirmed that further discussion on this and energy taxation would be scheduled for the ECOFIN meeting on 21 January 2003. The Commission undertook to put in place appropriate measures to ensure that the French and Italian derogations, allowing reduced duty rates for hauliers, would be extended until then. No votes were taken at this meeting.

Economic Activity

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the 50 local authority areas with (a) the lowest and (b) the highest rates of economic inactivity. [88215]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Willetts, dated 19 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on economic inactivity rates. (88215)

The attached table lists (a) the 50 local authority areas with the lowest economic inactivity rates and (b) the 50 local authority areas with the highest economic inactivity rates, for the twelve month period ending August 2002. These estimates are from the Labour Force Survey (LFS).

Insurance Premium Tax

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 263W on insurance premium tax, what material he has published reviewing insurance premium tax; and if he will publish an interim report. [87792]

Ruth Kelly: We have not published any material reviewing insurance premium tax and there are no current plans to do so.

North Sea Oil Profits

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the revenue from corporation tax on North Sea oil profits was in each year since 1997. [86666]

Dawn Primarolo: Receipts from North Sea corporation tax are given in Statistics Table 11.11 on Inland Revenue's website, http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/corporate_tax/ct_t11_1.htm

Pension Contribution Statistics

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will give a breakdown of line H of the table on page 31 of the ONS Review of Pension Contribution Statistics published on 10 October between transfers within the assured sector, transfers between the self-administered and assured sector and transfers from public sector schemes; [81798]

(2) if he will estimate the average contribution per head of those who (a) have made contributions and (b) have had contributions made on their behalf in each of the last five years, broken down by those who have had the contributions made to (i) individual and personal pensions, (ii) self-administered occupational pension schemes and (iii) insurance-managed occupational pension schemes; and if he will make a statement; [81799]

(3) if he will estimate the number of individuals who have made contributions or who have had contributions made on their behalf in each of the last five years, broken down by those who have had the contributions made to (a) individual and personal pensions, (b) self-administered occupational pension schemes and (c) insurance-managed occupational pension schemes; [81800]

(4) how much has been contributed to funded pension schemes by individuals and employers in each of the last five years, broken down by individual and personal pensions, (b) self-administered occupational pension schemes and (c) insurance-managed occupational pension schemes. [81801]

(5) whether the checks referred to in paragraph 2 on page 30 of the ONS Review of Pension Contribution Statistics published on 10 October had been carried out between the time the Statistical Working Group met in June and the Review was published in October; what the result was of those checks; and whether they were taken into account in providing the answer to the right hon. Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack), 29 October 2002, Official Report, column 689W; [81796]

(6) what deduction was made to the figure for gross contributions to allow for transfers of pension scheme assets that pass between the self-administered and insurance-managed sectors but remain within the same pension fund, when preparing the table on pages 31 and 32 of the ONS Review of Pension Contribution Statistics published on 10 October. [81797]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Willetts dated 19 December 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent questions on pension contribution statistics. (81796, 81797, 81798, 81799, and 81801).

Question 112—To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will give a breakdown of line H of the table on page 31 of the ONS Review of Pension Contribution Statistics published 10th October between transfers within the assured sector, transfers between self-administered and the assured sector and transfers from public sector schemes.

Annex B table 1 provides a framework for reconciling the gross inquiry data, provided by self-administered pension funds and insurance companies, with the total used by the Inland Revenue for contributions attracting tax relief.

Where data are drawn from our inquiries to pension funds and insurance companies, the 2001 figures are based on smaller quarterly samples and are provisional. They are usually subject to revision when the annual benchmark data become available.

Line H contains adjustments to exclude transfers from self-administered pension funds (d); transfers within the assured sector (c); and transfers from public sector schemes (b). In addition an adjustment is made to total pension contributions, received by UK insurance companies, to remove premiums paid to UK companies by individuals overseas (a). The adjustments, which are included in line H, are shown below:

Year	Adjustment for UK only business a (£bn)	Adjustments for notionally and unfounded schemes b (£bn)	Surrenders/ refunds under group/ company sponsored schemes c (£bn)	Net transfers from (+) to (−) self-administered pension funds d (£bn)
1997	0.3	0.2	7.5	0.4
1998	0.3	0.2	11.1	0.9
1999	0.3	0.2	14.8	-0.7
2000	0.3	0.2	14.3	-2.3
2001*(p)*	0.3	0.2	16.4	3.1

(p) Data for 2001 are provisional.

The row totals may be different from the total published in Annex B, due to rounding effects.

Question 114—To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will estimate the number of individuals who have made contributions or who have had contributions made on their behalf in each of the last five years, broken down by those who have had the contribution made to (a) individual personal pensions, (b) self-administered occupational pension schemes and (c) insurance managed occupational pension schemes.

The Family Resources Survey estimates of the number of individuals contributing to either personal or occupational pensions in each of the five years are given below.

The estimates for occupational pensions can not be broken down into contributors to self-administered and insurance-managed schemes.

Numbers of working age individuals building up rights to a private, occupational and personal pension (millions)

	Private pension	Occupational pension	Personal pension
FRS
1996–97	15.2	10.2	5.8
1997–98	15.0	10.3	5.6
1998–99	15.2	10.6	5.6
1999–2000*	14.5	10.6	4.2
2000–01*	14.5	10.9	4.0

Rounding:
All figures are rounded to the nearest 100,000
Definitions:
Working age is defined as 16-State Pension Age
Private pensions:
Numbers contributing to a private pension are all those contributing to either occupational and/or personal pension
Data from 1999/00 are not comparable with earlier data.*

Question 115—To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether the checks refer to in paragraph 2 on page 30 of the ONS Review of Pension Contribution Statistics published on 10th October had been carried out between the time the Statistical Working Group met in June and the Review was published in October; what the result was of those checks: and whether they were taken into account in providing the answer to the Right Honourable Member for Fylde, 29th October, Official Report, column 689W.

The publication of the ONS Review of Pension Contributions Statistics on 10th October 2002 highlighted a number of areas where further work is necessary to improve our present data collection system. I will announce the timetable to take forward this work and the other recommendations shortly. The checks referred to in paragraph 2 on page 30 of the report will be carried out as part of that programme of work.

The answer I gave to the Right Honourable Member for Fylde on 29th October is consistent with the data in Annex B table 1 of the report.

Question 116—To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will estimate the average contribution per head of those who have made contributions or who have had contributions made on their behalf in each of the last five years, broken down by those who have had the contributions made to (a) individual and personal pensions, (b) self-administered occupational pension schemes and (c) insurance-managed occupational pension schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Whilst approximate estimates could be obtained by dividing the numbers in Question 114 into the amounts in Question 118, these would not be reliable indicators of the build-up of pension rights. Estimates of those covered by personal and occupational pensions, such as those provided in reply to Question 114, will include those covered by schemes that are unfunded, non-contributory or subject to temporary contribution holidays and so are not closely related to the amounts in Question 118.

Question 118—To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much has been contributed to funded pension schemes by individuals and employers in each of the last five years, broken down by individual and personal pensions, (b) self-administered occupational pension schemes and (c) insurance-managed occupational pension schemes.

Estimates of the contributions to self-administered pension funds and premiums receivable by insurance companies related to pension business are given in the table below. Adjustments made to inquiry data to derive net flows to occupational schemes are made at the aggregate level and the apportionment between self-administered and insurance managed funds is approximate. Care, therefore, needs to be taken in interpreting these figures:

£ billion

	Individual and personal premiums receivable by insurance companies	Group or company sponsored premiums receivable by insurance companies	Contributions to self-administered pension funds less refunds
1997	8.2	10.5	11.6
1998	9.0	14.3	11.3
1999	9.4	16.2	13.7
2000	10.3	18.0	15.7
2001*(p)*	11.6	18.2	16.2

(p) Data for 2001 are provisional.

This information is consistent with that provided in the answer to the Right Honourable Member for Fylde on 29th October.

Question 119—To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, what deduction, was made to the figure for gross contributions to allow for transfers of pension scheme assets that pass between the self administered and insurance-managed sector but remain within the same pension fund, when preparing the table on pages 31 and 32 of the ONS Review of Pension Contributions Statistics published on 10th October.

The Pension Fund Income and Expenditure Inquiry (which collects data from Self-Administered Pension Funds) records estimates of transfers to self-administered funds from insurance managed funds and vice versa. These data are shown in column (d) of the response to question 112, above.

Postcodes

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for (a) the collection and publication of data, (b) devising formulae for the distribution of grants and awards and (c) the delivery of services; and when such usages were last reviewed. [87739]

Ruth Kelly: HM Treasury, the Government Actuary's Department, the Royal Mint, and the Debt Management Office do not currently make use of postcode areas.

National Savings and Investments does not make use of postcode areas to collect data. Postcoded individual records are used to analyse the responses to promotional campaigns.

The Valuation Agency does not make use of postcode areas to collect data. Postcoded addresses are used to allow the public to obtain non-domestic rating assessments and Council Tax band data on its website and for operational purposes.

HM Customs and Excise does make use of postcode areas to collect data. A variety of postcode-based information, from a range of sources, is aggregated at regional level for operational and policy-making decisions. Usage of postcoded information data is continuously reviewed.

Inland Revenue does not make use of postcode areas to collect data. Postcoded individual records, held for administrative purposes, are used to derive published aggregated data for other geographies.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) collects both social and economic data at the unit postcode level which are used to derive published aggregated data for other geographies. ONS keeps its use of unit postcodes for the collection of data under continuous review.

None of the Departments or agencies publishes data for any postcode areas or makes use of postcode areas to devise formulae for the distribution of grants and awards.

Pre-Budget Report Leaflet

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many summary leaflets entitled Steering a steady course: Delivering stability, enterprise and fairness in an uncertain world were printed to publicise the pre-Budget report statement; and what the cost was of publication. [87786]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers given to the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell (Matthew Taylor) on 2 December 2002, Official Report, column 506W, and on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 597W.

Programme Budgets

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with ministers in Government Departments and their Agencies taking advantage of full end-year flexibility in relation to their programme budgets. [87033]

Mr. Boateng: Since April 1999, Government Departments have had full end-year flexibility (EYF) on their Departmental Expenditure Limit budget allocation.

The recent report of the Agency Policy Review recommended that Departments should ensure Agencies have three-year funding agreements and end-year flexibility, and report to the Treasury by the end of 2002 on their current and proposed management of EYF.

Public Sector Productivity

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what private sector benchmarks the Government use to set targets for productivity gains of public sector employees. [85944]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The Government do not operate any benchmarks of that kind. In determining pay, it is for individual employers across the public sector to take decisions on their own pay arrangements to recruit and retain the staff they need to support the delivery of public services, within the resources available to them, taking account of their own particular circumstances and requirements. Generally, settlements above inflation can only be justified where there are specific recruitment or retention problems, or where the increases will be financed by reform and modernisation changes, including efficiency and productivity savings.

Recycling

David Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what appraisal he has made of the case for the introduction of an incineration levy to encourage future reuse and recycling of waste. [87673]

John Healey: There is a range of issues associated with developing an effective waste management and disposal mix. The Government will therefore commission a review of the environmental and health effects of all waste management and disposal options. The Government will also consider how the use of economic instruments can be extended to provide a more comprehensive and coherent framework for waste management.

Self-assessment

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportions of taxpayers who completed their self-assessment forms by 30 September 2002, and who are entitled to have additional tax due reflected in their PAYE code for 2003–04, have received demands for payment of the lump sum by 31 January 2003. [88021]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no legislation that entitles SA taxpayers to have underpayments collected under PAYE. However, where the taxpayer indicates that he would prefer that method, the Inland Revenue will usually be able to accommodate his wishes where:

the SA return is received by 30 September;

the underpayment is less than £2,000; and the whole amount can be included in the PAYE code in one year.

The Inland Revenue will also try to code out underpayments arising from SA returns received after 30 September but before 30 November, but cannot guarantee it.

Underpayments that are not coded out are included in the SA statement of account for payment on or before 31 January. The Department does not record how many underpayments are dealt with in this way where the taxpayer has indicated that he would prefer the underpayment to be coded out.

Since October 2002, the process of coding out SA underpayments has been automated so this should happen in all appropriate cases.

Sheriff Officers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much expenditure was incurred by the Inland Revenue through using sheriff officers in each of the last three years; and what proportion of that expenditure arose as a result of incorrect call-outs based on inaccurate information supplied by the Inland Revenue. [87603]

Mr. Boateng: Costs paid to sheriff officers in Scotland by the Inland Revenue in the last three years are:

Year ending	£
31 October 2000	1,292,768.04
31 October 2001	1,332,079.89
31 October 2002	1,904,717.72

No information is kept to indicate what proportion of the figures above arose as a result of inaccurate information supplied by the Inland Revenue.

No figures are available for costs paid to sheriff officers in England and Wales.

No costs are paid to sheriff officers in Northern Ireland.

Thalidomide

Ross Cranston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 17 December, (ref, 87375) on the Thalidomide Trust, what categories of information on beneficiaries he holds. [88507]

Dawn Primarolo: Various Government Departments hold information on some of the beneficiaries, depending on the personal circumstances of the beneficiary concerned. In some cases this might be just a name, in others they would hold confidential information about the individual's tax affairs or health issues.

Waste Management

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of increases in landfill tax on the role of incineration in waste management strategies. [86774]

John Healey: Future increases to the standard rate of landfill tax, announced in the recent Pre-Budget Report, are intended to encourage a move away from landfill as the primary means of waste disposal, as well as to encourage greater use of recycling. It will clearly be for the market to decide what role incineration plays once the increases have taken effect.

The recent Pre-Budget Report also announced a review of the environmental and health effects of all waste management and disposal options. The role of incineration within the waste management and disposal mix, and the case for using economic instruments, will be considered in light of this work, and in consultation with other stakeholders.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when take-up figures for the working families tax credit will be published, and if they will include take-up figures for child care tax credit. [88217]

Dawn Primarolo: For the first part of his question, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 24 July 2002, Official Report, column 1191W.

Reliable estimates of the take-up rate for the child care tax credit are not available as the survey data, on which take-up rate estimates are based, yield too few sample cases.

Workless Households

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many workless households there were in each year since 1997; how many of these are lone parent households with dependent children; and how many (a) working age people and (b) dependent children lived in these households. [88220]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Willetts, dated 19 December 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about workless households. (88220)

The attached table gives the information requested for the March to May period of each year from 1997 to 2002. These estimates are from the Labour Force Survey (LFS).

Workless working-age households[1]. United Kingdom, March to May 1997 to 2002

Thousand[2]

March to May of each year	Workless working age households[1]	Workless lone parent households with dependent children[3]	Working-age people in workless households	Dependent children in workless households[4]
1997	3,271	732	4,719	2,163
1998	3,237	762	4,634	2,156
1999	3,158	751	4,491	2,086
2000	3,070	689	4,323	1,896
2001	3,063	684	4,333	1,830
2002	3,133	703	4,412	1,889

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Car Dumping

4. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her policy on controlling the dumping of cars in cities. [86766]

Mr. Meacher: Statutory notice periods have been reduced so that abandoned and unlicensed vehicles can be removed from the highway more quickly. Local authorities can now use DVLA's powers to wheelclamp and remove unlicensed vehicles after 24 hours.

The 2002 Finance Act includes outline powers to create a system of continuous registration. This will make it increasingly more difficult for keepers of abandoned vehicles to evade their responsibilities.

Coastal Erosion

15. Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her action to deal with coastal erosion. [86780]

Alun Michael: Total Government funding on flood and coastal defence has risen from £312 million in 1997–98 to a projected £564 million in 2005–06. This is a substantial increase and is proof of this Government's continuing commitment to maintenance and improvement of our flood and coastal defences.

Bee-keeping

20. Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the impact of EC Directive 92/65 on British bee-keeping. [86785]

Alun Michael: Where it applies, Directive 92/65 sets out the animal health requirements for trade in and imports into the Community of bees. Its main effect has been to help control the spread of American foulbrood, a notifiable disease of bees throughout the European Community.

Illegal waste

21. Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice she has given to the Environment Agency on its measures to deal with illegal carriage of waste and disposal by illegal campers. [86786]

Mr. Meacher: No specific advice has been provided to the Environment Agency on measures to deal with illegal carriage of waste and disposal by illegal campers. However, a voluntary protocol has been agreed between the Agency, the local government association and the fly tipping forum on dealing with fly tipping incidents.

Water Framework Directive

23. Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what action her Department is taking to implement the water framework directive. [86788]

Mr. Morley: The Water Framework Directive has to be transposed into national law by December 2003. The Government published the second of three consultation papers on 29th October 2002, which consults on the key policy issues to transposition and implementation and a third consultation paper, with draft transposing Regulations and an updated Regulatory Impact assessment will be published by Defra next year. The Environment Agency will play a key role in implementation of the Directive as the "competent authority". My officials are working closely with the Agency to ensure that implementation deadlines will be met.

Agricultural Wages Board

24. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what recent representations she has received on the future of the Agricultural Wages Board. [86789]

Alun Michael: Since the Agricultural Wages Board last met on 29 August and following the NFU's regrettable withdrawal from the Board—now retracted—my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received 36 letters from members of this House concerning the future operation of the Agricultural Wages Board.

Dairy Sector

25. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make a statement on the profitability of the dairy sector. [86790]

Mr. Morley: The profitability of the dairy sector in the UK has been adversely affected by low farmgate milk prices. The reasons for these low prices are complex, but include high levels of production earlier in the year combined with the effects of low world prices for dairy commodities. The average farmgate price of milk has recovered from its seasonal low in May, but it is still too low for many dairy farmers to be able to maintain the level of investment required to sustain their businesses.

The prices negotiated between farmers and purchasers, or indeed processors and retailers, are private commercial matters in which the Government cannot get involved. Nevertheless, I do welcome the recent price rises announced by major retailers and dairy processors and hope that these will help alleviate some of the difficulties faced by dairy farmers. The Government can influence the environment in which price negotiations take place through the mechanisms of the dairy CAP and, during the period of lowest prices, we actively supported measures taken in Brussels to support Community markets and encourage exports.

For the longer term we believe that a sustainable future for dairy farming is best secured through taking forward the recommendations in the Report of the Policy Commission on the Future of Food and Farming, together with the Milk Task Force Report, and this is reflected in our Sustainable Farming and Food Strategy, launched on 12 December. My noble Friend, the Lord Whitty, has convened a number of meetings of an informal dairy supply chain group, including representatives of dairy farmers, which has addressed issues of concern to those in the dairy supply chain that came out of these reports. This group is also likely to consider how the industry can best address any lessons that emerge from the ongoing KPMG study on the structure of the UK dairy sector and milk pricing, commissioned by the Milk Development Council.

Warm Front Scheme

26. Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many homes in Leeds, North-West have benefited from the Government's warm front scheme. [86791]

Alun Michael: The Scheme Manager for the area, TXU Warm Front Ltd., has confirmed that between June 2000 and 9 December 2002, 10,096 households in the Leeds local authority area received assistance through Warm Front. The information is not identified by constituency.

20-day Rule

27. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of the 20 days animal movement rule on reducing the spread of animal infections. [86793]

Mr. Morley: In line with the FMD Inquiry recommendations, a detailed risk assessment and cost-benefit analysis of the 20-day standstill is currently being carried out. We hope to be able to publish the emerging findings early in the new year.

Earth Summit

28. Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on steps being taken by her Department to meet the outcomes of the Earth Summit in Johannesburg. [86794]

Mr. Meacher: Defra is committed to take forward the commitments made at the Johannesburg Summit as part of our wider effort to promote sustainable development. In doing so, we shall focus particularly on those commitments for which we have lead responsibility in Government. A grid that sets out the key commitments from Johannesburg and indicates which Departments lead on these has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Flood Plains

29. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in which of the areas affected by flooding in autumn 2000, it is her Department's proposal that the main solution is the removal of buildings on flood plains. [86796]

Mr. Morley: Defra provides grant to local operating authorities for flood defence capital works that meet certain criteria. However responsibility for deciding which projects to promote and their timing rests with the operating authorities.

The information requested is not readily available from all operating authorities. The Environment Agency advise that they are not aware of any specific proposals to buy properties in the floodplain and remove them, following the autumn 2000 floods as the solution to flooding.

However, some flood protection schemes involve property acquisition to allow defences to be built, and in some areas where effective flood alleviation is difficult then the long-term solution may be relocation outside the flood risk area as buildings reach the end of their useful life.

British-produced Food

30. Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to promote British-produced food. [86797]

Alun Michael: Defra promotes the export of British produced food through sponsorship of and grant in aid to Food from Britain, which also assists with the marketing of regional speciality foods. As part of the Strategy on Sustainable Farming and Food, published recently, we will be introducing a new structure and additional support for regional food initiatives.

Waste Refrigerators

31. Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the ability of local authorities to deal with waste refrigerators. [86798]

Mr. Meacher: Special Grant Report No 109 was laid in Parliament on 14 November. The report, which was debated by the House on 16 December, details the proposed allocation to the relevant receiving authorities of the £40 million allocated this year to assist with the disposal of refrigerators. These allocations will be given to relevant local authorities shortly, and with this money, local authorities will be well equipped to deal with waste refrigerators.

Farmers (Entry-level Payments)

32. Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whom she has consulted about the proposed entry level scheme for payments to farmers; and how the scheme links with other agri-environmental schemes. [86799]

Mr. Meacher: In March this year my Department held an initial public consultation on agri-environment schemes in England, including the Policy Commission's recommendation for an entry level scheme. We received over 130 responses, and the analysis of the responses is available on the Defra website at: http://defraweb/erdp/schemes/landbased/review/consultnew.htm

Since then we have worked closely with a wide range of stakeholder organisations on developing the pilot for the entry level scheme. These include:

Association of Local Government Archaeological Officers, Association of National Park Authorities, Country Land and Business Association, Countryside Agency, Environment Agency, English Heritage, English Nature, Farmcare, Game Conservancy Trust, Hill Farms Initiative, Local Government Association, National Farmers Union, National Trust, Royal Society Protection of Birds, Tenant Farmers Association, The Wildlife Trusts/Link, and the Farming and Wildlife Advisory Group.

The conclusions of this work have led to the document on the proposed future framework for agri-environment schemes in England that was issued for consultation earlier this week. This document is available on the Defra website at: http://defraweb/corporate/consult/current.htm

Coastal Protection

34. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs at how many public inquiries on coastal protection proposals her Department has been represented in the last year for which information is available. [86801]

Mr. Morley: Defra officials held one local hearing in 2001–02 to consider views on unresolved objections to coast protection works proposed by local authorities.

Bovine TB

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what evidence has been obtained to establish a link between badgers and bovine tuberculosis. [86800]

Mr. Morley: The Krebs Review of bovine TB in cattle found compelling evidence that badgers are a significant source of infection for cattle. However, the relative contribution that badgers and other wildlife make to the disease is unknown. The ongoing badger culling field trial was designed by the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) to evaluate what role, if any, badgers play in the transmission of bovine TB to cattle, and whether badger culling is an effective or sustainable bovine TB control mechanism. It will provide epidemiological data on the occurrence and prevalence of TB in badgers, its relationship to population density and social group size and the spatial relationship between TB-infected badgers and TB breakdowns in cattle herds.

The ISG have advised that it is too early for a full analysis of results. It is a basic rule for scientific trials that results are not published prematurely. However, it has been possible to complete a preliminary analysis of the risk factors associated with cattle TB, and this is set out in the ISG's Third Report, available in the House Library.

CAP

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her French and German counterparts regarding the mid-term review of the Common Agricultural Policy. [86773]

Margaret Beckett: I have regularly spoken to my French and German counterparts about reform of the Common Agricultural Policy during recent meetings of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council. I also met my German opposite number on this subject on 24 October and plan to meet my French counterpart early in the new year.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total area of farm holdings is in England and Wales which are part of the Countryside Stewardship Scheme; and if she will make a statement. [87329]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Stewardship Scheme operates in England, whereas the equivalent scheme in Wales, Tir Gofal, is the responsibility of the Welsh Assembly. The total area of land under agreement in the Countryside Stewardship Scheme is approximately 338,000 hectares, not including the 2002 application round.

Farmers (Retirement)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what plans she has to introduce a means-tested retirement scheme for farmers. [86787]

Alun Michael: We have no plans to introduce an early retirement scheme for farmers. The Government agrees with the findings of the Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food that a retirement incentive scheme would not offer value for money. However, as suggested by the Commission, Defra is developing a supporting pack of advice for farmers considering retirement, in consultation with stakeholders. The pack should be available by June 2003.

Fuel Poverty Advisory Group

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the report of the fuel poverty advisory group. [86784]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend, the Lord Whitty, has only recently received the Fuel Poverty Advisory Group's first annual report and will be making a full assessment of it in due course.

Recycling

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what (a) guidance and (b) advice is provided to Government Departments regarding the disposal of (i) printer cartridges and (ii) mobile phones; [85851]

(2) what support her Department (a) provides and (b) plans to provide to (i) local authorities and (ii) charitable organisations regarding the recycling and reuse of (A) mobile phones and (B) printer cartridges; [85853]

(3) what the total (a) volume and (b) number of printer cartridges (i) purchased and (ii) disposed of in the UK was in each year since 1990. [85855]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 11 December 2002]: There are around 90 million mobile phones in use and being stored the UK, and around 15 million of these are replaced every year. The majority of these are set to be reused or recycled through schemes such as FoneBack to which the main mobile phone companies are members. A number of phones are also being refurbished and sold to eastern Europe, Asia and Africa where there is a strong second hand market. In addition to this, the recently finalized text of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive sets a 75 per cent. target for the recovery and 65 per cent. target for the recycling of separately collected mobile phones.

The average office printer uses around a dozen printer cartridges a year, while a home printer uses around five. There are currently a number of businesses and charities that will collect printer cartridges when they are disposed of and send them for re-manufacturing. The text of the WEEE Directive encourages the design of equipment for recycling in general, and prioritises the re-use, recycling and recovery of WEEE so as to reduce the disposal of waste. Under the Directive producers of electrical and electronic goods will be responsible for the recovery, treatment and environmentally sound disposal of their equipment.

The Directive does not cover consumables such as printer cartridges when they are discarded separately. Devices are sometimes inserted into such consumables to prevent their reuse. The Department is therefore looking at effective measures to reduce this.

Guidance and advice will be developed and provided to Government Departments, local authorities and charitable organisations on the disposal, recycling and reuse of mobile phones and printer cartridges as part of the implementation of the WEEE Directive.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list for her Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87694]

Alun Michael: The Department published progress against all its outstanding PSA targets in its Departmental Report 2002 (Cm 5422) and Autumn Performance Report 2002 (Cm 5698).

Technetium-99

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her written statement of 11 December 2002, Official Report, columns 20–22WS, on technetium-99, whether THORP produces technetium-99 wastes; what evidence she considered when assessing whether the continued reprocessing of Magnox and thermal oxide spent fuel at Sellafield was justified; and when she expects to consider the question whether to undertake a review of justification under Article 6(2) of Directive 96/29/ Evratom. [87829]

Margaret Beckett: THORP does produce technetium-99 wastes, but these account for a small fraction of the totality of technetium-99 discharges from the Sellafield site. By far the largest proportion of technetium-99 discharges from that site originate from the reprocessing of Magnox spent fuel.

We have considered the information that has been provided by the Environment Agency in its published documents, and information that has been provided in the form of representations both to the Agency and directly to Ministers concerning technetium-99. We have concluded that as discharges of technetium-99 constitute only one small aspect of the practice of Magnox spent fuel reprocessing and the practice of spent oxide fuel reprocessing, it would be more appropriate to consider whether their justification should be reviewed when considering the other radioactive discharges that arise from those practices.

With regard to the reprocessing of spent Magnox fuel, the Environment Agency has carried out a separate review of the remaining radioactive discharges from the Sellafield site (other than technetium-99), including those from Magnox reprocessing and, in August, published its proposed decision for Ministers to consider. We intend to come to a view on the Agency's proposals, and come to a conclusion as to whether it is necessary to review the practice of Magnox reprocessing as to justification in the spring of next year.

With regard to the reprocessing of spent oxide fuel, the Government set out the position with respect to the continued operation of THORP in the White Paper on Managing Nuclear Energy which was published in July 2002. If and when any proposals for new contracts for THORP are received, the Government will review the range of issues involved in increasing the current volume of oxide fuel to be reprocessed. One of those issues will be the appropriateness of carrying out a review of the practice of reprocessing spent oxide fuel.

Thailand

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what commitments concerning agricultural produce the Government has entered into as part of or in association with the trade agreement reached in October with Thailand. [81817]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 19 November 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 21 November 2002, Official Report, column 218W.

Water Directive

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to ensure the timely implementation of the water directive. [86779]

Margaret Beckett: Much work is already in hand. We published the second of three consultation papers this October and a third is planned for next year. The Environment Agency are also gearing up for implementation.

PRIME MINISTER

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Jonathan Djanogly: To ask the Prime Minister how many departmental Christmas cards he intends to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if he will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card he has sent this year. [88119]

The Prime Minister: I shall be sending 1,260 official Christmas cards which cost £267. The despatch and staff time for posting those cards is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Christmas Security

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Prime Minister how much will be spent on (a) entertaining, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) other festive activities this Christmas season by his Department and Government agencies answerable to his Department; and of this sum how much will be spent in ministers' (i) private offices and (ii) official residences. [88120]

The Prime Minister: No public money will be spent on entertaining and other festive activities this Christmas. Around £2,500 will be spent on Christmas decorations for official purposes, and is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

European Policy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister whether his speech in Cardiff on 28 November 2002, entitled "A Clear Course for Europe", represents Government policy towards the European Union; and whether the (a) Foreign Office, (b) DTI and (c) Cabinet colleagues were consulted on the speech before delivery. [88274]

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on (a) the occasion and (b) the audience of his speech in Cardiff of 28 November 2002 entitled "A Clear Course for Europe". [88275]

The Prime Minister: I spoke to an audience which included business people, community leaders and political representatives to set out the Government's policy towards the European Union, and in particular its position on the debate surrounding the Convention on the Future of Europe.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Security

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what measures have been put in place within the air traffic control system to deal with the threat posed to civil aircraft by surface-to-air missiles; [87844]

(2) what recent advice the Government have provided to British civilian airlines on counter measures to deal with surface-to-air missiles; [87846]

(3) what discussions he has had with allied countries about the threat posed to civil aircraft from surface to air missiles; [87849]

(4) what consultations he has had with defence contractors about the development of counter measures against surface-to-air missiles for civil airliners; [87847]

(5) what plans he has to introduce regulations for the introduction of counter measures for civil aircraft to deal with surface-to-air missiles. [87848]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 17 December 2002]: Appropriate action has been taken and we are giving urgent consideration to the issues in conjunction with other relevant parties.

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many departmental Christmas cards he and his Ministers intend to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if he will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card he has sent this year. [88111]

Mr. Jamieson: We shall be sending up to 800 departmental Christmas cards at a cost of £731 + VAT, in accordance with practise over very many years. This expenditure is made in line with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in Government Accounting. A sample copy of the official Christmas card has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much will be spent on (a) entertaining, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) other festive activities this Christmas season by his Department and government agencies answerable to his Department; and of this sum how much will be spent in ministers' (i) private offices and (ii) official residences. [88136]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, all expenditure incurred on decorations, entertainment and any other festive activities is strictly for official purposes only, and is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in Government Accounting.

Dredging

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the effect on the environment of dredging in the Dee Estuary. [86795]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department is currently considering an application from the Port of Mostyn for consent to dredge in the Dee Estuary outside their harbour limits. The applicants have produced an Environmental Statement assessing the impacts on the environment resulting from the dredge and this is currently being advertised and is available for inspection locally. Representations about the application and associated Statement can be made to the Department before January 12th 2003 and we are also seeking comments from specific bodies in the area who have environmental responsibilities. Wirral Borough Council is one of these.

Highway Maintenance

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what funding has been allocated to local authorities for highway maintenance for each financial year from 1997–98 to 2005–06 (a) in total and (b) for each local authority; [86096]

(2) what support was given by his Department to local authorities (a) in total and (b) for each authority, in each financial year since 2000–01 for roads maintenance and repair, broken down by different sources of this funding; and what changes are planned in the next 10 years to the level of funding. [86108]

Mr. Jamieson: Before 2000–01 capital allocations were made under the TSG/TPP system. Since then allocations have been made under the Local Transport Plan system. Details of capital funding for English local authorities outside London for the years 1997–98 to 2004–05 have been placed in the Libraries of the House. Capital funding for maintenance in London is a matter for the Mayor.

Revenue funding for highway maintenance is provided through Revenue Support Grant (RSG). RSG is an unhypothecated grant provided to Local Authorities to enable them to carry out their functions; local authorities can choose to spend this on any services for which they have responsibility, subject to local spending priorities. The amounts provided for highway maintenance within the national totals for RSG in the years 1997–98 to 2004–05 are set out in the table.

Highway maintenance revenue funding between 1997–08 and 2004–05

£ million cash

Year	Local roads revenue
1997–98	1,658
1998–99	1,721
1999–2000	1,763
2000–01	1,859
2001–02	1,905
2002–03	1,955
2003–04	2,005
2004–05	2,055

The Government is committed to halting the deterioration in local road condition by 2004 and to eliminating the backlogs in carriageway, footway, bridge and street lighting maintenance by 2010. Over £30 billion for local road maintenance is being provided over the timescale of the 10-year Transport Plan.

M6

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the economic impact of traffic congestion on the M6. [87911]

Mr. Jamieson: The consultants gave consideration to this aspect of the MidMan Multi Model study. A copy of this report can be found in the House of Commons Library.

In response to its recommendations, the Secretary of State for Transport last week announced that the widening of the M6 between junctions 11a and 19 will be progressed. It is expected that the Highways Agency will add a scheme to its Targeted Programme of Improvements during the first half of 2003.

Motorway (South Preston and Warrington North)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what part of the motorway between South Preston and Warrington North will remain three lanes; and which council areas will be affected; [87517]

(2) what plans he has to make the Warrington North to Preston South section of the M6 four lanes; and what plans and costings have been carried out of the four lanes proposal. [87518]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tim Matthews to Mr. Lindsay Hoyle, dated 19 December 2002:

The Transport Minister has asked me to write to reply to your recent questions about plans for the M6 motorway between Warrington North and Preston South.

There are currently no proposals to make the Warrington North to Preston South section of the M6 four lanes. However as the Secretary of State said last week we do keep these matters under review. You also asked for confirmation of which council areas are affected by this route. The M6 passes through the Boroughs of Warrington, Wigan, St. Helens, Chorley and the City of Preston.

You may be interested to note that the Agency is currently progressing a Route Management Strategy (RMS) on the M6 between Junction 20 at Lymm to the Scottish Border as part of our 10-year plan to make best use of this route. Early investigations on the RMS have identified congestion problems during the peak periods especially between Junctions 24 and 28. However, further study work is needed before we can incorporate any local network schemes into the RMS management plan.

We expect to hold Public consultation on the draft RMS during spring next year. I will write to you again nearer the time with more details. In the meantime if you need any further information, please contact the Highways Agency's Regional Manager for Network Strategy in the North West, Malcolm Roberts, at Sunley Tower, Piccadilly Plaza, Manchester, M1 4BE, Tel: 0161 930 5668.

New Roads

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of new (a) motorways and (b) trunk roads have been constructed in each of the last five years. [87910]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tim Matthews to Mr. Nigel Evans, dated 19 December 2002:

I have been asked by David Jamieson to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking how many miles of new motorways and trunk roads have been constructed in each of the last five years.

In England a total length of 68.31 miles of new motorway and 139.86 miles of new trunk road have been constructed over the last five years. More detailed information is shown in the table below.

Miles

	Motorways			Trunk road
Year of completion	Newly constructed	Widened	Upgraded from APTR	Newly constructed	Widened
1997–98	11.37	12.5	13.125	46.875	18.06
1998–99	0	7.94	13.125	12.375	7.875
1999–2000	0	0	0	24.75	2.5
2000–01	10.25	0	0	13.75	0
2001–02	0	0	0	0	0
2002–03	0	0	0	1.8	11.875
Sub total	21.62	20.44	26.25	99.55	40.31
Grand total		68.31		139.86

I hope that this is helpful. If you would like more information, Graham Rainbow of the Programme Planning and Development team, would be pleased to help. He can be contacted at our offices at Broadway, Broad Street, Birmingham B15 1BL, or by telephone on 0121 678 8008.

Redhill Aerodrome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he intends to include a proposal to develop Redhill Aerodrome in his consultation on airport capacity in the South East; and if he will make a statement; [87990]

(2) if he will make a statement on road links to Redhill Aerodrome; [87991]

(3) what representations the Department has received regarding plans for the development of a major airport based at Redhill Aerodrome; and if he will make a statement; [87994]

(4) what estimate he has made of the effect on air movements at Gatwick Airport of the development of an international airport at Redhill Aerodrome capable of transporting (a) 2.6 million and (b) 15 million passengers per year; [87992]

(5) what proposals he has received regarding the development of Redhill Aerodrome as a major passenger airport; and if he will publish them. [87993]

Mr. Jamieson: As a response to The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom (South East) Consultation Redhill Aerodrome Limited lodged on 13 December a submission that includes proposals to develop a new stand-alone passenger airport on the existing aerodrome site.

We will make publicly available in due course all responses to the consultation, except those marked confidential. In the mean time publication is a matter for the authors.

As part of the early SERAS analysis two options for the development of Redhill as an adjunct to Gatwick airport were considered. Details of this work are contained in Chapter three of the Stage One appraisal findings report. Following the conclusion of the first stage of the SERAS study, Ministers decided that these options would not be taken forward for more detailed assessment in the latter stages of the study.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport announced to Parliament on 28 November that the consultation on airports capacity will be extended until we have consulted on proposals in respect of Gatwick. Those who have already responded to the consultation will be able to amend, add to, or replace their response having considered the new document. We will set out our plans for the remaining stage of the consultation process when we publish the further consultation paper in the new year.

Road Improvements (Yorkshire)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will include ways of improving traffic flows on both A614 and A165 in the further studies on road improvements in Yorkshire announced on 10 December. [87382]

Mr. Spellar: The further studies on road improvements in Yorkshire announced by the Secretary of State in the Statement on Transport Investment on 10 December refer to the two Multi-Modal studies that have been undertaken in the Yorkshire and the Humber region: the South and West Yorkshire Multi-Modal Study (SWYMMS) and the Hull East-West Corridor Multi-Modal Study (HUMMS), on which Ministers expect to take decisions next year. Neither of these relate to the A614 or A165 roads over any of their lengths.

The A614 and A165 roads are the responsibility of East Riding of Yorkshire Council as local highway authority and the Government allocates funds annually to local authorities to spend on their transport infrastructure.

Road Signs

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce metric distance signs on roads; and if he will make a statement. [88223]

Mr. Jamieson: The position remains as set out in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucester (Mr. Dhanda) on 11 July 2002, Official Report, column 1116W.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87702]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 December 2002]: My Department published on Tuesday progress against all its outstanding PSA targets in "Delivering Better Transport: Progress Report."

Surface-to-air Missiles

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he assesses the threat posed to British civil airlines from surface to air missiles; and what actions he proposes to take. [87997]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government believe that the terrorist threat to UK interests, including civil aviation, both in the UK and overseas, is a very real one, and has taken a range of actions to manage the risk. So far as the threat to civil airlines from surface to air missiles is concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today [87844].

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Firefighters' Dispute

Mr. Cransby: To ask the Solicitor-General what role the Attorney-General plays in relation to the firefighters' dispute. [83558]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General has the power to apply to the Court for an injunction to prevent threatened breaches of the criminal law. This power is to be exercised in the public interest, which is exercised in independent judgment in the role as Attorney-General rather than as a member of Government. Such an application is always exceptional and is only instituted where there is the prospect of genuine, serious and irreparable harm and is judged that it is in the public interest to make the application.

It is the Attorney-General's duty to keep under constant review the question whether to exercise this power. In order to determine where the public interest lies he may consult as he has been doing with ministerial colleagues to ensure that he is properly informed as to the public interest consultations arising. The Attorney has been informed also of the views of fire authority representatives in relation to the potential threat to public safety. But the power to apply for an injunction is one for the Attorney-General to exercise in the public interest and the decision is for him alone.

Postcodes

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Solicitor-General what use her Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for (a) the collection and publication of data and (b) the delivery of services; and when such usages were last reviewed. [87737]

The Solicitor-General: Neither my Department nor its agencies make use of postcode areas data.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many departmental Christmas cards he and his ministers intend to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if he will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card he has sent this year. [88116]

Mr. Straw: I sent 905 Christmas cards at a cost of:

a) £932.95;

b) £97.20 to post 360 first class. 415 cards were sent through the FCO diplomatic bag and a further 130 via the government mail system. There was no separate charge for this;

c) £301.22 for an A2 to spend 4 working days updating and amending the database throughout the year, ordering the cards and sending them out.

Dr. MacShane sent 250 cards in 2002 at a cost of:

a) £175;

b) £16.20 to post 60 first class. The remaining 190 were sent through the FCO diplomatic bag;

c) £160 for an A2 to spend 17 hours updating and amending recipient details, ordering the cards and sending them out.

Baroness Symons sent 451 cards in 2002 at a cost of:

a) £315;

b) £114.75 to post 425 first class. The remaining 26 were sent through the FCO diplomatic bag or via the government mail system;

c) £184.80 for an A2 to spend 20 hours updating and amending recipient details, ordering the cards and sending them out.

Mr. O'Brien sent 185 cards (106 Christmas cards, 79 Bid cards) in 2002 at a cost of:

a) £129.50;

b) £15.12 to post 56 first class. The remaining 129 were sent through the FCO diplomatic bag or via the government mail system.

c) £337.50 for a B3 to spend 32 hours updating and amending recipient details, ordering the cards and sending them out.

Mr. Rammell sent 225 cards at a cost of:

a) £157.50;

b) £27.54 to post 102 first class. 29 were sent through the FCO diplomatic bag and a further 94 via the government mail system;

c) £129.36 for an A2 to spend 14 hours sending out the Christmas cards.

Baroness Amos sent 380 cards at a cost of:

a) £266;

b) £67.77 to post 251 first class. 56 were sent through the FCO diplomatic bag and a further 73 via the Government mail system;

c) £206.01 for an A2 to spend 27 hours updating and amending recipient details and sending out the Christmas cards. And 22.50 for a B3 to spend two hours sending out Christmas cards.

A sample copy of my and all other ministers Christmas cards will be placed in the Library of the House.

My cards were ordered through Card Aid which donates all profits to charity. £205 will be donated to UNICEF this year. All other ministers choose their cards from the official FCO selection. The profits of the official FCO card are split between the FCO Welfare Fund and the Diplomatic Families Association Emergency Welfare Fund.

All expenditure incurred in the purchase and dispatch of official cards is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in Government Accounting.

Citizenship Applications

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs where records of applications for registration as a citizen of the UK and its colonies submitted at the British Embassy in the former colony of Aden in 1970 have been retained; and whether they can be inspected by members of the public. [87424]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Applications for registration as a citizen of the UK and colonies, which were submitted to the British Embassy in Aden in 1970 would have been forwarded to the Home Office for consideration. Copies of these applications were not retained at the British Embassy. Any enquiries about individual cases should be made to the Home Office.

European Union

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the acquisition of full legal personality by the European Union. [87907]

Mr. MacShane: Recognition of the legal personality of the Union would have the advantage of clarity and simplicity. But if the European Union were to have its legal personality recognised in the European treaties it could only be on the basis that the distinct arrangements for common foreign and security policy, and aspects of justice and home affairs were fully safeguarded, along with the existing arrangements for representation in international bodies. The Government would need to be sure that the necessary safeguards were in place before taking a decision on this issue.

Iraq

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which British (a) individuals and (b) companies were identified in the Iraqi declaration to the United Nations Security

Council as having supplied arms, weapons-related technology or material to Iraq, giving in each case (i) the nature of the arms, technology or material supplied and (ii) the date of supply. [87868]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport West (Paul Flynn) on 17 December UIN 87497.

Oil Revenues

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the volume is of unspent oil revenues allocated for Iraqi Kurdistan in the escrow account of the UN oil-for-food programmes; and what the reasons are for withholding aid to Iraqi Kurdistan. [87078]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer of 16 December 2002]: As of 11 December US$3.3 billion of 'Oil For Food' revenue remained unallocated by Iraq in the UN escrow account. US$1.2billion of the revenue allocated to the UN humanitarian programme in northern Iraq is currently unspent.

The Iraqi regime has consistently obstructed improvements in northern Iraq, delaying the arrival of de-mining equipment that could save lives and denying visas to UN personnel involved in essential humanitarian projects. It has also restricted the distribution of food and medicines to northern Iraq.

Sandy Mitchell

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what talks he has had with the Saudi Arabian government on the imprisonment of a constituent, Sandy Mitchell. [87300]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, and ministerial colleagues have raised the cases of Mr. Mitchell and the other British men detained in Saudi Arabia at the highest levels with the Saudi authorities. We remain deeply concerned about these cases. The men's welfare is our paramount concern. We continue to work tirelessly to resolve the cases. We are in close contact with the Saudi authorities and the men's lawyers. We also continue to make consular visits to the men.

Uzbekistan

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed human rights with representatives of the Government of Uzbekistan. [87653]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: When I last met the Uzbek Ambassador on 4 September, I raised human rights. The Permanent Under Secretary also raised human rights issues with Uzbek Foreign Minister Kamilov in London in September. Officials raise the subject regularly, most recently with the Uzbek Ambassador on 16 December. The UK also makes representations with the EU wherever possible and was recently part of an EU delegation making representations to Deputy Foreign Minister Safaev on the deaths of two prisoners, apparently due to torture. We also make statements on human rights issues, both with the EU and bilaterally: our Ambassador made a strong speech in October at the opening of the Freedom House NGO in Tashkent, while in December the EU made a statement protesting about the unfair trial of Iskander Khudaiberganov.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the President of the Council how many departmental Christmas cards he and his ministers intend to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if he will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card he has sent this year. [88117]

Mr. Robin Cook: 700 Christmas cards (in three different designs) were purchased for my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary and me to send at a total cost of £763.75. These cards were bought in aid of The Children's Society and Amnesty International. The postage cost is some £70; the majority of cards were sent via the Inter-Departmental Service or parliamentary mail. Some 10 hours staff time was spent in addressing and despatching the cards; the gross salary costs for this work were some £75. Sample copies of these cards have placed in the Library.

Given the hon. Member's interest in this matter, I will include him on my Christmas card list for next year.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the President of the Council how much will be spent on (a) entertaining, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) other festive activities this Christmas season by his Department; and of this sum how much will be spent in Ministers' (i) private offices and (ii) official residences. [88126]

Mr. Robin Cook: This Christmas, the Privy Council Office (PCO) spent £2,112 on entertaining, £15 on decorations and nothing on other festive activities. The expenditure on entertaining was accounted for by my traditional Christmas party, held to thank all those (hon. Members, parliamentary clerks, officials and others) who helped me in my capacity as Leader of the House. All PCO expenditure was Department-wide, and nothing was spent in Ministers' private offices or in official residences.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Amateur Sports Clubs

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of introducing 80 per cent. mandatory rate relief for all community amateur sports clubs via the Local Government Bill; and if he will make a statement; [87647]

(2) what estimate he has made of the proportion of community amateur sports clubs that would qualify for mandatory rate relief under the provisions of the Local Government Bill; and if he will make a statement. [87648]

Mr. Leslie: The Local Government Bill does not include provisions for introducing 80 per cent. mandatory rate relief for community amateur sports clubs and so no assessment has been made of the impact of introducing such a scheme.

There is also no estimate available of the proportion of community amateur sports clubs that would qualify for mandatory rate relief under the provisions in the Local Government Bill. Community amateur sports clubs would benefit from the rate relief scheme for small businesses in the Local Government Bill. The scheme would provide mandatory rate relief of up to 50 per cent. for properties with rateable values of up to £3,000. For larger properties the percentage of relief would gradually taper off, with no relief for properties with rateable values above £8,000.

Local authorities may grant up to 100 per cent. relief at their discretion to community amateur sports clubs that qualify under the new mandatory relief scheme for small businesses.

The rating lists do not record the use of property by voluntary or community amateur sports clubs as distinct from other sports clubs. The rating lists for England include about 16,000 sports properties, including those used by community amateur sports clubs as well as professional and commercial sports bodies. Of the 16,000 sports properties in England, around 7,500 have rateable values of under £3,000 and a further 4,000 have rateable values above £3,000 and below £8,000.

As explained in the White Paper "Strong Local Leadership—Quality Public Services", which was published in December 2001, mandatory rate relief is already available for all premises used wholly or mainly for charitable purposes, provided that they meet the criteria for charitable status. The Charity Commission announced in November 2001 that they will recognise as charitable purposes "the promotion of community participation in healthy recreation by the provision of facilities for the playing of particular sports", and "the advancement of the physical recreation of young people not undergoing formal education".

Where individual clubs do not meet the Charity Commission's criteria, or where they decide not to seek charitable status, local authorities retain discretion to grant rate relief to any non-profit making body. Local authorities have the power to grant relief where it is in the interests of local council taxpayers for them to do so. We have recently published on our website, revised guidance for local authorities and ratepayers on rate relief for charities and other non-profit making organisations.

In addition to this specific assistance, the Government has also introduced a tax package (legislated for in Finance Bill 2002), which will provide a range of tax reliefs for community amateur sports clubs on their income and on the donations which local people make to support them. The tax package follows that outlined in the "Promoting Sport in the Community" consultation document—mandatory rate relief was not part of the tax package which was consulted upon. The Government believes that the tax package and the option of charitable status, together with the help available for clubs under the non-domestic rating system, represent a generous system of support sports clubs.

Asylum Seekers (Rough Sleeping)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact on the number of rough sleepers of the coming into effect of section 55 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylums Act 2002 on 8 January 2003; what steps he has taken to address change in the number of rough sleepers after that date; and if he will make a statement. [85816]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 10 December 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

The purpose of the new policy is to ensure that those wishing to seek asylum do so at the first practical opportunity on arrival in the United Kingdom. If that purpose is fulfilled, there is no reason to suppose that the coming into force of section 55 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 will result in an increase in the number of rough sleepers.

Bain Inquiry

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much is to be paid to the individual members of the Bain Inquiry into the fire service. [88499]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend, the Member for Glasgow, Kelvin (Mr. Galloway) on 9 December 2002, Official Report, column 129W.

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost is of the Bain Inquiry into the Fire Service. [88500]

Mr. Raynsford: The estimated cost of the independent review of the Fire Service chaired by Professor Sir George Bain is £468,000.

Business Co-ordination Unit

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when a Minister from his Department last visited a business in (a) West Sussex and (b) East Worthing and Shoreham as part of the work of the Business Co-ordination Unit. [87468]

Mr. Leslie: The Business Co-ordination Unit have not arranged any Office of the Deputy Prime Minister ministerial visits to either West Sussex or East Worthing and Shoreham since the creation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Business Improvement Districts

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what systems he has assessed for voting in relation to business improvement districts; and how the Government proposes to ensure that the system is simple. [87971]

Mr. Leslie: Clause 52 of the Local Government Bill, which was introduced into Parliament on 25 November, sets out the rules governing the BID ballot. A successful ballot will have to meet two tests. Firstly a simple majority of those voting in the BID ballot must vote in favour. Secondly, those voting in favour must represent a majority by rateable value of the hereditaments (rateable properties) of those voting. This "dual-key" mechanism means that a scheme cannot be forced through by large firms against the wishes of small firms, or vice versa.

Secondly, Clause 57 of the Local Government Bill gives my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister the power to make regulations on the timing of BID ballots, the non-domestic ratepayers entitled to vote in the ballot, the question to be asked in the ballot, the form the ballot will take, the persons who are to hold ballots, and how the ballots are to be conducted. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is holding discussions with representatives of local authorities, rating professionals and members of the business community to ensure that the rules on voting are as simple as possible, while safeguarding the interests of those who will be liable to pay the BID levy.

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many departmental Christmas cards he and his Ministers intend to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if he will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card he has sent this year. [88118]

Mr. Leslie: In accordance with the conventions followed by all administrations the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister shall be sending out up to 1,820 Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Christmas cards, purchased for a total cost of £1,364.40 plus VAT. It is Office of the Deputy Prime Minister policy to send mail by second class post where ever possible. Ministers will sign the cards and they will be placed in envelopes and sent out by Office of the Deputy Prime Minister staff as part of their normal duties. Sample copies of the cards have been placed in the Library of the House. All expenditure incurred in the purchase and despatch of official Christmas cards is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much will be spent on (a) entertaining, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) other festive activities this Christmas season by his Department and government agencies answerable to his Department; and of this sum how much will be spent in ministers' (i) private offices and (ii) official residences. [88121]

Mr. Leslie: Any expenditure incurred on decorations, entertainment and any other festive activities is strictly for official purposes only, and is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Deprivation

Mr. Watts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will indicate the level of deprivation which exists in each local council area. [88341]

Mrs. Roche: A table showing how local authority districts in England are ranked, relative to each other, on the Index of Multiple Deprivation 2000 (IMD 2000) has been placed in the Library of the House. All 354 local authority districts (as at April 1998) are ranked with the most deprived authority being given a rank of 1.

Patterns of deprivation are complex—in some areas the entire district may be generally deprived but with no severe areas, while elsewhere deprivation may be concentrated in very severe pockets, which coexist alongside generally affluent areas. The IMD 2000 has reflected these different patterns through six different measures that are all equally valid. The six measures are:

The concentration measure tells us how severe deprivation is in each authority's 'hot spots' of deprivation;

The extent measure is the percentage of each district's population that live in one of the 10 per cent. most deprived wards in England;

The 'average scores' and 'average ranks' are the average level of deprivation across the entire district;

The income scale and employment scale measure how many people suffer from income and employment deprivation respectively.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently involved in a project to consider options for strengthening and updating the Indices of Deprivation 2000 (ID 2000). The Stage One Consultation Report contains preliminary proposals for updating the ID 2000 and is open for consultation until 15 January 2003.

Empty Homes

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his Department's performance in the disposal of empty homes in the last year for which figures are available. [87942]

Mr. McNulty: The Fire Service College, an Executive Agency of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, owns 39 residential properties, which are kept to house staff on secondment to the College. Currently, a small number of properties are not required for staff use and are let on short-term tenancies. One property is currently empty and due to be let by the end of January.

Fire Services

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries as a result of fire there were in each of the last five years; and what proportion occurred (i) between 11pm and 6 am and (ii) during the hours of darkness. [88484]

Mr. Raynsford: The number of deaths and/or injuries by the time of the fire is tabled below. Data are shown for 1997 to 2001 (the last five years of data available).

Data relating to the severity of injury resulting from fire are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information is collected on the type of injury but not the severity of those injuries.

It is not possible to identify separate data relating to the hours of darkness.

Deaths and injuries from fires by time of day[1], 1997–2001

			Proportion occurring between 11pm and 6am		Rate per 1,000 fires between 11pm and 6am		Proportion occurring between 6am and 11pm		Rate per 1,000 fires between 6am and 11pm

[1] The time of day is denoted as the time the emergency call was received by the local authority fire brigade.
[2] The 2000 and 2001 data for fatalities are estimated to account for the revisions as later information is received. Calculations are based on the provisional total of deaths.

Firefighters' Dispute

John Barrett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the average response time to emergency fire calls during (a) the recent firefighters' strike and (b) full firefighter cover. [88485]

Mr. Raynsford: During the Fire Brigade Union strike between 22 and 30 November 2002, 10,793 fire-related incidents were dealt with by the armed forces and 1,367 by firefighters working for local authority fire brigades. The armed forces' remit was to ensure that all incidents were dealt with where there was a confirmed threat to life (Category A) or a possible threat to life (Category B). In the event, all non-life threatening (Category C) incidents were also attended. An analysis of serious fire-related incidents (mostly Category A) in the north-west of England showed an average response time by the armed forces of 7.2 minutes. The figure for serious incidents in London was 13.8 minutes, largely reflecting traffic problems; and in the south-west, which is a largely rural area, the average response time for serious incidents was 14.2 minutes. These figures are not directly comparable with Fire Service data as fire brigades' target response times are based on four risk categories, ranging from five minutes for main shopping and business centres to 20 minutes for rural areas. Nevertheless, they do demonstrate the highly professional job performed by the armed forces.

John Barrett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many emergency fire calls were not answered during the recent firefighters' strike. [88486]

Mr. Raynsford: During the Fire Brigades Union strike from 22 to 30 November 2002, 30,278 fire-related 999 calls were received by the Joint Operational Control Centres. All such telephone calls were answered. Because of multiple calls per incident, this gave rise to 20,237 incidents. Around five per cent. of calls were filtered out immediately as not being emergencies, and advance police attendance turned back firefighter response in around 40 per cent. of cases. The armed forces therefore attended 10,793 incidents, and firefighters working for local authority fire brigades attended 1,367 incidents. All fire related incidents which required a firefighter response were attended.

Green Belt (West Midlands)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures are in place to retain the green belt areas in the West Midlands. [86792]

Mr. McNulty: Government policy on the Green Belt throughout England remains, as set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note (PPG) 2, which states that protecting the countryside from encroachment is one of the main purposes of including land in the Green Belt.

PPG 2 continues to require that local authority development plans include a strict presumption against inappropriate development in the Green Belt.

Green Belt designations can only be established or altered through development plans. Once approved Green Belts should only be altered in exceptional circumstances. If such an alteration were proposed, the Secretary of State would then wish to be satisfied that the authority has considered opportunities for development within urban areas before allowing it to take place.

Home Ownership

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 711W, what assessment he has made of the ability of each group to access home ownership. [87941]

Mr. McNulty: Many teachers, health workers and police are experiencing difficulties in accessing home ownership in London, the south-east and other housing hot spots. Starter Home Initiative scheme managers assess each applicant's circumstances and provide assistance only to those key workers who would not otherwise be able to buy their own home within a reasonable travelling distance of their work place. Over 1,500 teachers, health workers and police have been assisted through the Starter Home Initiative to date.

Homelessness

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of lettings were made available to homeless households in priority need by (a) local authorities and (b) registered social landlords, broken down by (i) region and (ii) local authority area in 2000–01. [87988]

Mr. McNulty: Information reported by local authorities in England on their Housing Investment Programme returns in respect of lettings of their stock, and nominations to that of registered social landlords, made during 2000–01 has been placed in the Library.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was given to Cambridge City Council towards relieving homelessness in each of the last five years. [87985]

Mrs. Roche: Funding to local authorities for the provision of homeless services is allocated through Revenue Support Grant (RSG) as part of the annual local government finance settlement. RSG is unhypothecated to particular services and up to the current financial year was calculated on the basis of standard spending assessments for individual local authorities. It is for each local authority to decide how much RSG it receives, and its other resources, should be directed towards any particular service. Voluntary Agencies working with Cambridge City Council received almost £900,000 to tackle rough sleeping from 1999–2000.

Housing (Black and Minority Ethnic People)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research he has commissioned into the use of rent assessment panels by BME tenants in the private rented sector, following the recommendation in the DTLR (Housing Directorate) Action Plan, "Addressing the Needs of BME People"; and what steps he will take to address the problems that have been identified. [88264]

Mr. McNulty: To date, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not commissioned any research into the use of Rent Assessment Panels (RAPs) by BME groups. The Action Plan, "addressing the housing needs of BME people", made it clear that an examination of the use of RAP's would be subject to resources and other priorities.

Priority is currently being given to the implementation of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002, including measures affecting the leasehold valuation tribunals, which are made up of the RAPs by BME groups will be undertaken after the anticipated completion of the implementation of the Act on spring 2003.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of (a) African, (b) Afro-Caribbean, (c) Chinese and Vietnamese, (d) Bangladeshi, (e) Indian and (f) Pakistani households are in overcrowded accommodation. [88265]

Mr. McNulty: If overcrowding is measured by the 'bedroom standard' from Survey of English Housing data, averaged over the last three years (1999–2000, 2000–01, 2001–02), the estimated percentages of households in overcrowded accommodation (i.e. one or more bedrooms below the standard) are: (a) African 15 per cent., (b) Afro-Caribbean 6 per cent., (c) Chinese 7 per cent., (d) Bangladeshi 30 per cent., (e) Indian 7 per cent. and (f) Pakistani 22 per cent. The corresponding percentages for other ethnic groups are : white 2 per cent., 'other black groups' 9 per cent., and 'mixed and other ethnic groups', including Vietnamese, 9 per cent.

Housing Associations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to help local authorities (a) promote stock transfer and (b) improve council tenants' knowledge of housing associations. [87939]

Mr. McNulty: Local authorities should involve tenants fully in any decisions about the future ownership and management of their homes. This includes both appraisal of the options available to achieve the decent home standard, and development of the chosen investment option.

If housing transfer is the option chosen, tenants should be involved in choosing the successor housing association. Information about the housing association sector is available from the Housing Corporation and the National Housing Federation. The local authority and the tenants' independent adviser should also familiarise tenants with the work of local housing associations.

Housing Need (Somali Community)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what information his Department has collated on the housing needs and experiences of the Somali community in the UK. [88266]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collated centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Watts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much in grants the Government is proposing to allocate to each local authority. [88336]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister announced details of the allocation to individual authorities of the £43.9 billion of Revenue Support Grant, Business Rates and Principal Formula Police Grant in 2003–04 on Thursday 5 December. Details were also announced on the same day of most of the grants for specific Personal Social Service's initiatives as set out in the Department of Health letter to local authority social services' departments (LASSL(2002)11). In addition local education authorities have received information on allocations for most of the Standards Fund in the circular "The Standards Fund 2003–04", and the Housing Benefit (HB) and Council Tax Benefit (CTB) circular "HB/CTB S8/2002" provided councils with their 2003–04 allocations for HB/CTB Administration Subsidy. Local authorities will also already have received their indicative Neighbourhood Renewal Fund allocations for 2003–04. Departments will be announcing remaining grants as soon as possible.

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for (a) the collection and publication of data, (b) devising formulae for the distribution of grants and awards and (c) the delivery of services; and when usages were last reviewed. [87769]

Mr. Leslie: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as the necessary information is collated.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the proposed floors and ceilings in the new funding system for local government will be removed. [88335]

Mr. Leslie: As my right hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr. Raynsford) made clear in his statement to the House on 5 December 2002, Official Report, column 1079, we expect floors and ceilings to be part of the system indefinitely.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the level of council tax rates in each authority. [88337]

Mr. Leslie: Council tax levels in each authority in England are already published. Figures for each financial year since its introduction in 1993–94 are available from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at www.local.dtlr.gov.uk/finance/ct.htm.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much each local authority has spent below its SSA in the current financial year. [88338]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the Member for the Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) on 18 December 2002, Official Report.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact which the new local government funding system will have on each authority's council tax levels. [88339]

Mr. Leslie: Decisions on council tax are for local authorities to take, after consulting with their local electorate and taxpayers.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister by how much each local authority will be over and under funded if his Department's new proposed funding changes for local government are introduced. [88340]

Mr. Leslie: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister no longer takes the view that a grant distribution formula can represent Government's view on what councils need to spend. The proposed new formula grant distribution system aims to reflect the relative cost of service provision. This year, for the first time, The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will also ensure that all authorities receive a grant increase of more than inflation. Since both formula spending shares and floors and ceilings are simply parts of the system which distributes a fixed pot of grant, all authorities will receive their correct share.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) in the local government finance proposed settlement for 2003–04, for what reason Worcestershire is combined with Herefordshire in the assessment of area cost adjustment; [88445]

(2) under the proposed local government finance settlement for 2003–04 on what basis he calculated that Dudley receive area cost adjustment. [88446]

Mr. Leslie: The area cost adjustment has been calculated on pre-1995 county boundaries and pre-1986 metropolitan county boundaries (though counties bordering London are divided into fringe and non-fringe areas). This means that all unitary authorities (including Herefordshire) and all metropolitan districts (including Dudley) receive the same area cost adjustment as the county or metropolitan county of which they were formerly a part. Not only does this help to reduce complexity, but it ensures that the area cost adjustment calculations are robust and stable from year to year. This is because New Earnings Survey sample sizes for individual unitary and metropolitan district authorities are relatively small.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to include an element of resource equalisation in local government settlements from 2004–05 onwards. [88790]

Mr. Leslie: Resource equalisation has been an element of the local government grant distribution system since the mid-1970's. It will remain so for the foreseeable future.

Local Sport

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to make sport a statutory duty for local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [87649]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

I have no such plans. Local authorities are key providers of sport and recreation and play a central role in the delivery of sport in and for the community. It is through the continuous assessment and improvement of local services through processes such as the comprehensive performance assessment and statutory duties such as Best Value that we can safeguard and bring the highest standards to non-statutory services such as sport and recreation. The Local Government Act 2000 also gives authorities new powers to promote or improve the economic, social or environmental well-being of their area, including the provision of sport and recreational opportunities.

Overcrowded Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on how many occasions since 1985 he has (a) received a report from a local housing authority and (b) directed a local housing authority to prepare and submit a report on the extent of overcrowding in their district, under section 334 of the Housing Act 1985; and what action was taken in each instance. [88262]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. As far as the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware, the powers in section 334 of the Housing Act 1985 have not been used by local authorities or the Deputy Prime Minister in recent years.

Planning Applications

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 688W, on planning applications, what will happen to the planning applications not dealt with within 16 weeks from close of inquiry to decision. [86963]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister always aims to issue a decision as soon as possible. However, the target recognises that, due to the complex nature of some cases or the impact of unforeseen circumstances, a proportion of them will not be dealt with within the 16 week period following the close of the inquiry.

Right to Buy Scheme

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many appeals against the valuation of a property being sold under the right to buy scheme were submitted in London in each year since 1992, broken down by local authority. [87989]

Mr. McNulty: The following table, compiled by the Valuation Office Agency, which carries out all determinations of appeals under the statutory Right to Buy scheme in England and Wales, shows determinations made in each London borough between 1 January 1992 and 30 November 2002.

Social Inclusion

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to encourage use of public procurement contracts to achieve greater social inclusion; and if he will make a statement. [88141]

Mr. Leslie: Contracts let by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are based on value for money, defined as the optimum combination of whole-life cost and quality (or fitness for purpose) to meet the user's requirement.

Local authorities are independent and autonomous and responsible within law for making their own decision on procurement matters. It is for them to decide how far their procurement contracts should be used to achieve greater social inclusion. It remains the responsibility of individual local authorities to make their own judgement about the use of social considerations in procurement, consistent with domestic law, including the duty to achieve best value, and the EC legal framework.

The European Commission has recently provided clarification on the possibilities that Community law offers public purchasers who wish to take account of relevant social considerations into public procurement procedures. This clarification takes the form of an Interpretative Communication that explains how social concerns may be taken into account at each separate stage of the contract award procedure.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working with the Local Government Association through the Local Government Procurement Forum to prepare guidance for local authorities on the EC Procurement Directives and how social considerations may be included in procurement exercises.

Starter Home Initiative

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 December 2002, Official Report, column 711W, how many key workers there are in each of the groups; and how many key worker shortages there are in each group used in informing his Department of the numbers to give assistance to. [87940]

Mr. McNulty: When the first Starter Home Initiative allocations were made in 2001, the broad numbers of staff in London and the south-east in each of the key worker groups were:

c250,000 health staff, excluding senior medical staff and management;

c120,000 teachers; and c40,000 police officers and 18,000 police civilian staff.

The Department of Health, Department for Education and Skills and the Home Office advised the now Office of the Deputy Prime Minister where the Starter Home Initiative funds might best be spent to address shortages. This helped to inform allocations to organisations that submitted bids for funding.

Tenancy Deposit Scheme

Margaret Moran: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to consult on making the Tenancy Deposit Scheme compulsory. [88310]

Mr. McNulty: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister recently launched a consultation on options for the protection of tenancy moneys, including tenancy deposits. The prospects for legislation will be considered in the light of responses received to the consultation.

Visually Impaired Children

Mr. Wray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures are in place to ensure that families with visually impaired children have the same priority as other disabled children when allocating housing; what housing improvement schemes are available for poor parents with visually impaired children; and what proposals he has to widen the availability of these schemes. [87363]

Mr. McNulty: In England, housing authorities must ensure that their allocation scheme is framed so as to give reasonable preference to certain categories of persons. The categories are set out in s167 (2) of the Housing Act 1996 and include households consisting of or including someone with a particular need for settled accommodation on medical or welfare grounds, and families with dependent children. Medical grounds will include a visual impairment where it is serious enough to constitute a disability and where a settled home is required to ensure that the particular needs of the visually impaired person are met. A young person with a visual impairment is also more likely to continue to be considered as a "dependent child" for a longer period.

In England, a family with a visually impaired child has a mandatory right to apply for a disabled facilities grant (DFG) which is intended to help with any necessary adaptations to the home. The grant system is administered through local housing authorities who are required to consult with social services to assess the particular needs of the disabled child. The mandatory grant is subject to a maximum limit of £25,000 per application and subject to a means test.

Under the Regulatory Reform (Housing Assistance) (England and Wales) Order 2002, local authorities have been given additional wide ranging powers which can be used to provide additional assistance with housing adaptations outside the statutory limits of the mandatory DFG system. These new powers can be used at the discretion of the local authority, which would need to allocate resources from its own budgets for this purpose.

Home Improvement Agencies (HIAs) enable vulnerable people to maintain their independence in their own home by helping people through the process of arranging home repairs, improvements or adaptations. Also included is the direct provision of repair and maintenance services, preventative initiatives and providing advice on accessing appropriate finance.

In recognition of the important role HIAs play in supporting independent living, Government recently announced additional funding to assist HIAs to deliver housing and health objectives. In addition to the £8.5 million currently invested, ODPM are investing an extra £5.2 million in the sector, and the Department of Health is making £9.5 million available through local authorities over the next three years.

Issues in Scotland are a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Wandsworth Development Plan

Martin Linton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the timetable is for Wandsworth borough council to deposit a new draft revised (second stage deposit) unitary development plan incorporating the recommendations of the Planning Inspectorate issued to the council on 6 March. [87113]

Mr. McNulty: It is expected that a report will be considered by the relevant Wandsworth borough council committee early in the new year, with a view to the deposit of modifications in spring 2003.

West Midlands Regional Assembly

Mr. Luff: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which organisations he is consulting in Worcestershire as part of his soundings exercise on the possibility of holding a referendum on a West Midlands regional assembly. [88416]

Mr. Leslie: The soundings exercise that was launched by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on 2 December 2002 invites views, information and evidence from people on the level of interest in each English region (outside London) in holding a referendum about establishing an elected regional assembly. Views are welcome from any person or organisation on this issue. The paper giving details about this exercise and inviting responses, along with a pro forma for responding, is available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website. Paper copies are also available.

With regards to Worcestershire (as for all English regions outside London), the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has written to its principal local authorities, MPs and MEPs inviting views, information and evidence. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has written similarly to the following regional bodies in the West Midlands: the West Midlands Regional Assembly (regional chamber); the West Midlands local government association; TUC Midlands region; Institute of Directors West Midland Region; Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry; CBI West Midlands; West Midlands Constitutional Convention; and Sustainability West Midlands. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has, of course, written to the equivalent bodies in the other English regions outside London.

I have placed a list of all organisations in England contacted about this soundings exercise in the Library.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Annual Reports (Production Costs)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost of production was of the (a) Community Fund's Annual Report, (b) Sport England Annual Report, (c) Heritage Lottery Fund and National Heritage Memorial Fund Annual Report and Accounts and (d) NESTA Annual Report, in each of the past three years; how many copies of each report were produced; and if she will make a statement. [86377]

Dr. Howells: The information requested for each organisation is set out as follows:

	£	Number of copies
1999–2000
Community Fund	39,144	7,300
Sport England	36,251	2,000

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to which bodies her Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87386]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 607W.

BBC

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will publish the revised version of the proposed changes to the BBC Agreement; and if she will make a statement. [87278]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The proposed amendments to the Agreement will be made available to the Standing Committee on the Communications Bill in time to assist the Committee's consideration of clause 193.

Broadcasting Regulations

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which regulations govern the broadcasting of programming material by (a) digital satellite, (b) digital terrestrial, (c) digital cable and (d) broadband. [87488]

Dr. Howells: The regulations which govern the broadcasting of programming material by (a) digital satellite, (b) digital terrestrial, (c) digital cable and (d) broadband are set out in the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996.

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many departmental Christmas cards she and her Ministers intend to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if she will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card she has sent this year. [88110]

Dr. Howells: Ministers sent 1,120 of the 3,800 Christmas cards produced by my Department this year. The design and print costs totalled £1,985, and the majority of cards were sent by second class post.

No assessment was made of the time taken to sign, address and place cards in envelopes. However, most cards were addressed using pre-printed labels.

I am arranging for a copy of the card, which depicts a mural produced by the Crew Art Legacy Project at the Manchester Commonwealth Games, to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Licensing Reform

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the cost of the impact of the Licensing Bill on (a) churches, (b) village halls, (c) voluntary associations and (d) other non-profit-making bodies. [87411]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The Government anticipate that it will be simpler and less expensive for voluntary associations and other non-profit-making bodies to stage entertainment under the new regime. The Regulatory Impact Assessment estimates that some organisations would save around £150 million over the first 10 years. Churches, of course, have been exempt from the requirement for a public entertainment licence for music outside Greater London. Any costs would depend on the licensable activities, if any, which are undertaken and their frequency.

However, as I stated in the House of Commons on 16 December, Official Report, column 517, the Government have made a commitment to reconsider its position on the licensing of churches and will announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions took place between her Department and religious authorities as part of the consultation on licensing reform. [87409]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The White Paper "Time for Reform", published in April 2000 was the subject of a full public consultation. It was sent directly to 231 organisations and over 650 organisations produced responses. We received eight responses from religious organisations, including one from the Churches Main Committee. None of these were concerned with the proposal to licence public entertainment in churches and other places of religious worship. Since then, officials of my Department have had discussions with officials of the General Synod of the Church of England about a possible mechanism to exempt churches from licensing controls.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the additional costs which will be incurred by churches as a result of the provisions of the new Licensing Bill. [87451]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 18 December 2002]: In the Regulatory Impact Assessment, published with the Licensing Bill, it has been estimated that an initial application for a premises licence would cost between £100 and £500, and that there would be an annual charge of between £50 and £150. Any costs would depend on the licensable activities, if any, which are undertaken and their frequency.

However, as I stated in the House of Commons on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 517, the Government have made a commitment to reconsider its position on the licensing of churches, and will announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by her or her predecessor and (b) by ministers in her Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87359]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 608W.

Postcodes

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what use her Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for (a) the collection and publication of data, (b) devising formulae for the distribution of grants and awards and (c) the delivery of services; and when such usages were last reviewed. [87743]

Dr. Howells: The information is as follows:

(a) The Department collects and publishes data which use post codes on:

(i) awards made from National Lottery funds.

(ii) the proportion of households living within a specified distance of a static library.

This followed the introduction of national standards for public libraries in April 2001.

These usages have not been reviewed.

The Department's sole agency, the Royal Parks Agency, does not make use of postcode areas in collection and publication of data.

(b),(c) The Department and the Royal Parks Agency do not use postcode areas in either devising formulae for the distribution of grants and awards or the delivery of services.

Public House Licences

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the number of public house licence holders that will be required to undergo a Criminal Records Bureau check by regulations made under the Licensing Bill. [88239]

Dr. Howells: Schedule 8 to the Licensing Bill provides that under the transitional arrangements, holders of justices' licences authorising the sale of alcohol by retail under the current licensing regime will be able to apply for personal licences under the new regime, without undergoing a Criminal Record Bureau check. If such a licence holder has been convicted of any relevant offence or equivalent foreign offence under the Bill, they would, however, be required to submit a statement giving details of that offence with their application for a personal licence. Failure to provide such a statement would be an offence under the Bill.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87691]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The Department publishes progress against all of its outstanding PSA targets in its departmental report and autumn performance report. The most recent departmental report was published in May 2002 (Cm 5423) and the autumn performance report in December 2002 (Cm 5699).

Television Subtitling

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer given on 4 July, Official Report, column 514W, on television subtitling, whether the code produced by Ofcom relating to the provision of television services for deaf and visually impaired people will include specific guidance on the presentation of subtitles. [87705]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 18 December 2002]: The code relating to the provision of television services for the deaf and visually impaired, to be produced by Ofcom, will include guidance on the technical standards to be attained for subtitling. We would expect the code to include aspects of style and presentation, as the ITC code currently does.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to which bodies his Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87388]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given yesterday by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office.

Connexions Service

Mr. Phil Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Connexions Card will have an electronic purse to (a) manage payments from Education Maintenance Allowances paid by LEAs and (b) manage training allowances paid by the Learning and Skills Council. [87957]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There are no plans for the Connexions Card to have an electronic purse for the purposes of managing payments from Education Maintenance Allowances or training allowances.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the Connexions Card is to be launched. [87958]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Connexions Card is now available to all 16 to 19-year-olds in England.

From February 2003, there will be an extensive national launch programme of activities aimed at young people across England.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many personal advisors worked for the Connexions Service in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [87959]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information in the table below shows the number of full time equivalent personal advisers who had worked for the Connexions Service in the last two years.

Period	Number of personal advisers (full time equivalents)	Number of operational Connexions Partnerships
2001–02	2,175.9	15
2002–03[1]	5,958.9	42

[1] Data available to end October 2002

Education Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 16 to 19-year-olds used their allowance for (a) travel costs, (b) books and equipment and (c) other living costs during the education maintenance allowance pilots; and what research has been undertaken to ascertain these figures. [87954]

Margaret Hodge: Independent evaluation of the education maintenance allowance scheme has been carried out by a consortium led by the Centre for Research in Social Policy. They have collected a great deal of data, including information on how young people spend their EMA, and this was included in the quantitative report on the first year of the scheme. The findings so far show that recipients of EMA are as likely as non-recipients to make a contribution to housekeeping costs, and more likely to pay towards the cost of transport, books and equipment for school. They spent no more than non-recipients on entertainment and were more likely to say that transport, books and equipment were their main item of expenditure.

Free School Meals

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he plans to change the criteria for qualification for free school meals; and if he will make a statement. [88270]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: During the passage of the Education Act 2002, the Secretary of State made it clear that she would protect the free school meals' entitlement of families who would otherwise lose this entitlement because they cease to be entitled to income support or income based jobseekers allowance and begin receiving child tax credits instead. The new system will be slightly more generous than the old system with around 75,000 more children from low income families eligible for free school meals from April 2003.

Language Teaching

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many primary schools in the UK teach languages; how many secondary schools do not teach languages; which languages are taught in schools; what proposals he has to increase the range of languages available; what teaching there is in schools on non-European languages; and if he will make a statement. [87367]

Mr. Miliband: A survey conducted by Warwick university estimated that around 20 per cent. of primary schools currently provide some form of language teaching.

Secondary schools are required to offer at least one of the working languages of the EU. When schools have met this requirement they are free to offer non-European languages.

Ofsted is not aware of any secondary schools that have no provision for language teaching.

We do not collect data on the number of languages taught in secondary schools. However, we are aware that overall around 20 languages are offered by 157 Specialist Language Colleges including Chinese, Japanese, Urdu and Gujerati.

Our Languages Strategy which was published on 18 December, sets out how we intend to improve the country's capabilities in language skills.

Ministerial Meetings

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he last attended a ministerial meeting with European Union Ministers for Education. [87008]

Margaret Hodge: My right hon. Friend has not yet attended a meeting of European Union Ministers for Education. I represented the Secretary of State at the most recent meeting of the EU Education Council which was held in Brussels on 12 November.

Plant Hire

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of employees in the plant hire industry who have received educational and other benefits from the facilities provided by the Construction Industry Training Board. [87319]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 18 December 2002]: During 2002 approximately 5,000 employees of plant hire companies received educational and other benefits through the Construction Industry Training Board.

Post-16 Funding

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research his Department has undertaken to ascertain the extent to which school sixth form and college access funds are used for (a) travel costs, (b) books and equipment and (c) other living costs. [87953]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Department for Education and Skills has commissioned a two-year study by the Institute of Employment Studies to evaluate the use and effectiveness of the learner support funds in further education institutions. The interim report was made available in April 2001 and can be accessed via the DfES website at: www.dfes.gov.uk (young people/further education funding support/report). Publication of the final report is expected in spring 2003.

The interim research found that 81 per cent. of further education institutions use learner support funds to subsidise travel costs. Around 40 per cent. of the available funding is spent on transport services and residential provision.

A total of 367,055 awards were made in 2000–01. The table shows the number of awards made against the three categories.

	Number of awards
Transport	83,714
Books and equipment	81,837
Other (inc. living/general)	37,474

Postcodes

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for (a) the collection and publication of data, (b) devising formulae for the distribution of grants and awards and (c) the delivery of services; and when such usages were last reviewed. [87746]

Mr. Miliband: Wherever possible, the Department and its agencies collect information on an on-going basis on the postcode of usual residence of individual learners and/or place of learning to facilitate the compilation of statistics on education and skills at various geographical levels—for example, local education authorities and coalfield areas. Some of these statistics are then used with others as a basis for funding allocations—for example, postcodes are used to obtain a measure of resident pupils, one factor in calculating Education Formula Spending Shares. The Department is fully committed to working closely with the Office for Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and others to produce better information for small areas. This will allow DfES and other Government Departments to develop and evaluate locally targeted policies and interventions as well as helping to tackle Neighbourhood Renewal.

Progress Files

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of secondary schools have used Progress Files for pupils aged 13 and over in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [87960]

Mr. Miliband: The proportion of secondary schools which have ordered Progress File materials for pupils aged 13 and over is approximately 25 per cent. in 2001–02 and 40 per cent. in 2002–03 academic years to date.

School Funding

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria will be used to allocate the new fund to assist schools applying for specialist status which have encountered difficulties in raising funds. [87195]

Mr. Miliband: My Department has not yet finalised the criteria for the allocation of the Partnership Fund. The criteria will be based around evidence that the school has made a real effort to raise sponsorship and that, although they have not been able to get the required level of private sector funding, the school has created other valuable links with businesses.

The full criteria for the allocation of the funds will be set out in due course.

School Transport

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will issue new guidelines to local education authorities on school transport contracts on overcrowding and use of seatbelts. [87402]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As my hon. Friend is aware, from 1 November 2001, seat-belts had to be fitted on all new minibuses, coaches and buses (apart from those specifically designed for urban use with standing passengers). There are no regulations governing the use of seat belts in buses. However, my Department's current guidance does refer to RoSPA's 1991 code of practice on school transport safety, and says that

> "LEAs should encourage contractors, drivers, parents, pupils and schools to observe the code, and especially its recommendation that seatbelts should be worn where fitted."

The Department has not issued guidelines to local education authorities on overcrowding. The regulations that govern seating and standing on all buses are the Public Service Vehicles (Carrying Capacity) Regulations 1984, the Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Fitness, Equipment, Use and Certification) Regulations 1981, as amended, and the Public Service Vehicles (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990. Enforcement of regulations relating to carrying capacity and safety of buses rests with the Police and the Vehicle Inspectorate. I am not aware of any prosecutions for overcrowding on services involving school transport.

We have no immediate plans to issue further guidance to LEAs on school transport at this stage.

Visually Impaired Children

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are in place to ensure that visually impaired children have access to adequate primary and secondary education; and what proposals he has to assist visually impaired children at school. [87362]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Responsibility for making suitable provision for children with special educational needs, including those with visual impairment, rests in the first instance with schools and local education authorities (LEAs). The nature and extent of provision is decided locally in the light of the circumstances and individual needs of each child. In making provision, schools and LEAs must have regard to the Department for Education and Skills (DfES), Special Educational Needs Code of Practice, which provides practical guidance to schools and LEAs on their responsibilities and promotes consistency of approach.

Since September 2002, LEAs and schools have had a duty to ensure that disabled pupils are not treated less favourably, without justification, than non-disabled pupils; and to make reasonable adjustments so that disabled pupils are not put at a substantial disadvantage to their non-disabled pupils. In England and Wales there is also a duty on LEAs and schools to plan strategically and make progress in increasing physical accessibility to schools' premises and to the curriculum. The DfES has issued guidance on the new duty, Accessible Schools: Planning to increase access to schools for disabled pupils.

Substantial funding has been provided, and continues to be provided under the Schools Access initiative to improve access for disabled children—£70 million in 2002–03, increasing to £100 million for each of the next three years, 2003–06.

In addition, in 2002–03 a total of £91 million was made available to LEAs and schools to support the needs of pupils with SEN and disabilities and vulnerable children from the DfES Standards Fund. The same level of funding will be available in 2003–04. The fund can be used for training, including training leading to mandatory qualification for teachers of pupils with visual impairment.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Accreditation

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department is doing to support the Government's policy on accreditation. [88092]

Mr. Denham: Under Sections 40 and 43 of the Police Reform Act 2002, it is now open to chief officers in all 43 police forces in England and Wales, and the British transport police, to set up a community safety accreditation scheme in their area. Individuals able to meet agreed high standards could then be accredited with certain low level police powers to enable them to tackle anti-social behaviour and environmental problems in the local communities where they work.

The setting up of such a scheme is entirely a matter for the chief officer concerned but a number are taking the necessary steps towards setting up a scheme in their area. In order to help them, and other interested parties, we shall shortly be putting some general accreditation guidance on the police reform website showing interested parties the kind of standards which will be necessary for accreditation.

We shall continue to show support for accreditation schemes by offering advice and guidance, as required. Towards the end of next year we plan to issue a code of practice based on the good practice that has developed.

Air Weapons

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce a licensing scheme for the purchase of air weapons. [87283]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We are considering a range of options for dealing with the problem of air weapon misuse. I hope shortly to be in a position to put forward proposals.

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will raise the age limit for the use of air weapons to 18 years. [87285]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We are considering a range of options for dealing with the problem of air weapon misuse including possible changes to existing age limits. I hope shortly to be in a position to put forward proposals.

Children's Rights

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the report on the UK by the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child. [86141]

Mr. Denham: We are currently considering the recommendations of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child. The Committee's recommendations are extremely wide-ranging, and relate to many aspects of Government policy. Lead Departments across Whitehall, together with the devolved Administrations, are considering how to take the Committee's comments into account in future work, and we will consider the Committee's recommendations carefully in developing our overarching strategy for children and young people.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent each local authority has used powers under Section 33 of the Police Act 1966 to help fund new community support officers; and how many such officers are employed. [86915]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 12 December 2002]: There was no Police Act for England and Wales in 1966. Over £19 million was made available for the recruitment of more than 1,000 Community Support Officers (CSOs) in England and Wales during this financial year.

Twenty seven police forces and authorities made bids for a share of this fund and we were able to offer some funding to all of them.

We continue to work with police forces and authorities to develop their implementation plans and are encouraging them to discuss with potential funding partners, such as local authorities, how further CSOs might be funded in the future.

At present there are 215 CSOs patrolling the streets of Westminster, Newham and Tower Hamlets. Lancashire Constabulary introduced 20 CSOs to their force area on 16 December.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 31 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. S. Pickup. [87657]

Mr. Blunkett: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 18 December 2002.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 4 November from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. Nazia Butt. [87659]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to my right hon. Friend, on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, on 12 December 2002.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 4 November from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Kahim Salam Mahmud. [87660]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to my right hon. Friend, on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, on 12 December 2002,

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 24 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Nisar Ahmed. [87661]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 17 December 2002.

Crime and Antisocial Behaviour

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what funding the Government have made available for community support officers in Lancashire since the initiative began; [86944]

(2) what steps he is taking to tackle crime and anti-social behaviour in Morecambe. [86945]

Mr. Denham: The Government is committed to tackling crime and anti- social behaviour. Morecambe, as part of the Lancaster Crime and Disorder Partnership, will benefit from the schemes designed to reduce crime and anti-social behaviour throughout the area. Morecambe has received £16,000 from the Safer Communities Initiative to fund an alleygating scheme in a crime hotspot to reduce access to the rears of both residential and commercial properties. The Small Retailers Scheme has provided £7,541 to provide such items as locks, grills and to improve lighting for 30 shops in the Morecambe area.

In August 2002 a street warden scheme providing 10 wardens was introduced to help tackle environmental and physical problems in the area, vehicle crime, anti-social behaviour and juvenile nuisance.

Lancashire Constabulary has made a successful bid for £946,477 to employ 72 community support officers by 31 March 2003. The posting of Community Safety Officers within Lancashire will be an operational matter for the Chief Constable to decide.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made in Chorley in the last 12 months; and which custody suites have been used. [87055]

Mr. Denham: Information on the number of arrests for notifiable offences is collected centrally at police force area level only. Available information shows that in 2001–02 (latest available) there were 41,715 arrests for notifiable offences within the Lancashire police force area.

According to Lancashire constabulary records, 2,848 persons were arrested in the Chorley borough of South Ribble, Lancashire in the year ending July 2002. Of these 88 per cent. were lodged at Leyland custody suite and 12 per cent. were lodged at Skelmersdale custody suite.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he is taking to tackle crime and anti-social behaviour in Chorley; [87028]

(2) what Government funding has been made available for community support officers in Chorley; and how many officers it has provided. [87054]

Mr. Denham: The Government is taking a number of steps to tackle crime and anti-social behaviour in all areas of the country. Lancashire is one of the forces involved in the street crime initiative. Other initiatives such as safer communities and the crime reduction programme have also made an important contribution.

The Police Reform Act 2002 contains a number of measures to address crime and anti-social behaviour, including changes to improve the effectiveness of Anti-Social Behaviour Orders and the creation of Community Support Officers (CSOs).

Lancashire Constabulary have made a successful bid for £946,477 to employ 72 community support officers by 31 March 2003.

In relation to the number of these CSOs who may work within Chorley, the posting of CSOs within Lancashire is an operational matter for the Chief Constable.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported crimes there were in the Chorley council area in the last three years, broken down by ward. [87053]

Mr. Denham: Numbers of crimes reported to the police are not collected centrally. Statistics of crimes recorded by the police in 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02 for six key offence groups have been collected for the Chorley Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP), and have been published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletins (HOSBs) 'Recorded Crime England and Wales, 12 months to March 2001' (HOSB 12/01) and 'Crime in England and Wales, 2001–02' (HOSB 07/02). The figures are given in the following table. Numbers of offences by ward are not collected centrally.

Numbers of key offences in Chorley CDRP, years ending March 2000, 2001 and 2002

Offence	Year end March 2000	Year end March 2001	Year end March 2002
Violence against the person	551	581	646
Sexual offences	38	47	49
Robbery	27	32	64
Burglary in a dwelling	526	492	780
Theft of a motor vehicle	464	414	413
Theft from a vehicle	700	837	872

It should be noted that the Lancashire constabulary adopted the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in August 2000, ahead of its national implementation in April 2002. The effect of the standard will be to increase the number of crimes counted, and so the figures given in the table will not be directly comparable between years.

Crime Figures (Lancaster)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported crimes there were in the Lancaster city council area in 2001, broken down by ward. [86981]

Mr. Denham: Numbers of crimes reported to the police are not collected centrally. Statistics of crimes recorded by the police in 2001–02 for six key offence groups have been collected for the Lancaster Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP), and have been published in 'Crime in England and Wales 2001/02' (Home Office Statistical Bulletin 7/02). The figures are given in the following table. Numbers of offences by ward are not collected centrally.

Numbers of key offences in Lancaster CDRP, year ending March 2002

	Number
Violence against the person	1,620
Sexual offences	91
Robbery	96
Burglary in a dwelling	853
Theft of a motor vehicle	368
Theft from a vehicle	1,212

It should be noted that the Lancashire Constabulary adopted the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in August 2000, ahead of its national implementation in April 2002. The effect of the standard will be to increase the number of crimes counted.

Crime Reduction Fund

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each initiative under the Crime Reduction Fund, indicating (a) the amount budgeted for each initiative and in total in 2001–02 and (b) the total expended for each initiative and in total in 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [84297]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 2 December 2002]: The total provision for the Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) in 2001–02 was £189 million (my previous answer to the hon. Member included also the amounts needed to complete the Crime Reduction Programme in 2002–03). Expenditure on the programme in 2001–02, totalled £149 million (with £37 million of the £40 million shortfall attributable to implementation of the Close Circuit Television initiative). In 2002–03, the total provision for the CRP is £111 million which includes the £40 million shortfall from 2001–02.

The information covering project grant evaluation and running costs on the CRP in 2001–02 is given in the table.

£000

	Delegated for provision for 2001–02[1]	Actual expenditure for 2001–02

CCTV Initiative[4]	101,308	70,523
Total[5, 6]	188,974	148,938

[1] Shows the amounts delegated to these initiatives in 2001–02. The figures for 2001–02 also take into account the effects of the Spending Review 2000 Settlement.
[2] Balance of funding transferred to the Department for Education and Skills for completion of programme.
[3] Funding reallocated to other projects
[4] Provision comes from the Capital Modernisation Fund. Includes £4.6 million for CCTV in police vehicles. Agreed end year flexibility of £37 million on the CCTV initiative in 2001–02 to be carried forward into 2002–03.
[5] The total figure excludes central and regional programme support costs, which are not allocated to particular initiatives.
[6] The provision for 2001–02 given in my previous reply to the hon. Member was £260 million, which also included the funding needed to roll out the rest of the CRP in 2002–03. The outturn for 2001–02 at £149 million and provision for 2002–03 at £111 million total £260 million.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each police force in each year since 1997, (a) the number of offences recorded broken down by major category, (b) the number and proportion of those offences that were cleared up, (c) the number of persons prosecuted for offences and (d) the number and proportion of such persons convicted of such offence. [86853]

Mr. Denham: The figures requested on recorded crimes and detections for the years up to 2000–01 are available in Chapter 2 of successive editions of the publication 'Criminal Statistics England and Wales', which are available in the Library. The 2001–02 figures are available in tables 7.02 and 8.03 of 'Crime in England and Wales 2001–02' (Home Office Statistical Bulletin 7/02), which is also available in the Library.

It should be noted that there was a change in counting rules for recorded crime on 1 April 1998, which increased the coverage of offences, and also placed a greater emphasis on counting crimes in terms of the number of victims. Recorded crime and detection data before and after this date are therefore not directly comparable.

There was a change in the counting rules for detections on 1 April 1999, in order to tighten up what could be counted as a detection. Figures for detections before and after this date will therefore not be directly comparable.

Some police forces adopted the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in advance of its national implementation in April 2002, and this will also have an effect on the numbers of offences recorded and detection rates.

The requested information on the number of defendants proceeded against, and the number and proportion found guilty, by offence group for notifiable offences by police force area for the years 1997 to 2001, has been placed in the Library. The proportion of defendants is based on a comparison between the number prosecuted and the number convicted. Some convictions will be in a different year to the initial prosecution in the magistrates court, which account for the figures greater than 100 per cent. given in the relevant table.

It should be noted that as the recorded crime and detection data relate to offences, and that the court data relate to offenders, they are not directly comparable.

Criminal Offences

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences were brought to justice in each of the Criminal Justice System areas in the last three years. [83676]

Mr. Blunkett: The requested information is available for all areas for 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02, although the figures for 2001–02 are, at this stage, provisional. The information is contained in the table.

[1] Offences brought to justice include TICs, cautions and convictions for notifiable offences

[2] 2002 Q1 figures are provisional (including estimates of shortfalls) and are subject to change. Hence 2001–02 figures are also provisional.

[3] Metropolitan area of London includes City of London.

[4] Staffordshire supplied only four weeks data from magistrates courts in 2000. Hence both 1999–2000 and 2000–01 figures include estimates of shortfalls.

Crown Court Juries

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effect of interference with juries on the outcome of prosecutions in the Crown court in the last five years. [82004]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 28 November 2002]: The possibility of jury interference has always been a matter of concern, particularly but by no means exclusively, in the context of trials relating to organised crime. There are several important legal measures already in force, designed to deal with jury interference.

The Crown Prosecution Service does not maintain records of the number of cases in which jury interference takes place, but in the last five years there have been instances of actual or feared jury interference that have resulted both in pre-trial arrangements whereby jury protection is put in place and trials which have been terminated before a jury has been able to reach a verdict. There have also been instances when jury interference has come to light after the jury's verdict has been returned.

The Criminal Justice Bill now before Parliament makes provision for the trial to be conducted without a jury either, on the application of the prosecution where there is a danger of jury tampering or where the judge discharges the jury because of jury tampering. The Government take the view that these measures will be a further strong and effective disincentive to jury tampering.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government's policy is on funding research into the prevalence of (a) child abuse in the home and (b) domestic violence that breaks down results by (i) family configuration and/or (ii) marital status. [86541]

Hilary Benn: The Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) conducts a wide range of social research, development, statistical economics and modelling work, all of which build up the evidence base, produce national statistics and support practical delivery of the Home Office's targets in all seven Home Office aims.

Priorities for R&D are considered as part of a three year rolling business plan built into the overall Home Office planning process and are based on the resource allocations agreed as part of the spending review. The need for research into the prevalence of these two types of violence will continue to be assessed within the context of overall R&D priorities for the department but both will stay high on the agenda due to their seriousness.

Examining Officers' Powers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to enable an examining officer to request from the owner of a ship or aircraft specified information even if that information has also been required by immigration officers; and if he will make a statement; [87501]

(2) what plans he has to improve accommodation for special branch officers at airports and ports, and to provide sufficient space to enable persons awaiting interview to sit and be interviewed in private; and if he will make a statement; [87500]

(3) what plans he has (a) to introduce induction and training for special advocates under the Terrorism Act 2000 and (b) to ensure special advocates receive properly prepared instructions; and if he will make a statement; [87495]

(4) what plans he has (a) to improve co-ordination between police forces providing special branch services at ports and airports and (b) to introduce a unified port and borders police force; and if he will make a statement; [87505]

(5) what plans he has to ensure that transport operators improve the accuracy of the manifesto of passengers they carry into the UK; and if he will make a statement; [87502]

(6) what plans he has to propose amendments to the Terrorism Act 2000 to make it a specific offence to be or to have been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [87499]

Mr. Denham: The issues raised by my hon. Friend are among the comments and recommendations made by the noble Lord Carlile of Berriew QC in his independent report on the operation of the Terrorism Act 2000, which was laid before both Houses of Parliament on 26 November.

I will be giving my full consideration to all of these proposals and I will be responding to Lord Carlile on the issues raised in the new year. I will of course report my response to the House.

Immigration

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many calls were received by the immigration reporting line; how many prosecutions resulted; and what the cost was of the service during the last 12 months for which figures are available. [87996]

Beverley Hughes: The trial of the confidential hotline ran from May to July 2002. A full evaluation of this trial has now taken place and following consultation recommendations are about to be put to Home Office Ministers. I am therefore unable to give further details at this time.

Once Ministers have had the opportunity to review the findings I will write again to the hon. Member.

Local Authority Finance

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was granted from each source of support within his Department to (a) Westminster City Council and (b) the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea, outside the revenue support grant settlement, in each year since 1997. [85827]

Beverley Hughes: The information is given in the table. The grants included are those paid solely to the councils except in the case of Drug Action Teams, the Crime Reduction Programme and the Partnership Development Fund. In those cases the council is a member of a partnership and funding is allocated to one ormore of the partners, for the benefit of the partnership as a whole.

Local Volunteer Development Organisations

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide funding for local volunteer development agencies to assist these organisations to register as an umbrella body to use the Criminal Records Bureau. [87249]

Hilary Benn: Since announcing, in February 2001, that higher level disclosure checks would be issued free of charge to volunteers, we have received representations from voluntary organisations requesting additional funding to meet their associated administrative costs. We have considered these representations very carefully but we are not persuaded that it would be appropriate for additional funding to be made available.

We are in discussions with the voluntary and community sectors to explore a range of access arrangements for using the disclosure service which might meet the needs of the organisations concerned in the most appropriate and cost effective manner.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of parliamentary written answers from his Department in the last session consisted of a promise to write to an hon. Member. [83784]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Office was asked 6,714 parliamentary written questions last session. Of these, 203, or three per cent. were given an "I will write" reply.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many parliamentary written questions last session were responded to within (a) a week, (b) two weeks and (c) three weeks. [83785]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Office was asked 6,714 parliamentary written questions last session. Of these, 2,613 were responded to within a week, 1,903 were answered within two weeks and 601 were answered within three weeks. We recognise that our performance in answering parliamentary questions is not as good as it should be, and we are working closely with directorates and its business change and IT partners to improve the situation.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) parliamentary questions and (b) letters from hon. Members in Session 2001–02 remain unanswered, broken down by those which are (i) one month old, (ii) two months old, (iii) three months old, (iv) four months old and (v) over six months old. [84804]

Beverley Hughes: [holding answer 3 December 2002]: The total number of letters received from hon. Members in the last session (2001—2002) was 26,769. The number that remain unanswered as at 6 December is 2,704.

	Number
Total received	26,769
Total unanswered	2,704
Less than one month old	641
One month old	415
Two months old	222
Three months old	210
Four months old	229
Five months old	177
Six months old	810

The Home Office receives a large amount of correspondence from hon. Members. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and his ministerial team attach the highest importance to the speed and quality of replies to ministerial correspondence, but we recognise that further work is needed to improve the current levels of performance. A number of important initiatives within the Department have helped drive up performance and we are committed to continuing and extending this work. A new computer-based correspondence tracking system will be introduced shortly which will radically change the way we handle letters and will help us produce more timely responses.

Most of the delays occur when responding to MPs' letters in relation to immigration cases, Whilst there is no doubt that the current performance is unacceptable, in many cases when a letter is received regarding an immigration case, it is necessary to locate the relevant file and get it to the person responding to the letter. The fact that cases are dealt with in various parts of the country adds to the difficulty. However, I have instigated further measures to resolve the backlog.

The Cabinet Office publishes annual reports to Parliament, setting out the volume of Members' correspondence received by departments. The report for 2001 was published on Friday 24 May. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library.

In accordance with the normal procedure, all outstanding parliamentary questions from the last session were answered before the session ended. Where a substantive answer was not available; honourable Members will receive a letter giving a full answer shortly, if they have not done so yet. A copy of all such letters will be placed in the Library.

Police

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were within the City of London and Metropolitan Police force areas, broken down by London borough (a) at the most recent time for which figures are available, (b) in May 1997 based on the old boundaries and (c) in May 1997 based on the new boundaries. [87095]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Information on the number of Metropolitan Police officers in each London Borough for May 1997 is not available. The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has provided data, set out in the table, on divisional strength on 31 December 1997 and 31 March 2002. The current London borough divisional structure did not exist in 1997. The figures in the table are those for the previous smaller divisions aggregated into their new borough divisions.

The effects of the boundary changes on 1 April 2000 were incorporated into the police funding formula in 2000–01 and the overall transfer was in terms of financial resources, not of officers.

I am advised by the Commissioner that around 470 MPS officers were seconded to the three boundary change forces on 1 April 2000 to give them time to recruit their own officers to police the former MPS areas now in these counties. These officers returned to the MPS over the next two years. There are now no MPS officers on secondment to Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey as a result of the boundary changes of 1 April 2000.

As it is for police authorities and chief officers of police to decide how resources are utilised, it is not possible to show what the strength for each London borough would have been in 1997 had the current territorial division structure been in place. Divisional strength in 1997 would have reflected operational priorities at the time. A sensible comparison between 1997 and 2002 cannot be made.

Information about police strength in the City of London Police's two territorial divisions has been provided by the Commissioner of the City of London Police (Mr. James Hart QPM). He is unable to provide information about divisional police strength in 1997. The City of London Police was unaffected by the boundary changes on 1 April 2000.

Police officers in the territorial divisions of both forces are, of course, supported by police officers in other operational roles, such as traffic, Serious Crime Group, Police Support Units and dogs and mounted sections. There are other officers in specialist squads such as fraud investigation and anti- terrorism duties.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the change in police (a) pay and (b) pension costs to be met by police authorities between 2002–03 and 2003–04. [87360]

Mr. Denham: It is for each police authority to estimate its projected changes in pay and pensions costs each year.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the whole-time equivalent police officer establishment was for (a) 1992, (b) 1997, (c) 2000 and (d) 2002, in each London borough, giving the percentage and actual variations in each case. [85829]

Mr. Denham: The information has been provided by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. The Metropolitan police is unable to provide establishments for each London borough in 1992, 1997 and 2000 as the current London borough divisional arrangement was only introduced after the boundary changes of 1 April 2000 with Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey. The figures shown are therefore the aggregate strength of the old divisions that now fall within the new London borough Divisions for 31 December in each of those years.

The effects of the Metropolitan police boundary changes on 1 April 2000 were incorporated into the police funding formula and the overall transfer between the forces was in terms of financial resources, not of officers. It is for police authorities and Chief Constables to decide how resources are utilised.

I am advised by the Commissioner that around 470 MPS officers were seconded to the three boundary change forces on 1 April 2000 to give them time to recruit their own officers to police the former MPS areas now in these counties. These officers returned to the MPS over the next two years. There are now no MPS officers on secondment to Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey as a result of the boundary changes of 1 April 2000.

Since 2001 each London borough has been provided with a Budgeted Strength (establishment), which is set by the Commissioner at the start of the financial year, and which the division aims to achieve by the end of the financial year. These borough establishments can be subject to change in the light of changes in circumstances.

The total strength of the Metropolitan police at 31 March 2002 was 26,223 officers, 1,345 more than in March 2001. At the same date the Metropolitan police employed 10,459 civilian support staff, 419 more than in March 2001.

Prisons

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been recalled to custody following a breach of a prison licence in each month since March 2001. [84302]

Hilary Benn [holding answer 2 December 2002]: Information on the number of people being recalled to custody following a breach of licence is given in the table.

	Ordinary licence	Home detention curfew (HDC)
2001
March	311	54
April	295	51
May	239	46
June	302	58
July	374	61
August	518	63
September	314	67
October	424	60
November	456	48
December	277	71

2002
January	695	62
February	429	66
March	490	64
April	364	78
May	547	117
June	465	147
July	506	154
August	569	166
September	591	148
October	700	153

A breach may be a non-compliance of a licence condition. However, consideration must be given primarily, to the element of risk to the public, regardless of an actual breach, that the offender presents in terms of his behaviour. If his behaviour pattern suggests that there may be further offending, and therefore there may be a risk to the public, then that too would be considered a breach.

Replica Firearms

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will prohibit the sale of replica firearms. [87284]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I am considering how we might improve controls on the possession of replica firearms.

Secure Units

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has for expanding (a) local authority secure units, (b) young offenders institutions and (c) secure training centres; and if he will make a statement. [85198]

Hilary Benn: The number of places in Local Authority Secure Units (LASUs) available to the Youth Justice Board (YJB) was increased by 60 during 2002–03. The Board has no plans to increase the number of LASU places further.

The Prison Service has made available a further 164 places to the YJB for juveniles during 2002–03. No decisions have been made whether or not to seek to continue this requirement during 2003–04, but the YJB has no plans to expand further the number of juvenile Young Offender Institution places.

Work on providing an additional 64 beds at Rainsbrook and Medway Secure Training Centres (STCS) has recently been completed. The number of places in STCs has therefore increased during 2002–03 from 130 to 194. The YJB is preparing a contract for the development of a new 80-bed Secure Training Centre at Milton Keynes which it hopes may be available in 2004–05. The Board's current plans are that those additional 80 places will substitute for non-STC places. No firm decisions have been made about any further expansion of the STC estate.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the forecast budget is for (a) local authority secure units, (b) young offenders institutions and (c) secure training centres in (i) 2002–03, (ii) 2003–04 and (iii) 2004–05. [85200]

Hilary Benn: The Home Office pays annual grant to the Youth Justice Board to meet the costs of the youth justice service in England and Wales, including the provision of juvenile secure accommodation. The Board's forecast expenditure in 2002–03 and its provisional budget for 2003–04, subject to final decisions on allocations following the Spending Review 2002 Settlement for secure accommodation, is as follows:

£ million

	2002–03	2003–04
Local authority secure units	56	53
Young offender institutions	155	161
Secure training centres[1]	38	59

[1] Includes capital

Details of provision for 2004–05 are not yet available following the Spending Review Settlement and are the subject of discussions between the Department and the board.

Spending Review

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for his Department (a) those Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 targets that were outstanding at the time of the statement on the Comprehensive Spending Review 2002, (b) progress on such targets since then and (c) the expected date when targets not yet achieved will be met. [87697]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The Home Office publishes progress against all its outstanding Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets in its Departmental Report. The Annual Report for 2001–02 (Cm 5406) was laid before Parliament in June, and is available on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk). The Home Office PSA targets for 2003–04 to 2005–06 are contained in the Spending Review White Paper published by the Treasury (Cm 5571).

Street Robberies

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many street robberies took place in the Greater London area during the last 12 months. [86826]

Mr. Denham: National statistics on recorded crime published in July showed that there were 53,547 robberies in the Metropolitan Police Force area between April 2001 and March 2002, which represented an increase of 31 per cent. compared to the previous year.

Figures published in October 2002, as part of the Street Crime Initiative, showed that there were 20,773 robberies between April and September 2002. This was 17 per cent. below the level recorded for the same period the previous year. There were 33 per cent. fewer robberies and snatch thefts in the Metropolitan Police in September 2002 when compared to January 2002, which was the month immediately preceding the onset of Operation Safer Streets.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households living in (a) Liverpool, (b) Birmingham, (c) Newcastle and (d) the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham who are in receipt of council tax benefit have had their benefit capped as a consequence of the council tax benefit restrictions in (i) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [85677]

Malcolm Wicks: Information is not available by local authority. The available information is in the table.

Fairground Safety

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many fatal accidents there have been at fairgrounds in each of the last 10 years; [85730]

(2) what changes in the regulation of fairground safety there have been since 2000; [85728]

(3) what plans he has for reforms of fairground safety. [86502]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The table sets out the numbers of fatal accidents over the last 10 years:

	Number of fatal accidents
1990–91	3
1991–92	[1]1
1992–93	0
1993–94	[1]1
1994–95	4

1999–2000	[1]1
2000–01	5
2001–02	[1]2

[1] Indicates a fatal accident to an employee.

Following a number of fatal accidents at fairground rides in 2000 the Health and Safety Commission (HSC)/ Executive (HSE) carried out a fundamental review of fairground safety, in consultation with the fairground industry.

The Review considered that the current regulatory regime is fit for purpose as a flexible framework for continuing to improve accident prevention. It is based on a sound framework of law and industry-specific guidance, receives high level of support from the leaders of industry, and has been shown to be enforceable by the Health and Safety Executive. If it is complied with fully, competently and diligently the risks of death and injury will be minimised.

However, the Review also recognised that reforms could be made to improve standards of safety in the fairground industry and made a number of recommendations to strengthen the existing regime including that inspectors should specialise more in relation to this industry. HSE has now established a National Fairground Inspection Team to improve consistency of approach and to use to the maximum the expertise and experience of the HSE Inspectors working in this area.

There are therefore are no immediate plans for further reforms of fairground safety. The Health and Safety Executive has acted upon recommendations contained in the fundamental review of fairground safety that reported to the Health and Safety Commission in September 2001. Additional legislative controls remain an option should there be deterioration in compliance with the existing regime or in accidents.

Access to Financial Services

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his Department's response to the recommendations in the report of Policy Action Team 14 on Access to Financial Services on the scope of the Social Fund. [85180]

Malcolm Wicks: We are committed to reducing social and financial exclusion and have given careful consideration to the recommendation of Policy Action Team 14 on extending the scope of Social Fund loans to people in low-paid employment.

The discretionary Social Fund provides grants and loans to help some of the neediest people in our society manage a wide range of unexpected or occasional costs. Over 1.2 million budgeting loans were made last year to people with the lowest incomes, receiving income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance. We have no current plans to extend access to budgeting loans to people with higher incomes as such help would be poorly targeted and potentially very costly.

We continue to keep all aspects of the fund under review.

Ageism

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proposals he has to tackle age discrimination in the workplace; and what options are open to older people who have been discriminated against without going to the courts. [87366]

Mr. McCartney: We have made a pledge to tackle age discrimination and we are committed to introducing age legislation covering employment, vocational training and guidance by 2006. Until the legislation is introduced there is no recourse to the courts. In the meantime older people who feel they have suffered discrimination in employment because of their age can encourage the employer to look at our website www.agepositive.gov.uk. This provides details about the business benefits of non-ageist employment practices, employer case studies, information about the forthcoming legislation and offers useful links to other organisations such as the Employers Forum on Age.

We have been vigorously promoting the benefits of age diversity and the recruitment, training and retention of older workers to employers through our Age Positive campaign. The campaign focuses on raising employers' awareness of the business case for an age diverse workforce and encourages them to use the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment to inform their employment policies. The campaign features a range of initiatives including awards events, conferences, good practice publications and guidance to promote age diversity, as well as the Age Positive website.

The Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment, published in 1999, sets out the standards for non-ageist approaches to recruitment, training, promotion, redundancy and retirement. An updated version of the Code of Practice was released during Age Positive week which ran from 2 to 6 December. The Code was developed with leading organisations including the CBI, TUC, the Employers Forum on Age and Age Concern. Evaluation shows that from 1999 to 2001 the number of companies using age in recruitment has already fallen from 27 per cent. to 13 per cent., and the number of companies having a policy against employing older workers has dropped from 14 per cent. to 7 per cent.

Appointments

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions to which bodies his Department makes appointments; how many members there are (a) in total and (b) in each body; and how many of those appointed are (i) businessmen, (ii) businessmen in SMEs and (iii) businessmen in micro-businesses. [87401]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office, on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 606W.

Benefits

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed (a) Jobseeker's Allowance, (b) child-related benefits, (c) winter fuel payments and (d) sickness-related benefits in (i) Somerset and (ii) South West England in each of the last five years. [82611]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the tables. Many benefit recipients fall within more than one category and there is therefore a degree of overlap between the figures.

Number of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance

	Somerset	South West Region
May 1998	7,109	82,437

Child Support Payments

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress is being made to speed up the introduction of the proposed changes to the method of calculating child support payments for (a) new and (b) current cases. [88154]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Duncan) on 27 November 2002, Official Report, column 317W.

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many departmental Christmas cards he and his Ministers intend to send in 2002; how much these cards will cost (a) to buy, (b) to post and (c) in staff time to sign, address and place in envelopes; and if he will place in the Library a sample copy of the official Christmas card he has sent this year. [88112]

Mr. McCartney: A total of 1,230 Christmas cards were purchased for our Ministers at a total cost of £1,619.34. All expenditure incurred in the purchase and despatch of official Christmas cards is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in Government Accounting. As it is Christmas, I have sent the hon. Member a Christmas card.

Civil Servants

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many civil servants are employed by his Department; and how much money was spent by his Department in the last 12 months, broken down by local authority area. [87179]

Mr. McCartney: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 17 December 2002, Official Report, column 608W.

Community Care Grant

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what change in real terms spending power was provided by the cash rise in the community care grant budget from 1997–1998 to 2002–03; and if he will make a statement. [85157]

Malcolm Wicks: The community care grant budget, previously frozen since 1994, has been increased four times since 1997. In 1997–98 the community care grant budget was £97[2] million, which in 2002–03 prices is equivalent to £109.2[1] million. The 2002–03 community care grant budget is £108[2] million, a drop of £1.2 million, or 1.1 per cent.

At the same time there has been a drop in the number of people receiving income-related benefits which give access to community care grants (Income Support, the Minimum Income Guarantee and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance. Between 1997–98 and 2000–01 the reduction was 9.9 per cent.[3] and a further fall in the numbers is forecast with an expected drop of 10.8 per cent. between 1997–98 and 2002–03[3]. As a result, the per capita amount available to people eligible for community care grants has risen by 10.8 per cent. in real terms.

[1] 'Real terms' refers to 2002–03 prices, calculated using HM Treasury's GDP deflator series, published on 27 November 2002. The GDP deflator for 2002–03 is a working assumption.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the standard of decision-making on community care grant applications. [85164]

Malcolm Wicks: We announced in the PBR that we will be working with the Treasury to improve Social Fund administration and delivery. We already have procedures in place which aim to drive though a continuous programme of improvement in all benefit decision making.

As part of the Department's national Decision Making and Appeals quality checking programme, a specialist Social Fund team monitors the quality of decision making on all elements of the Social Fund. The programme is complemented by local quality checks. The primary function of these procedures is to identify trends in decision making which require remedial action and inform staff training and guidance needs.

The Independent Review Service for the Social Fund (IRS) provides an impartial review for customers who are dissatisfied with the outcome of their application to the discretionary Social Fund, following an internal review by a DWP reviewing officer. Around 1 per cent. of decisions are referred to the IRS for review. In November 2001, the IRS published a report "Grants Budgets and Decision Making" which sought to explain the relatively high number of community care grant decisions which it was substituting. In response to the report, the Department has made further improvements to the Social Fund guidance for decision makers on prioritisation and budgetary control. The IRS also provides valuable feedback to local offices on the standard of decision making in every case it sees.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will change the rules and guidance for community care grants and crisis loans to ensure that applicants without (a) a cooker and (b) a bed are given a grant or loan. [85167]

Malcolm Wicks: The discretionary Social Fund provides people on low incomes with grants and loans to help them manage a wide range of unexpected or occasional costs, including the purchase of beds and cookers, depending on their individual circumstances.

On 27 November, we announced that from April 2003, £90 million will be added to the discretionary fund over the three years to 2005–06. This extra investment will enhance the fund's ability to help those on low incomes manage their finances.

We have already introduced a number of important changes to the Social Fund. We have simplified the budgeting loan scheme so that all applicants who satisfy the qualifying conditions, and have no outstanding Social Fund debt, will be offered a loan. We have also extended the qualifying conditions for community care grants to help people setting up home in the community who have been without a settled way of life.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend the eligibility for community care grants and budgeting loans from the Social Fund to people (a) whose sole income is (i) incapacity benefit and (ii) contribution based jobseekers allowance and (b) who are receiving the maximum child tax credit. [85168]

Malcolm Wicks: The discretionary Social Fund provides grants and loans to help some of the neediest people in our society manage a wide range of unexpected or occasional costs. Around 1.5 million community care grants and budgeting loans were made last year to people with the lowest incomes, receiving Income Support or income-based Jobseekers Allowance. We have taken the view that access to the discretionary Fund should not be extended to people with higher incomes as such help would be poorly targeted and potentially very costly.

We continue to keep all aspects of the Fund under review.

Crisis Loans

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the arrangements are for customers to apply for and receive a crisis loan when they live a long way from the office that decides upon crisis loan applications. [85290]

Malcolm Wicks: We recognise that crisis loan applicants normally require a same day service. Individual managers understand local problems and geography and are responsible for making suitable arrangements for the delivery of, and access to, all locally-administered benefits including the Social Fund.

Exceptionally, where a customer is unable to visit their local office, for example an elderly or disabled person with restricted mobility, or a person who lives a long way from the office and who has no access to suitable transport, they may contact the office by telephone to request a home visit. If the information given by the applicant indicates that a crisis loan is likely to be awarded, a visit may be made for the application to be completed and, where appropriate, the loan to be paid.

We believe that the current arrangements are sufficiently flexible to support a good standard of delivery to customers, regardless of their location.

Departmental Training

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of his Department's staff have been sent on (a) training days and (b) training weekends in the last 12 months; and what the total cost of this training has been. [88207]

Mr. McCartney: During the 12 month period ending March 2002, the most recent year for which these data are available, the Department spent £97.3 million on staff training and development. This equates to an average of just under £800 for each member of Staff in the Department.

The information on training undertaken at weekends is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Drug Addicts

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many former drug addicts are in paid employment. [86697]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information requested is not available.

We are committed to helping unemployed people who are taking positive steps to overcome their drug problem to move into work. Earlier this year, we introduced the Progress2work initiative to give recovering drug misusers the extra help they need to get into employment.

Progress2work provides specialist support to help recovering drug misusers also to make the best use of our welfare to work initiatives and move into jobs. It equips Jobcentre Plus staff with the skills and knowledge they need to better identify people whose drug misuse puts them at a disadvantage in the labour market, and refer them to appropriate provision.

We launched the first Progress2work projects in the spring, in 27 pathfinder areas throughout the country, including one in my hon. Friend's constituency. We are now extending the initiative to a further 36 areas and plan to roll out the programme nationally from next year.

Economic Inactivity

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people aged between 50 and state pension age were economically inactive in each year since 1998. [86661]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is in the table:

Year/quarter	Number of economically inactive people aged 50-State pension age	Percentage of 50-State pension age population

Employment Zones

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people have been helped into sustained employment via the Employment Zone scheme (a) in each year since its introduction and (b) broken down according to each employment zone; and what his definition of sustained employment is for this purpose; [85974]

(2) how much has been (a) budgeted and (b) spent on the Employment Zone scheme in each year since its introduction (i) in total and (ii) in each zone; and if he will make a statement. [85976]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: Between April 2000, when they were launched, and September 2002, Employment Zones have helped 29,144 people into work. Of these, 21,001 have been helped into sustained employment (i.e. jobs lasting more than 13 weeks).

Information on the number of people helped into sustained employment in each Employment Zone is in the following table. The majority of Contract 1 job outcomes have been notified to the Department. A large number of participants recruited onto Contract 2 remain on the programme. Their job outcomes will continue to be notified to, and validated by, the Department. The Contract 2 figures will, therefore, continue to increase.

Information on the total budget and expenditure on the Employment Zone initiative is as follows:

£ million

	Total budget	Total expenditure
2000–01	56.4	72.0
2001–02	87.0	[1]95.5
2002–03	91.3	Not yet available

These increases reflect a rise in the number of Employment Zone clients, and the high level of performance achieved by the zones.

Information on budgets and expenditure for individual Employment Zones cannot be published because they are commercially confidential. Both budget and expenditure figures include benefit equivalent payments made to participants while on the Employment Zone.

Based on the April 2000—June 2001 cohort study, the average cost per job in Employment Zones is around £3,400. The cohort study covers those people who have completed their time on the Employment Zone.

Health and Safety

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many inspections per band 3 inspector are made on average in the North West Division of the Health and Safety Executive each working week; and what proposals there are to increase the frequency of inspections, excluding complaint and accident investigations; [84775]

(2) what action has been taken to increase the inspection rate of principal inspectors and band 3 inspectors at the North West Division Office of the Health and Safety Executive. [84776]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: In the 25 working weeks between 7 April 2002—the start of the Health and Safety Executive's Field Operations Directorate's working year—and 28 September 2002—half-year stage—each band 3 operational inspector in HSE's North West Division made, on average, two inspection contacts per week. In addition, on average, each band 3 operational inspector made one investigation contact, one complaint follow-up contact and one enforcement contact per week.

These figures do not include any inspection or other contacts made by HSE's Construction Division or other operating directorates in the North West.

A number of actions have been taken to increase the contact time of band 3 inspectors in HSE's Field Operations Directorate and work continues to explore further steps. These actions will allow more work involving direct contact with duty-holders to take place; this includes investigation work as well as inspections. Actions being investigated or taken include: (i) enabling administrative staff to input data relating to inspection contacts; (ii) increasing direct administrative resource to support inspectors; (iii) providing better information on the work of inspectors to allow management support to be given to those who need it most and (iv) promulgating best practice by those inspectors who achieve the highest proportion of their time inspecting.

Principal Inspectors (band 2) are a management grade and are not set targets for inspection work. They carry out operational work according to need and for a number of reasons, including to remain familiar with work conditions and practices, to monitor the standards of their staff and to train new staff.

HSE does not measure, nor have a target for, the frequency of inspections to particular workplaces except for those where risks are highest. HSE targets most inspections according to hazard and risk. The Field Operations Directorate is currently investigating ways of increasing the proportion of time inspectors spend in contact with duty holders.

The role of an operational band 3 inspector is not limited to inspections: around 50 per cent. of their available time is spent dealing with reactive work, ie: incident and complaint investigation. In the first 25 weeks of 2002–03 operational band 3 inspectors in the North West Division made a total of 3,571 regulatory contacts, broken down as in the table:

	Inspection	Enforcement	RIDDOR investigation	Complaint follow-up	Others
Total contacts of type	1,539	517	875	402	238
Numbers per Band 3 Inspector per week	2	1	1	1	0.5

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what formal qualifications the (a) Director General and (b) Deputy Director General (Operations) of HSE have in health and safety management. [84779]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Following open competition, both appointments were made by the Health and Safety Commission and approved by the relevant Secretary of State. The principal requirements are the ability to direct and manage a large and complex organisation. Neither have specific health and safety management qualifications. However, they have access to advice on the management of health and safety issues from HSE's staff who collectively have comprehensive and authoritative expertise. I am advised that both are fully acquainted with health and safety legislation, to perform their official functions in HSE as well as management of the organization.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many companies were (a) investigated by the Health and Safety Executive and (b) convicted of health and safety offences in 2001–02 in (i) the North East and (ii) the UK; and what the average fine was for companies convicted of health and safety offences in each year from 1997–2002 in (A) the North East and (B) the UK. [86489]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The number of companies (a) investigated by the Health and Safety Executive and (b) convicted of health and safety offences in 2001–02 in (i) the North East and (ii) Great Britain is as follows.

	Companies investigated		Companies convicted
Year	North East	Great Britain	North East	Great Britain

The second and third columns of the table give figures for investigations of reports made under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases, and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995. In some of these companies more than one incident may have been investigated.

The average fine imposed on companies convicted of health and safety offences in each year from 1997–98 to 2001–02 in (A) the North East and (B) Great Britain is as follows:

Housing Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions under what circumstances a person making a fresh claim for housing benefit in one of the proposed pilot areas for housing benefit reform after the pilots have begun will receive less housing benefit than under the existing rules. [83955]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 28 November 2002]: The standard local housing allowance will provide a better, quicker service based on simpler, clearer rules, and will for the first time give tenants real choice over their housing decisions.

The standard allowance will be calculated on the same basis as the existing local reference rent. The scheme is therefore designed so that tenants should not be worse off than if they had claimed under the existing rules. In fact, current estimates suggest that around half of affected tenants will gain from the reforms when compared to the existing rules. Details of the scheme will be contained in regulations, which will be subject to the usual parliamentary scrutiny.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate (a) how many and (b) what percentage of housing benefit claimants' housing benefit entitlement meets less than 100 per cent. of their rent due, because of (i) income from employment, (ii) other income, (iii) rent restrictions, (iv) non-dependent deductions and (v) other reasons, broken down by (A) local authority (B) housing association, and (C) private sector tenu[illegible] [84360]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of Housing Benefit recipients whose benefit is currently reduced because of rent restrictions is not collected. However, based on the number of referrals made to the Rent Service, we estimate that in around 67 per cent. of cases, tenants in the deregulated private rented sector would have their rent restricted under the reference rent schemes or other property-based criteria if their Housing Benefit claims were successful.

The table shows the total number of Housing Benefit recipients by tenure type and the number and proportions of these who receive an amount less than their eligible rent, at May 2001. The eligible rent is the amount of rent which may be met by Housing Benefit after ineligible charges have been deducted and, in the case of tenants in the deregulated private rented sector, after any restrictions have been applied by the rent officer.

1. The data refer to households claiming Housing Benefit which may be a single person, a couple or a family. More than one benefit household can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Percentages refer to the percentage of all Housing Benefit recipients in each type of tenure and are rounded to one decimal place.
4. Figures exclude any Extended Payment cases.
5. Figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.
6. Figures are subject to a degree of sampling error.
7. The number of Housing Benefit recipients receiving less than their eligible rent for reasons other than those stated is negligible.
8. There may be some overlap in the figures, as recipients will be counted each time they fall into any of the three categories mentioned.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many claimants have been in receipt of incapacity benefit payment for (a) six months or less, (b) between six months and one year, (c) between one and two years and (d) between two and five years; what the average period of payment is for current claimants of incapacity benefit and what the comparable averages were in each year since 1997; how many people received incapacity benefit in each year since 1997; and how many of these represented new claims; [85978]

(2) how many new claimants of incapacity benefit in the last six months represented (a) transfers from other social security benefits, (b) people moving from employment onto benefit and (c) people moving onto benefit from unknown origins; [85979]

(3) how many people leaving incapacity benefit in the last six months represented (a) transfers to other social security benefits, (b) people moving from benefit into employment and (c) people moving off benefit to unknown destinations. [85980]

(4) what percentage of the working age population is in receipt of incapacity benefit; and what the comparable averages were in each year since 1997; [85981]

(5) how many claimants of incapacity benefit in the last six months had been in receipt of either (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) income support at any time during the previous 12 months. [85982]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The Green Paper "Pathways to Work: Helping People into Employment" (Cm 5690) sets out our strategy for enabling people with health problems and disabilities to move into work, and so become and remain independent. At the heart of this strategy is tailored and intensive support delivered in a new Choices Package, giving help to those with the clear potential to get back into work. These measures will be piloted from October 2003.

The available information is set out in the tables.

Number of people in Great Britain receiving Incapacity Benefit (IB) at 31 May 2002, by the duration of their IB claim

Duration of IB claim	Number

Notes:

1. Unlike Invalidity Benefit which it replaced on 13 April 1995 long term rate Incapacity Benefit is not payable to people over state pension age. This change contributed to the reduction in the numbers receiving Incapacity Benefit between 1995 and 2000. People who had reached pension age before 13 April and were in receipt of Incapacity Benefit were able to get Incapacity Benefit for up to five years beyond pension age.
2. "Non-linking" awards refer to periods of IB which do not link with a previous claim to IB, although they may link with statutory sick pay.
3. The figures include a small number of cases where the customer is resident overseas.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is on paying incapacity benefit for fixed terms; and if he will make a statement. [86662]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We have no plans to introduce fixed term awards of Incapacity Benefit. Entitlement is based, in the first instance, on an individual's contribution record and is determined thereafter by the Personal Capability Assessment, which is a functional test carried out periodically to assess an individual's ability to perform a range of every-day work-related activities.

We believe that people moving onto Incapacity Benefits should be regarded not as people at the end of their working lives, but people with working futures. Our Green Paper, "Pathways to Work: Helping people into employment" (Cm5690) sets out our strategy for enabling people on Incapacity Benefits to move into work, and so become and remain independent. From late October 2003, we will offer in pilot areas: early, more frequent support from skilled personal advisers; direct access to a range of comprehensive specialist programmes; and clear financial incentives to work.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate has been made of the proportion of incapacity benefit claimants who are also eligible for income support; and how many people in this category receive income support. [86733]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department has made no estimate of the proportion of people claiming incapacity benefit who would be eligible for income support. However, in May 2002, there were 1,026,500 people claiming incapacity benefit and also receiving income support.

Notes:

1. Figure is rounded to the nearest hundred and is subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Individual Learning Account

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what alternative arrangements have been made by his Department in respect of those persons on the New Deal who would previously have received assistance via the individual learning account scheme; and if he will make a statement. [85992]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The individual learning account (ILA) programme was open to everyone aged 19 or over in England. The overall aim was to widen participation in learning and to help individuals overcome the financial barriers to learning they may have faced. ILA support could be used for non job specific career learning.

The New Deals offer people looking for work job-focused learning and training opportunities, specifically tailored to meet their individual needs. We are providing New Deal clients with the knowledge and skills they need to compete effectively in the labour market and move into work.

The New Deal 50 plus offers clients help with training through a training grant. In January 2002 we doubled the grant to £1,500. Of this, the amount that can be used for non job specific career training was also doubled to £300.

Intermediate Labour Programmes

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many intermediate labour market programmes have received funding over the last five years; and how much they have received. [85702]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We have this year launched 20 StepUP pilots offering guaranteed jobs for up to 5,000 long-term unemployed people. We are investing £40 million in the first two years of the pilot programme. The StepUP pilots are testing the use of intermediate labour markets for those who have not found work through the New Deal. The evaluation of StepUP will provide reliable evidence about the cost effectiveness of this type of intervention, and will inform decisions on the wider use of transitional employment schemes in our welfare to work strategy.

Separately, some New Deal providers match New Deal monies with their own funds to create intermediate labour market opportunities for individual participants. Information on the number of such arrangements and the expenditure incurred is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) which local authority areas have been selected to receive additional points in respect of the Jobcentre Plus Job Entry Target set by his Department; what criteria were applied when selecting the areas; whom he consulted in respect of the selection; and if he will make a statement; [82508]

(2) what the criteria are by which additional points are scored in relation to the Jobcentre Plus Job Entry Target scheme; and if he will make a statement; [82511]

(3) what criteria he applied when determining the Jobcentre Plus Job Entry Target points score to be given to each type of priority client; and what guidance has been given to Jobcentre Plus staff on the way in which such clients should be prioritised in relation to (a) other priority client groups and (b) other clients. [82513]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [pursuant to his answer, 27 November 2002, Official Report, column 319W]: The Jobcentre Plus job entry targets help focus the agency's efforts and resources on helping those people on whom we want to target more support to move from welfare into work. They include lone parents, disabled people and those living in the most disadvantaged areas of the country.

The way in which Job Entry and additional point scores have been allocated sends clear signals about our priorities to all Jobcentre Plus managers and staff who have been informed about them in writing.

The 60 local authority areas attracting additional Job Entry point scores are in the table. These local authorities were chosen because they either have the highest unemployment rates or the highest minority ethnic populations. We consulted other Government Departments, the National Employment Panel and key stakeholders in deciding on these criteria.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many engagements were undertaken outside London (a) by him or his predecessor and (b) by Ministers in his Department in January (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [87344]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 16 December 2002, Official Report, column 608W.

New Deal

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people (a) aged (i) over 50 and (ii) under 30, and (b) people with disabilities have signed up to the New Deal in the Taunton Constituency. [83342]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information requested is in the table.

Cumulative number of participants in the New Deal in Taunton constituency

New Deal	Aged 50+	Aged under 30
Young People (from January 1998 to September 2002)	—	859
25 plus (from June 1998 to September 2002)	158	94
50 plus (from April 2000 to September 2002)	160	—
Lone Parents (from October 1998 to June 2002)	20	110

Note:

The numbers of participants in the New Deal for Disabled People and the New Deal for Partners are not available at constituency level.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of persons leaving (a) the gateway period and (b) each of the options in the New Deal entered (i) unsubsidised jobs and (ii) sustained jobs in each year since the establishment of the New Deal. [85988]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The tables show the proportion of all leavers from the New Deal for Young People and re-engineered New Deal 25 plus who move into sustained, unsubsidised jobs from the gateway stage of the programme and from each of the options. In addition to these job outcomes we know from survey findings that around two-thirds of young people who leave options for unknown destinations do, in fact, find work.

For the Employment Option of the New Deal for Young People in particular, the figures prior to 2002 reflect follow-up work with employers to confirm job outcomes. This exercise will be repeated for 2002 leavers and we expect the figure of 33 per cent. to be revised in line with previous years' figures.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parliamentary questions to his Department were not answered during the last parliamentary Session. [88208]

Maria Eagle: Out of over 4,000 parliamentary questions tabled during 2001–02, just 13 remained unanswered at the end of the Session. Of these, nine were tabled in the final week.

Retirement Ages

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 27 November, Official Report, column 321W, on retirement ages, what the average age of retirement is for (a) women, and (b) men, for (i) his Department's employees, and (ii) people who work in each of the executive agencies within his department. [88213]

Mr. McCartney: The average age of staff, by gender, retiring from the Department and from each of the executive agencies is shown in the following table.

Years

	Average age male	Average age female
DWP	61.2	62.4
Jobcentre Plus	61.0	62.1
The Pension Service	60.9	60.2
Child Support Agency	61.7	62.8
Appeals Service	64.0	60.0

SchlumbergerSema

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list (a) the key performance targets and (b) other performance measures, and the levels of performance against those measures, (c) the further quality improvement measures, (d) the contractual milestones agreed for each of the key improvement projects and (e) the other contractual improvements that have been secured in respect of SchlumbergerSema; and, for each of the last 12 months, on how many occasions a financial remedy has been applied to SchlumbergerSema, and how much on each of those occasions. [85382]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 12 December 2002]: A copy of the information requested has been placed in the Library.

Service credits for failure to meet contractual service level targets have been applied in each of the last 12 months. Precise details are commercial in confidence and not disclosed under part 2, paragraph 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

SERPS

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of recent trends in the number of people who are contracted out of SERPS and the State Second Pension; and if he will make a statement. [85567]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 5 December 2002]: The Department for Work and Pensions is in the process of preparing an analysis of NIRS2 data for the period 1996–97 to 2000–01 showing numbers of people contracting out of SERPS/S2P over this period. The results of this analysis will be contained in a report on "Second Tier Pension Provision" that is due to be published in the latter part of next year.

Social Fund

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the administrative costs of the Social Fund were in each of the last five financial years; and if he will make a statement. [82079]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available in the format requested. The Department now accounts for its administration and benefit expenditure by Strategic Objective, as set out in its Public Service Agreements (PSA), and by individual Requests for Resources (RfRs) as set out in the Departmental Estimates and Accounts.

Estimates of the cost of administering the Social Fund are available for 1997–98 and 1998–99 and these are shown in the table.

Financial year	Estimated Social Fund expenditure[1]
1997–98	1,047,000
1998–99	1,114,000

Note:

The estimated expenditure includes moneys spent on both administering the recovery of Social Fund loans as well as their payment.

Social Fund Repayments

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will commission research into the impact of Social Fund repayments on the (a) standard of living and (b) indebtedness of recipients of budgeting loans. [85151]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has already carried out qualitative research on the Social Fund which included the views of budgeting loan recipients on repayment rates. Findings from this research are published in the Department's Research Report Series, Report numbers 125 and 172, copies of which are available in the Library.

The Department's annual Families and Children Survey collects detailed information on families' and children's living standards and debt, including outstanding budgeting loans. Four reports are due to be published in the new year from the 2001 survey, one of which will focus on living standards and hardship issues. Copies of the reports will be placed in the Library as they are published.

War Pensions

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the £10 earnings disregard for war disablements pensioners in receipt of income support was last uprated; and what has been the cumulative increase in the retail price index since that date. [86311]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 December 2002]: Income Support is intended to help people whose resources are insufficient to meet their day-to-day living expenses. Any income that is available to meet those expenses is normally taken fully into account. However there is a special disregard in the income-related benefits in respect of War Disablement Pension which was increased from £5 to £10 in April 1990. In addition, payments made to war disabled pensioners for their attendance or mobility needs are also disregarded in the calculation of Income Support entitlement.

We believe that the current disregard strikes the right balance between acknowledging the special reasons for these pensions and prudent use of public funds.

Between April 1990 and October 2002 the percentage increase in the all items retail price index has been 42.2 per cent. Income Support allowances are generally uprated using the Rossi Index which has increased by 42.8 per cent. over the same period.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) persons and (b) households in the Wansbeck constituency will receive the winter fuel payment for 2002–03. [88159]

Mr. McCartney: Figures for winter 2002–03 are not yet available. However, last winter 18,200 people received a winter fuel payment in the Wansbeck constituency, and we expect this year's figure to be similar.

The exact number of households these people lived in is not available. However, 9,500 people received a £100 payment because they shared a household with at least one other eligible person, and the remaining 8,700 people each received a £200 payment.

Source:

Figures from Information and Analysis Directorate, using 100 per cent. extract from Matching, Intelligence and Data Analysis Service.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of extending the winter fuel payments to those under 16 years is; and what percentage this represents of the total social security budget. [88018]

Mr. McCartney: We estimate that the extra cost of extending Winter Fuel Payments to households which contain at least one child under the age of 16 in Great Britain would be in the region of £1.3 billion in 2002–03. This cost is based on the assumption that no one else in the household is entitled to the payment. The cost represents around 1.2 per cent. of estimated benefit expenditure in Great Britain in 2002–03.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people entitled to one or more backdated winter fuel payments as a result of the European Court decision have received one; and how many people are entitled to make a claim for a backdated payment, but have yet to do so. [88205]

Mr. McCartney: Estimates show that around 1.9 million people could have been eligible for backdated payments for the first three years of the scheme and about 1.2 million people have now been paid. There is no cut off dates for these retrospective payments.

It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the numbers who have not claimed because the estimate of those newly eligible was based on sample data. It is up to the individual, where a claim is necessary, to decide whether or not to make that claim.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many benefit claimants have been sanctioned because they have refused to take part in the pilot scheme to improve the literacy and numeracy skills of long-term unemployed people. [88216]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 December 2002]: Between September 2001 and April 2002, we piloted a number of approaches aimed at encouraging greater take up of basic skills provision by people claiming jobseeker's allowance. These included testing different mechanisms to identify those with basic skills needs, and the use of financial incentives and/or benefit sanctions to encourage the take up of training.

In north Nottinghamshire we piloted the use of benefit sanctions if a client refused an offer of training or left training early without good cause. In Leeds we combined the use of sanctions with financial incentives of £20 per week on top of their benefit for clients taking up training, and £100 for those achieving a basic skills qualification. In the two pilots, 1,623 clients had a possible basic skills need identified. Of these, 18 had sanctions applied, three because they failed to attend a basic skills assessment and 15 because they failed to attend training or left early without good cause.

Child Care

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to assist with child care arrangements to enable parents to take up employment; [87667]

(2) what plans his Department has to ease the transition from welfare to work for mothers with young children. [87668]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We believe that work is the best route out of poverty, but recognise that parents can face difficulties moving into work due to the demands of balancing their work, life and family responsibilities. That is why we are providing extra help to reduce these problems and allow parents to successfully move into work.

Help with child care costs for people looking for work is available across Great Britain through our welfare to work initiatives, such as the New Deal. For example, the New Deal for Lone Parents can provide assistance when participants attend training or take up part-time work. We are also enhancing the child care support available through Jobcentre Plus. From April 2003, a Childcare Partnership Manager will be established in every Jobcentre Plus district to ensure that jobseekers with children and their advisers have access to the latest information about child care in their area.

For lone parents who are moving into work of over 16 hours per week, the Working Families Tax Credit (and from April 2003 the Working Tax Credit) includes the Childcare Tax Credit which can pay for up to 70 per cent. of their child care costs. New Deal Personal Advisers can also use the Adviser Discretion Fund to help pay for advance child care deposits if the lone parent is unable to do so.

We have also recently announced an improved package of financial measures to help people make the transition into work. From October 2004 we will be introducing a new Job Grant to help people moving into a job after at least six months on benefit. Single people and couples without children will receive £100. A higher rate Grant of £250 will be paid to lone parents and to couples with children. This improved Job Grant will make a real difference in helping tide families over until their first wages are received.

In 1998 we launched our National Childcare Strategy for England. This aims to ensure that good quality, affordable child care for children up to age 14 (and 16 for children with special educational needs and disabilities) is available in every neighbourhood.

Since 1997, there has been a major expansion in child care provision. In England over 553,000 new child care places have been created, benefiting more than a million children. A number of Government programmes, including the Neighbourhood Childcare Initiative, are helping to extend provision in the most disadvantaged areas of the country. We are now also encouraging schools to provide and host a range of services, including child care, for the local community through our new Extended Schools programme. The 2002 Spending Review saw a doubling of child care funding to create a further 250,000 places, in new Children's Centres in disadvantaged areas and elsewhere, by 2006. This is on top of the existing target of creating new provision for 1.6 million children by 2004.

Responsibility for policy relating to the development of child care in Scotland and Wales is a matter for the devolved administrations.

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much will be spent on (a) entertaining, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) other festive activities this Christmas season by his Department and Government agencies answerable to his Department; and of this sum, how much will be spent in Ministers' (i) private offices and (ii) official residences. [88137]

Mr. McCartney: Public funds have not been used for entertaining and Christmas decorations in private offices. Christmas cards for Ministers to issue in their official capacity have been purchased at a cost of £1,619.34. Gathering information to answer for the rest of this Department could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, any expenditure incurred on decorations, entertainment and any other festive activities is strictly for official purposes only, and is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting". The Department has no official residences.

Disabled People

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to help disabled people back to work. [87669]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Disabled people can take part in the mainstream Jobcentre Plus employment and training programmes, and have full access to all its services. In addition, Jobcentre Plus has a range of specialist employment programmes to support disabled people who want to work. The Access to Work programme provides advice and practical help for disabled people with the additional employment costs, for example, in travelling to work, adapting the work place, obtaining special equipment and support workers, which result from disability. WORKSTEP provides job support to disabled people who face more complex barriers to finding and keeping work.

Our New Deal for Disabled People is the first national programme designed specifically to support people with health conditions and disabilities move into and keep jobs. Since the national extension of the programme began, it has helped over 6,000 people into jobs and nearly 28,000 have registered with job brokers to actively pursue employment. Disabled people can also take part in other Jobcentre Plus employment programmes, and have full access to all its services.

Our Green Paper, "Pathways to Work: Helping People into Employment' (Cm 5690), sets out our strategy for enabling people with health problems and disabilities to move into work, and so become and remain independent. From late October 2003, we will offer in pilot areas: early, more frequent support from skilled personal advisers; direct access to a range of comprehensive specialist programmes; and clear financial incentives to work.

Employment (Disability)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what financial assistance he makes available to specialist employment providers and agencies in the fields of (a) physical disability, (b) learning difficulties and (c) mental illness. [88331]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Jobcentre Plus has a range of specialist programmes for people with disabilities, providing support in finding, keeping and training for work. In order to deliver this provision, Jobcentre Plus contracts with a range of specialist providers through the access to work, work preparation, WORKSTEP and residential training programmes.

These programmes are available to people with all disabilities; however, in some parts of the country there are also programmes designed specifically for people with learning difficulties, brain injuries and muscular skeletal conditions.

Gas Pipes

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the gas mains network operated by Transco is over (a) 30, (b) 50 and (c) 75 years old. [87485]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I am informed by the Health and Safety Executive that detailed information is unavailable. However, it was estimated in September 2001, when HSE announced the accelerated iron mains replacement programme that most iron mains—about 60 per cent.—were over 40 years old; and some were over 100 years old.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment the Heath and Safety Executive has made of Transco's system of record keeping for the gas mains network; and if he will make a statement. [87487]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I am informed by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) that they have met with Transco to discuss their arrangements for data handling, the last occasion being 21 November 2002. Their arrangements have been subject to an internal audit. HSE have asked for an independent review of compliance with and the quality of the arrangements themselves.

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) decisions were made and (b) appeals were submitted in relation to the habitual residence test in respect of the area covered by the Brighton Phoenix, Brighton Pavilion and Hove Jobcentre Plus offices in each year between 1997 and 2001–02; and how many of the people who lost benefit in relation to the habitual residents test were UK citizens. [86119]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the table:

Habitual residency test (HRT) Brighton and Hove social security offices[1]

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02

Total number of appeals submitted against HRT decisions	67	32	43	12	15
Total number of UK citizens found to have no entitlement to benefit following an HRT decision[2]	74	116	57	44	60

[1] These offices make decisions on all HRT cases for claims made through Brighton Phoenix, Brighton Pavilion, Hove, Newhaven, Lewes and Brighton Regent Jobcentres. It is not possible to disaggregate the figures for individual Jobcentres.

[2] Figures include cases where the original decision has been upheld on appeal.

Jobcentres (Advertisements)

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in what circumstances names and addresses of employers advertising in jobcentres are withheld; and why. [87456]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Names and addresses of employers advertising in jobcentres are withheld from members of the public responding to the advertised vacancies in two circumstances:

where a job is advertised to work in a private household and the householder has requested that their home address is not immediately disclosed for reasons of safety and privacy, and;

where a job is notified by an employment agency acting on behalf of, or contracted to supply workers to, a third party employer. This is to ensure that jobseekers do not go directly to the end employer who has specifically commissioned the agency to act on their behalf.

Jobseekers Allowance

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been refused all Jobseekers Allowance payments after interview in the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion this represented of those interviewed. [86957]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available. All people claiming Jobseekers Allowance are required to attend an initial jobseeker's interview. However the data collected by the Department do not distinguish between decisions on entitlement made as a result of such an interview and those made at another stage, for example following the processing of the benefit application. Nor do the data distinguish between decisions on entitlement made at the start of a claim and those made during the course of a claim.

Lone Parents

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of lone parents are in work in (a) the Scottish Borders, (b) Scotland and (c) the UK. [85697]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the table:

Employment rate for lone parents

Area	Percentage
Scottish Borders	[1] Not available
Scotland	56.0
United Kingdom	53.3

[1] The sample size is too small to make a realistic estimate of the employment rate of lone parents in the Scottish Borders.

Notes:

1. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample of the population and estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.
2. Families with unknown economic status are excluded.

Maxwell Communications Pension Plan

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the outcome of his Department's discussions with representatives of the Maxwell Communications Pension Plan. [88315]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are aware of the difficulties surrounding the Maxwell Communications Pension Plan and sympathise with those affected.

We have had discussions with the Independent Trustee of the Plan, The Law Debenture Trust Corporation plc. The difficulties faced by the Plan are not connected to Maxwell's original fraud but reflect the subsequent performance of the pension fund in relation to the scheme's liabilities. As we have made clear to Law Debenture, this is an issue for the trustees, not the Government.

Medical Assessments

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what procedures are in place to assess the performance of doctors employed by Schlumberger Sema to carry out medical assessment of benefit applicants on behalf of Jobcentre Plus. [87301]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Doctors must demonstrate they have achieved a satisfactory standard before being approved by the Chief Medical Adviser to carry out assessments on behalf of the Department. Ongoing approval is dependent upon the doctor maintaining a satisfactory standard. We therefore have stringent procedures in place to assess their performance.

A doctor's work can be audited if their work is reported to be deficient or if they are subject to significant levels of complaint and, in addition, cases are randomly selected for audit on an ongoing monthly basis.

All complaints made regarding the manner or conduct of a doctor are investigated to ensure that examining doctors have followed the professional standards laid down by Medical Services, and consideration is given to any complaints made and their nature when reviewing the performance of individual doctors.

The Department and Medical Services also undertake a number of validation exercises to ensure that these systems are sufficiently robust and that the performance of doctors acting on behalf of the Department is effectively assessed.

New Deal

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many New Deal participants have found (a) employment and (b) sustained employment in the Civil Service in each year of the New Deal to date; which Government departments and agencies have employed New Deal participants; what the (i) number of employees and (ii) duration of employment were in each case; and what customised gateways have been established for Government Departments and agencies; [85985]

(2) how many New Deal participants found work in his Department (a) in the year to April 2000, (b) in the year to April 2001, (c) in the year to April 2002 and (d) in the most recent period for which figures are available. [87003]

Cabinet Office

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of the New Deal for Lone Parents. [87670]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The New Deal is delivering services tailored to meet the needs of individual lone parents and giving them the skills, support and confidence they need to move into work. By the end of September 2002, the New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP) had helped over 160,000 lone parents to find jobs. There has been on-going evaluation of the programme and a number of evaluation reports have been published and placed in the Library. A report of further evaluation concerning the quantitative impact of NDLP is due to be published in spring 2003.

NDLP is just one of many measures that we have introduced to help lone parents gain independence through moving into work. Together they have helped reduce the number of lone parents dependant on income support by over 15 per cent. since May 1997.

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of the effect the new deal has had on youth unemployment. [87671]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Since 1997, youth unemployment has fallen by more than a third and long-term youth unemployment has been reduced by nearly three-quarters. The new deal for young people has played an important part in this success, helping almost 400,000 young people off benefit and into jobs, and improving the work prospects of many more.

Independent research by the National Institute for Economic and Social Research found that the number of young people unemployed for six months or more would be twice as high without the new deal. It also found that the new deal had increased youth employment and had had a positive knock-on effect on employment among other age groups.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 377W, on the New Deal, what adjustment has been made to the Government's expenditure plans as a result of the difference between spending on the Environmental Task Force and the amount budgeted by the former Department for Education and Employment for the period 1998 to 2002; [88095]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 377W, on the New Deal, why details of expenditure on the Environment Task Force in 2001–02 are not yet available; when the figure will be made available; and if he will make a statement; [88096]

(3) pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 377W, if he will make a statement on the reasons for the difference in the number of young people participating in the Environment Task Force option and the target figure given by the former Department for Education and Employment in DfEE Press Release 009 of 1998. [88138]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Due to the strength of the economy and the success of the New Deal for Young People long-term youth unemployment has been virtually eradicated. The number of young people accessing New Deal opportunities has therefore been lower than was anticipated in 1998. This has also resulted in underspends against original planning assumptions for the programme. These underspends have been used to support other welfare to work initiatives. Environment Task Force opportunities and those on the other options continue to be available for New Deal clients who need this type of help to move into work.

The Department's accounts for 2001–02 are currently being finalised and are expected to be published early in 2003. The Environment Task Force expenditure figure will be available then.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 11 December 2002, Official Report, column 377W, on the new deal, (1) how many of the 6,800 young people who secured subsidised employment starts in the construction industry subsequently secured (a) unsubsidised employment and (b) unsubsidised sustained employment; and if he will make a statement; [88097]

(2) if he will make a statement on the reasons for the difference in the number of subsidised employment starts in the construction industry under the new deal and that predicted by the former Department for Education and Employment in DFEE Press Release 70 of 1998. [88098]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Due to the strength of the economy and the success of the new deal for young people long-term youth unemployment has been virtually eradicated. The number of young people accessing subsidised employment opportunities in the construction industry has therefore been lower than was anticipated in 1998. However, opportunities continue to be available for new deal clients who need help through subsidised employment to move into work.

We estimate that 6,800 people have started subsidised employment in the construction industry since 1998. Of these, around 3,000 subsequently moved into an unsubsidised job, some 2,800 of which were sustained. Information on the type of industry within which a subsidised job takes place is incomplete. It is likely, therefore, that these are underestimates of the number of people taking up work in the construction industry through the subsidised employment option of the new deal.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people on New Deal 25 Plus schemes (a) left after the initial advisory stage, (b) progressed to follow-through and (c) returned to claim jobseeker's allowance, in each year since 1997. [86678]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is in the tables. In April 2001, New Deal 25 plus was extended and enhanced, to provide a flexible, more individually-tailored service to help more long-term unemployed people find jobs and remain in them.

	1998[1]	1999	2000	2001	2002[2]

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to publish the evaluation of the New Deal for Lone Parents; and if he will make a statement. [85989]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The evaluation of the prototype of the New Deal for Lone Parents was published on 3 March 2000. Follow up reports and research on the national phase of the programme have been published since then, and new items of research are published as they are completed. We expect to publish a report, bringing together findings from all strands of the evaluation, in spring 2003.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of participants in the New Deal for Young People from Ethnic Minorities found (a) jobs and (b) sustained jobs in each year since 1997, broken down by ethnic group. [85984]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The information is in the tables.

Official Travel

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the total expenditure of (a) his Department and (b) its agencies was on official travelling in 2001–02; [84789]

(2) what the total budget of (a) his Department and (b) its agencies is for official travel in 2002–03. [84941]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 3 December 2002]: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Details of travel undertaken during the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 were published on 24 July 2002, Official Report, column 75W. The cost of Ministers' visits overseas for 2002–03 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year. Copies of the lists are available in the Library.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Library.

In respect of travel by officials of the Department, the figures for expenditure in 2001–02 and budget for 2002–03 are set out in the following table.

	£ million
Expenditure 2001–02
Total Department	61.4
Benefits Agency	19.0
Child Support Agency	3.8
The Appeals Service	0.6
Employment Service	23.6
Corporate Centre	14.4

	£ million
Budget 2002–03
Total Department	69.0
Jobcentre Plus	42.4
Child Support Agency	3.5
The Appeals Service	0.6
The Pension Service	4.0
Corporate Centre	18.5

Notes:

1. Following the significant restructuring of DWP the Benefits Agency discontinued its operations. Its functions dispersed between the newly formed agencies Jobcentre Plus and Pension Service, and the corporate centre. It is not possible therefore to make direct, like for like comparisons between expenditure and budget figures.
2. The Child Benefit Centre and Disability and Carer Services formerly within BA are, with effect from 1 April 2002, accounted within the DWP Corporate Centre. Pensions and Overseas Directorate and all work in ex-DSS relating to pensions is now carried out by The Pension Service. The remainder of BA and the Employment Service integrated to form Jobcentre Plus.
3. The Health and Safety Executive and Health and Safety Laboratory has recently moved into DWP under a machinery of Government change. The budget figures for HSE/HSL are not included.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parliamentary questions have been tabled to his Department for written answer on a named day since 1 October 2002; and what percentage received a substantive reply on the requested date. [86993]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 12 December 2002]: From 1 October, out of 675 questions tabled to my right hon. Friend for written answer, 246 questions were for answer on a named day up to and including 12 December. Of these, 154—63 per cent.—received a substantive reply on the named day. During the same period, the hon. Member tabled 74 questions to the Department, all of them for answer on a named day. Up to 12 December substantive replies had been issued in respect of 45 of them in an average time of 4.75 working days.

We are committed to providing hon. Members with timely and accurate answers to parliamentary questions, although where questions prompt further analysis it is not always possible to provide information to the named day deadlines.

Unemployment (Copeland)

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were unemployed in Copeland in (a) May 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available; what proposals he has to reduce that number; and if he will make a statement. [87142]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 16 December 2002]: Economic stability and active labour market programmes have helped people move from welfare to work in all parts of the country. As a result of our policies the number of people in work is at record levels and unemployment has fallen to levels not seen since the 1970s.

In my right hon. Friend's constituency, between May 1997 and October 2002 the number of people unemployed and claiming benefit fell from 2,784 to 1,382 (a reduction of 50 per cent.) and long term unemployment has fallen by 75 per cent. Over the same period the New Deal has helped over 1,800 people in Copeland into jobs.

We know that even within areas of prosperity there are pockets of persistent unemployment. That is why we have introduced additional measures—such as Action Teams for Jobs and Employment Zones—targeted on the most employment-deprived wards in the country.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) discussions his Department has held with the Treasury and (b) sanctions have been imposed on his Department in respect of his Department's performance in meeting targets set for its predecessor departments in public service agreements dating from (i) 1998 and (ii) 2000; and if he will make a statement. [88054]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 19 December 2002]: The Department has regular and ongoing discussions with the Treasury on its public service agreement targets and continues to make good progress towards meeting them, as reported in its Departmental Report for 2002 (Cm 5424), and in its Autumn Performance Report (Cm 5660). Therefore no sanctions have been imposed in respect of performance against any of my Department's or its predecessor's departmental targets.

State Pension

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have opted to defer receiving their state pension, and how many pensioners in total have received increments in each year since 1992. [88204]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested.

We estimate that around 3 per cent. of people who reached state pension age five years ago deferred claiming their basic state pension. On average, these individuals deferred their basic state pension for almost two years.

The table shows the number of pensioners receiving increments in each year.

	Thousands
March 2002	1,163.1
March 2001	1,193.6
March 2000	1,221.2

Notes:

1. Figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample.
2. Figures are in thousands and rounded to the nearest hundred.
3. Figures include own and inherited increments and all components.
4. Comparative figures are not available prior to September 1999.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on the latest March 2002 RP admin data and the Government Actuary's Department mid-year population estimates.
2. Figures are for Great Britain.

Tax Credits

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if the figures for tax credit expenditure in the benefits expenditure table at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/Table1 are gross and include all tax credit expenditure. [81950]

Malcolm Wicks: The figures for tax credits include all personal tax credits (Working Families Tax Credit, Disabled Person's Tax Credit, Children's Tax Credit, Working Tax Credit and Child Tax Credit) classified by the Office for National Statistics as public expenditure in the National Accounts. Further details on the classification of personal tax credits can be found in Box C2 of the 2002 Financial Statement and Budget Report (HC592).

Unemployment

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on progress on the target to halve unemployment among 18 to 24 year olds by 2010 throughout the European Union, set at the European Council's meeting in Lisbon. [88218]

Malcolm Wicks: There is no target for EU unemployment among 18 to 24 year olds. The Presidency Conclusions from the European Council held in Lisbon in March 2000 set a target that the number of 18 to 24 year olds with only lower secondary level education who are not in further education and training should be halved by 2010.

Three employment rate targets were agreed at Lisbon and Stockholm on total employment (70 per cent.), female employment (60 per cent.) and older worker employment (50 per cent.). The UK is one of the best performing member states in the EU, with one of the highest employment rates in the EU 15 (71.7 per cent. in the UK in 2001 compared with an EU average of 63.9 per cent.). The UK is one of only three member states to currently exceed all three of the 2010 employment targets.

The UK performs well in terms of young people as well, with the second highest youth employment rate at 56.9 per cent. in 2001, well above the EU 15 average of 40.7 per cent. This reflects the effectiveness of policies such as New Deal in helping young people in the UK to move from welfare to work. Current Eurostat figures show that between October 2000 and October 2001, unemployment in the EU for 15 to 24 year olds fell from 14.9 per cent. to a low of 14.7 per cent., before rising again to 15.1 per cent. in October 2002.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many men aged 60 to 64 received a winter fuel payment in each of the last two winters; and how many men in this age group have applied for a payment for this year. [88200]

Mr. McCartney: Around 1.1 million men aged 60 to 64 received winter fuel payments in each of the last two winters (2000–01 and 2001–02). This winter, men aged 60 to 64 will have received a winter fuel payment automatically if they were receiving a social security benefit (excluding child benefit, housing benefit and council tax benefit) in the qualifying week, or they had received a winter fuel payment last year and their circumstances had not changed. People who are not entitled to an automatic payment need to make a claim. We are currently unable to identify the number of men in this age group who have claimed so far this year, but we may be able to do so by May 2003 once the final administrative data is available.

Work Opportunities (Older People)

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress he has made in supporting work opportunities for older women. [83642]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 5 December 2002]: New Deal 50 plus offers personal advice, jobsearch help, and back to work financial support through an Employment Credit for clients on taking up either full-time or part- time work. We are ensuring that New Deal 50 plus offers effective back to work help for women over 50 by making partners, as well as the main benefit recipient, eligible for help through the programme. By October 2002, New Deal 50 plus had helped 26,780 women back into work—a third of all clients moving into work through the programme.

We are encouraging employers to realise the benefits of employing older workers through our Age Positive campaign. The campaign raises employer awareness through events, awards, initiatives, guidance and publications such as 'Good Practice in Recruiting and Retaining Older Workers' (DWP December 2001). We are also encouraging employers to adopt more flexible approaches to retirement to give individuals more choice and opportunity to stay in work longer. This can be important for those women who want to stay in work longer and also move from full-time to part-time work. The Green Paper on pensions, which we published on 17 December, includes proposals to support the development of flexible retirement. We will also reinforce our commitment to tackle age discrimination in employment by implementing age legislation covering employment and vocational training by 2006.

Earlier this month we had Age Positive Week which included a range of events to further raise awareness of the benefits of employing older men and women as part of an age diverse workforce. On 3 December we also launched an updated Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment, which includes a range of new good practice case studies for employers.

Our policies have contributed to a rise of 4.6 percentage points in the employment rate of women aged 50 to state pension age since 1997, to 65.6 per cent. This increase is greater than the increase in the overall employment rate of women, which stood at 69.7 per cent in spring 2002.

HEALTH

Abattoirs

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which abattoirs in the South-West have a licence to remove and test the spinal columns of animals slaughtered under the Beef Assurance Scheme. [85371]

Ms Blears [holding answer 9 December 2002]: All licensed abattoirs are permitted to slaughter Beef Assurance Scheme over 30 month cattle, provided they are willing to facilitate their testing for BSE. On receipt of a negative test result, the carcase must be sent to a licensed cutting plant that is separately licensed to remove the vertebral column and dorsal root ganglia before the meat is released for human consumption. All licensed cutting plants are free to apply to the Food Standards Agency for an additional licence to remove vertebral column. It is a simple process, no fee is charged, and all have been encouraged to apply. None has done so in the south-west peninsular.

Accident and Emergency Units

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what instructions his Department issued to acute trusts on planning bed allocations to reduce the length of waiting times in accident and emergency units. [87530]

Mr. Lammy: Creating more capacity in hospitals is key to reducing long waits to be admitted to a bed from accident and emergency. Over the last two years, the number of beds have increased, reversing a 40 year decline.

The Department has not issued any specific instructions to acute trusts regarding bed allocations to reduce the length of waiting times in accident and emergency departments.

As part of routine capacity planning each national health service trust needs to establish the levels of occupancy required for different specialties and types of care, depending on their own particular circumstances. Appropriate levels of occupancy will depend on a number of factors including specialty, the balance between emergency and planned admissions and the size of the hospital.

Acute Hospitals (Nurse Training)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS nurses are trained to deliver minor injury and assessment services in acute hospitals. [87537]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the number of nurses trained to deliver minor injury and assessment services is not collected centrally.

Acute Trusts (Nurses)

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level is of nurse understaffing in England's acute trusts. [87767]

Mr. Hutton: Levels of staffing are a matter for individual trusts. The three month vacancy rate is an indicator of the number of posts in their establishment which trusts are finding difficult to fill.

Information on the level of three month vacancies in acute trusts in England will be placed in the Library.

Between March 2001 and 2002 the three month vacancy rate for qualified nurses fell from 3.4 per cent., to 3.1 per cent. This is the second successive fall for nurse vacancies and shows that our recruitment and retention policies are bearing fruit.

Adult Placement Schemes

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received about the regulation of adult placement schemes; and if he will make a statement. [82049]

Jacqui Smith: We have recently received representations from the national association of adult placement services and others about the regulation of adult placement schemes. We have carried out a thorough review of these issues and intend to propose changes to the way in which both adult placement carers and the schemes that manage them are regulated. We will be consulting on this shortly.

Agency Nurses

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the figures for spending on agency nurses by the NHS in 2001–02 will be available. [85415]

Mr. Hutton: Fully validated information for spending on agency nurses by the national health service in 2001–02 will be available in February 2003. Information for 2000–01 is available and I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 7 November 2002, Official Report, column 538W.

Alcohol Reduction Strategy

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses he has received to the national alcohol reduction strategy consultation paper. [87578]

Ms Blears: 37 formal responses to the national alcohol harm reduction strategy had been received by the end of Tuesday 17 December 2002. The consultation began on 15 October 2002 and will run until 15 January 2003.

The Department of Health and the Cabinet Office strategy unit (COSU) have also held four regional consultation events in London, Newcastle, Manchester and Bristol to allow key stakeholders to discuss the issues and to put their views forward. Additionally, the COSU holds informal, on-going meetings with key stakeholders to ensure that their views can be fed into the work on the strategy at all stages of its development.

Antipsychotic Drugs

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the age-standardised prescription ratio was of (a) atypical and (b) typical antipsychotic drugs in each primary care trust area in each month during the period from 1 April to 31 October; and what the national averages were. [86370]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 9 December 2002]: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, information on the estimated number of prescription items dispensed in the community in England for antipsychotics by broad age group for the 28 strategic health authorities for April to September 2002 has been placed in the Library.

Assisted Dying

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the frequency of assisted dying in the UK in the last 10 years. [87034]

Mr. Lammy: We have no information about the frequency of assisted dying because it is an illegal act, if this means a deliberate intervention to end life. It is not for the Department to undertake any investigation into this matter, as this is a matter for the Criminal Justice Service.

Bed Availability (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were available within the Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust on (a) 2 December, (b) 11 December and (c) the most recent date for which he has information; and if he will make a statement. [88010]

Mr. Lammy: The daily situation reports by trusts do not list the total number of beds available within each hospital. The following answer therefore gives the number of beds that were not available on the days in question.

On 2 December, one ward at the Worcester Royal Hospital, with five unoccupied beds, was closed to admissions because of an outbreak of diarrhoea and vomiting (D&V), but it reopened during the day.

On 11 December, two wards were closed at the Alexandra Hospital, with five unoccupied beds, due to an outbreak of D&V.

On 17 December, the latest available date, six beds were closed due to staffing shortages at Worcester.

The bed closures should be seen in the overall context of some 900 beds (for all purposes) in the Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust. The West Midlands South Strategic Health Authority is working closely with and monitoring the performance of the trust under the normal processes of winter planning and situation reporting.

Blood Donations

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many years in retrospect the Government will ban recipients of blood from donating blood in the future; and when he will publish his findings on this issue. [86268]

Ms Blears: The Government's advisory committee on the microbiological safety of blood and tissues for transplantation asked the Department's economics and operational research division to assess the impact of excluding transfusion recipients from donating blood on possible secondary infections of variant CJD, assuming blood to be infective. This risk assessment is still in progress and consequently no decision has been taken into the possible exclusion of transfusion recipients giving blood.

Body Part Imports

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will extend the licensing regime for the importation of human body tissue to corpses and other body parts; and if he will make a statement. [87314]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 17 December 2002]: There are currently no formal controls on the import of human tissue to the United Kingdom for teaching, education, research or other non-therapeutic purposes. The Government are considering this matter as part of their current review of the law on human tissue and organs. As an interim measure, we published a draft code of practice on the import and export of human body parts, in July. Consultation on this ended in October and we shall publish a slightly revised code shortly.

Cancer Screening

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend screening programmes to forms of common cancers other than breast and cervical. [86573]

Ms Blears: The NHS Cancer Plan stated that the government would extend and roll out new screening programmes, where it is clear that screening reduces mortality.

The National Health Service breast screening programmes is being expanded to invite all women aged 65 to 70 by 2004.

On 5 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health reaffirmed his commitment to introduce a national screening programme for colorectal cancer. The national cancer director will be working with all the relevant experts to determine the best way forward, taking account of experience from the current pilots.

We are committed to introducing a screening programme for prostate cancer if an when screening and treatment techniques are sufficiently well developed. There is no evidence from any country that screening for prostate cancer saves lives, but his is kept constantly under review by the national screening committee.

Care Costs

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost per week is of (a) keeping a person in hospital and (b) keeping a person in a nursing home. [84807]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 3 December 2002]: The average cost per week in 2000–01 of keeping a person in hospital is calculated as £1,000 and of keeping that person in a nursing home is calculated as £384.

Care Homes (Insurance Cover)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide assistance to care homes whose (a) premiums for public and employer's liability insurance cover have risen significantly and (b) cover has been withdrawn; and if he will make a statement. [88040]

Jacqui Smith: Care home places are commissioned by local councils. The Department is aware that some providers have had difficulty in negotiating public and private employers liability insurance premiums, and has contributed evidence to a cross-Whitehall group which is looking into this issue. This has led to a review of the current employers' liabilities compulsory insurance announced in the Pre-Budget report.

Children in Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is reviewing public service agreements relating to the educational achievements of children in care. [84028]

Jacqui Smith: The social exclusion unit is currently reviewing the Government's public service agreement targets in consultation with the Department of Health, the Department for Education and Skills and other Departments with an interest. This review of current targets is part of the social exclusion unit's wider study into raising the educational attainment of young people in public care.

Children in Temporary Accommodation

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regular health checks are carried out on children living in temporary accommodation. [87186]

Jacqui Smith: Local primary care trusts are responsible for the timing, frequency and content of health checks in childhood. These will vary according to the needs of the individual child. There is, however, a recommended core programme contained in the publication "Health for all Children", which includes the number and content of health checks for children. This programme has been developed to maximise the capability of every child to have the opportunity to realise their full potential in terms of good health, well being and development and to assist primary health care teams to determine their approach. The core programme is currently under review.

Chiropody

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people received NHS chiropody services in each year from 1997 to 2002. [87678]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The number of people who received chiropody services was as follows:

Year	First contacts (thousands)
1996–97	2,420
1997–98	2,383
1998–99	2,381
1999–2000	2,321
2000–01	2,247
2001–02	2,278

Source:
Department of Health annual return KT23.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the National Institute for Clinical Excellence has issued guidance on chiropody services; and what plans the NICE has to issue guidance on NHS chiropody services in the future. [87679]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 17 December 2002]: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence has not issued guidance specifically on chiropody services and has no plans to issue such guidance in the near future.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what framework governs standards of provision of chiropody services in the NHS. [87682]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 17 December 2002]: Primary care trusts are responsible for planning and securing the provision of the totality of care and services that their population needs. The Health Professions Council is responsible for setting and maintaining standards of professional training, performance and conduct of the 12 health care professions that it regulates, including chiropody. National service frameworks may include standards relevant to the provision of chiropody services.

Community Initiatives

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community five-a-day initiatives have been established since the five pilot sites reported. [84014]

Ms Blears: The five-a-day local community initiatives aim to increase the consumption of fruit and vegetables by improving access and availability. Following the five pilot initiatives, there will be 66 new five-a-day local community initiatives, based in the most deprived areas of England, supported by the new opportunities fund. Grants for the first four initiatives have been awarded and grants for the other initiatives are currently under consideration. The majority of these programmes should be starting up from spring 2003.

In addition, initiatives to increase fruit and vegetable consumption may be funded through health action zones, sure start, healthy living centres and through general funding allocations to primary care trusts.

Continuing NHS Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that health authorities comply with guidance issued in booklet 252535 that a written care plan is to be given to patients or the family before they move out of an NHS hospital to a nursing home; [87543]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure, that strategic health authorities should determine whether there were patients who were wrongly refused funding for continuing care and make the necessary arrangements for reimbursing the costs they incurred unnecessarily and that health trusts reimburse self-funders and social services for costs incurred unnecessarily by social services clients and self-funding care home residents; [87546]

(3) if he will revise the paragraph, continuing NHS Health Care, in booklet 25253 to take account of R (Coughlan) v. N & E Devon HA CA July, 1999 and the Health Ombudsman's report E.208/99–00; [87541]

(4) what steps he is taking to ensure that health authorities and primary care trusts comply with guidance issued in the circular of 25 September HSC 2001/17: LAC (2001)26, page 31; [87542]

(5) what steps he is taking to ensure that health authorities and primary care trusts follow the Health Ombudsman's recommendations in her report E.208/99–00, that the new authority should review the eligibility criteria for funding continuing care to ensure that they are in line with the Coughlan judgment and other relevant guidance; [87544]

(6) what steps he is taking to ensure that health authorities and primary care trusts follow the Health Ombudsman's recommendations in her report E.208/99–00 that the strategic health authorities should determine whether there were any patients who were wrongly refused funding for continuing care and make the necessary arrangements for reimbursing the costs they incurred unnecessarily; [87545]

(7) what steps he is taking to ensure that health authorities and primary care trusts follow the health ombudsman's recommendations in her report E.208/99–00, that assessments of eligibility should include why the patient is considered to meet, or not to meet, all the criteria. [87540]

Jacqui Smith [holding answers 17 December 2002]: The Ombudsman's report referred to has not been published. It is therefore not possible to comment on the contents.

However, health authorities and subsequently strategic health authorities (StHAs) have reviewed their local criteria in line with the judgement in North and East Devon Health Authority ex parte Coughlan. The chief executive wrote to national health service chief executives about NHS continuing care over the summer. In the light of an earlier Ombudsman's case where an individual had been denied funding, he reminded them of the need to ensure that previous eligibility criteria did not deny patients NHS funded care to which they were entitled. In that case, the Ombudsman recommended that the eligibility criteria that had been in operation by the authority since April 1996 should be reviewed and that reimbursement of costs should be made to any patients found to have been refused funding incorrectly. StHAs have been asked to consider whether criteria in their area were at similar fault and whether other patients were also denied NHS funding of their care. The Department will be monitoring this as part of the process of reviewing StHA's criteria.

The Department does not consider there is any need to amend the wording of Appendix 6 of HSC 2001/17: LAC (2001) 26.

The leaflet, "NHS Funded Nursing Care—What it Means for You", is a guide to people living in or going into a care home providing nursing care, their families and carers. It is not statutory guidance. Separate guidance on the single assessment process asked the NHS and councils to carry out a joint, comprehensive old age assessment when individuals enter care homes or receive other intensive packages of care as part of continuing care, intermediate care or NHS funded nursing care. Local implementation teams for the national service framework for older people, covering all primary care trusts and councils, are required to oversee implementation of this guidance by April 2004.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 31 October 2002 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Andrew Evans. [86658]

Mr. Milburn: A reply was sent to the right hon. Member on 19 December 2002.

Denturism

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the legislative process for the legalisation of denturism will be completed; when he last met the General Dental Council to discuss this; and if he will make a statement. [87158]

Mr. Lammy: The Government plan to publish draft legislation reforming the regulation of dentistry in 2003. It is now discussing with interested groups in what form this legislation should provide for clinical dental technicians, or denturists, to undertake the practice of dentistry. I last met the president and registrar of the General Dental Council on 31 July when our discussions included the modernisation of the regulation of dentistry.

Christmas Expenses

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much will be spent on (a) entertaining, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) other festive activities this Christmas season by his Department and Government agencies answerable to his Department; and of this sum, how much will be spent in Ministers' (i) private offices and (ii) official residences. [88135]

Mr. Lammy: This information cannot be provided without disproportionate cost. Any expenditure incurred on entertaining, decorations and other festive activities is strictly for official purposes only, and is made in accordance with departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Electronic Patient Records

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS Trusts in the south west have introduced electronic patient records. [88006]

Ms Blears: There are no trusts in the south west which have fully introduced electronic patient records although most are in the process of implementation.

EU Food Supplements Directive

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers the Government has to modify the implementation plans for the EU Food Supplements Directive. [88183]

Ms Blears: The EU Food Supplements Directive came into force on 12 July 2002. The Government is not in a position to modify the timing of implementation, which is set out in Article 15 of the Directive. The Food Standards Agency, on behalf of the Government, is currently consulting on draft implementing Regulations, which are required to be in place by 31 July 2003.

Article 4(6) of the Directive enables member states to allow extended transitional arrangements in some circumstances; the draft Regulations would take advantage of this provision. Article 10 enables member states to require notification of products; the draft Regulations would not introduce a notification system.

Food Imports (Banned Substances)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on food imports which contain substances banned by the EU. [87119]

Ms Blears [holding answer 16 December 2002]: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that checks are carried out by local authorities and port health authorities on imported food from non-European Union countries to ensure compliance with the EU veterinary checks regime for food products of animal origin and under United Kingdom national legislation for food products of non-animal origin. In particular checks are made to ensure that where substances are specifically banned by EU legislation, appropriate action is taken to prevent them entering the human food chain.

Food Supplements

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the food supplements accepted as safe by the Food Standards Agency that will become illegal under EU law during 2003. [88176]

Ms Blears: There is no requirement under current United Kingdom legislation for food supplements to be assessed for safety before being placed on the market. As for other foods, the onus is on manufacturers to comply with food safety legislation, which is enforced by local authorities.

Directive 2002/46/EC on Food Supplements, which came into force on 12 July 2002, will, after a transitional period, require prior assessment of vitamin and mineral sources used in these products. Member states are obliged to transpose it into national legislation by 31 July 2003. The Food Standards Agency is currently consulting on draft implementing Regulations.

Implementation of the Directive will not immediately outlaw any products already on the UK market. The impact of the Directive on the future availability of products currently on the market will depend upon future developments on lists of permitted nutrients and on maximum levels of nutrients in food supplements.

Foster Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the success of the foster carer recruitment campaign launched in July 2000; and if he will make a statement. [83712]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave him on 25 November 2002, Official Report, column 136W.

GP Registers (Patient Removal)

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rules govern the right of doctors to remove patients from their registers. [83258]

Mr. Hutton: These are set out at paragraphs 9 and 9A of Schedule 2 to the NHS (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992 and direction 4 of the Directions to Health Authorities Concerning Patient Lists (Personal Medical Services) 1998.

Health Statistics

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are affected by (a) obesity, (b) depression, (c) coronary heart disease, (d) stroke and (e) poor nutrition, in each health authority; and if he will make a statement. [84184]

Ms Blears: According to the latest survey figures available, 21 per cent. of men and women in England are classified as obese; 3 per cent. of women and 2 per cent. of men reported a depressive episode in a selected one week period; 7.1 per cent. of men and 4.6 per cent. of women are classified as having ischaemic heart disease (angina or heart attack) and 8.5 per cent. of men and 6.2 per cent. of women as having ischaemic heart disease or stroke. The above figures are not available at health authority level. There is no recognised definition of "poor nutrition".

Homeless People

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of homeless people suffered from tuberculosis in each year since 1997. [87187]

Ms Blears: In the year 2001–02, there were 10 admissions for tuberculosis with a home address of no fixed abode. This totals 0.1 per cent. of admissions for all diseases with a home address of no fixed abode.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment his Department has carried out on the longevity of homeless people. [87188]

Ms Blears: No recent assessment has been made of the longevity of homeless people, although research by Crisis (1996) found that the life expectancy of someone who sleeps rough is 42 years.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of homeless people used accident and emergency units at hospitals in the last 12 months. [87190]

Ms Blears: The homeless people interviewed as part of the recent research carried out by Crisis (December 2002) found that homeless people were over four times more likely than the general public to turn to accident and emergency when they could not access a general practitioner, 43 per cent., compared to 10 per cent.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of homeless people suffered from (a) chest infections (b) leg sores and (c) asthma in the last 12 months. [87191]

Ms Blears: In the year 2001–02, there were 46 admissions for asthma and 75 admissions for chest infections with a home address of no fixed abode. Data are not available for leg sores. This totals 0.6 per cent. and 1 per cent. of admissions for all diseases with a home address of no fixed abode for asthma and chest infections respectively.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in NHS hospitals are homeless, broken down by health authority. [87202]

Ms Blears: In the year 2001–02 there were 7,620 admissions with a home address of 'No Fixed Abode'. A breakdown by health authority is shown in the table.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that homeless people are able to register with a general practitioner; [87205]

(2) if it is his Department's policy to encourage homeless people to register permanently with a general practitioner. [87189]

Mr. Hutton: National Health Service medical primary care services are available free to all persons who are ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom, including those who are homeless. To that end patients do not need a permanent address to register with a general practitioner.

Primary care trusts can also provide targeted primary care services for homeless people through a tailored personal medical services contract, or general medical services local development scheme or through provision of a walk-in service.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of homeless people suffered from diabetes in the last 12 months. [87208]

Ms Blears: In the year 2001–02, there were 46 admissions for diabetes with a home address of no fixed abode. This totals 0.6 per cent. of admissions for all diseases with a home address of no fixed abode.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients whose address was listed as no fixed abode were admitted to NHS hospitals between (a) December 1998 and January 1999, (b) December 1997 and January 1998, and (c) December 1996 and January 1997. [87209]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of patients admitted to national health service hospitals between December 1996 and January 1999 with an address listed as no fixed abode is shown in the table.

Year	Number of patients
December 1996-January 1997	557
December 1997-January 1998	758
December 1998-January 1999	895

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the dates since 1997 when he and his officials have met representatives of homeless charities and voluntary organisations to discuss the health needs of homeless people. [87446]

Ms Blears: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and officials have had numerous meetings with charitable and voluntary organisations since his appointment in October 1999. These meetings have discussed a range of topics including health issues which affect homeless people.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage a greater take-up of GP services by homeless people. [87473]

Mr. Hutton: National health service medical primary care services are available free to everyone who is ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom, including anyone who is homeless. We have in place a range of initiatives to improve access to general practitioner services for homeless people. These include the development of a model general medical service local development scheme for primary care trusts to use to develop such and the promotion of locally agreed personal medical services (PMS) contracts with a similar focus. There are now more than 80 PMS pilot schemes, which include the homeless as a priority objective.

Medical Personnel

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) administrative, (b) managerial, (c) clerical and (d) other non-practicing medical personnel are employed in (i) the Department of Health, (ii) national health NDPBs, (iii) health trusts, (iv) PCTs and (v) hospitals. [81260]

Mr. Hutton: Information available is shown in the tables.

The national health service, the Department of Health and non-departmental public bodies have different definitions for management, administrative and clerical staff, they have been combined for comparison in the table 1 and are shown separately in table 2 for the NHS.

Non-practising medical personnel are not separately identifiable within the non-medical workforce census.

Merseyside Regional Ambulance Service

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the remuneration package of the previous chief executive of Merseyside regional ambulance service, Mr. Todhunter, was not published in the MRAS 2001–02 annual report; and what his remuneration package was, including payments related to his termination of employment. [82995]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 November 2002]: The information pertaining to the former chief executive was not published because he refused his consent to publication. The following information was published in the trust's 2000–01 annual report:

£ thousand

Chief Executive's Remuneration	2000–01	1999–00
Basic remuneration	76	74
Benefits	8	6
Performance related bonuses	0	5
Pension contributions	4	3
Total	88	88

The Mersey regional ambulance service NHS trust chief executive, Mr. David Todhunter, resigned in May 2001. The trust has discharged its contractual responsibilities to Mr. Todhunter amounting to £42,684. This payment relates to the financial year 2001–02.

Mixed-sex Wards

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he measures the number of mixed-sex wards in NHS trusts; and how many mixed-sex wards there are in (a) each region and (b) England. [86875]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 December 2002]: The information requested is not available in this format, as the provision of single-sex accommodation is measured on a trust by trust basis and not at individual ward level.

Most hospital wards generally care for both men and women. To provide the required levels of privacy and dignity for patients, wards are split into single sex bays or single rooms, or otherwise configured to provide gender segregation. It is the responsibility of each national health service trust to determine the most appropriate configuration to meet their specific requirements.

NHS Dentistry (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists are accepting NHS patients in (a) Shrewsbury and Atcham and (b) Shropshire. [87420]

Mr. Lammy: There is currently one general dental services practice in Shrewsbury and Atcham willing to accept children and some charge-exempt adults as new National Health Service patients. In Shropshire, including Telford and Wrekin, there are five practices willing to accept charge-exempt adults and children and four practices accepting children only.

NHS Direct

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much training is provided to those manning the call centre of NHS Direct. [86066]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 10 December 2002]: There has and continues to be a significant investment in staff development at NHS Direct.

NHS Direct nurses must have a minimum of three years post registered qualifications before starting with NHS Direct. In addition, this will involve a period of four to six weeks' induction training followed by a period of on-line preceptorship.

NHS Direct also is committed to on-going training and professional development. This involves an allocation for training each year of 21 days for nurses, 16 days for health information advisers and 11 days for call handlers.

NHS Professionals

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to date of NHS Professionals. [85299]

Mr. Hutton: The cost to date of NHS Professionals has been £4 million to support the start up in 2000–01, £3 million in 2001–02 and a further £2 million in 2002–03 to support roll out.

It is expected that NHS Professionals will be self-funding in the longer term, but central funding has been provided to support start up and initial implementation of NHS Professionals as the primary provider of temporary healthcare professionals within the national health service.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 December 2002, Official Report, column 303W, on NHS Professionals, whether the findings of the assessment team will be (a) published and (b) placed in the Library. [87934]

Mr. Hutton: The assessment is part of the internal and on-going project management process for implementing NHS Professionals. The outcomes will be shared with those involved in implementing NHS Professionals, including strategic health authorities, work force development confederations and national health service employers.

NHS Staff

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS (a) doctors and (b) nurses there were in each year since 1992. [87418]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Between 1997 and 2001 the number of doctors, excluding general practitioner retainers, employed in the national health service increased by 9,550, or 10.7 per cent., from 89,620 to 99,170.

Between September 1997 and 2001 the number of nurses employed in the NHS increased by 31,520, or 10 per cent., from 318,860 to 350,380. This compares to the decrease of nearly 5,000, or 1.5 per cent., between 1992 and 1997.

[3] Other Practitioners include Assistants, Restricted Principals, Salaried Doctors (para. 52 SFA) and PMS Other GPs.
[4] Practice nurse headcount information was estimated in 1992, 1993, 1998 and 1999. Underlying figures for 2000 suggest the practice nurse figure may be an overestimate.

Nurse Training

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people left early from courses leading to a nursing qualification in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001. [82575]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 November 2002]: 1,503 students left early from courses leading to a nursing qualification between January and December 2000, the last complete year for which information is available. A further 400 students left early from courses between January and March 2001.

Overseas Nurse Advice Line

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department (a) has spent and (b) plans to spend next year in advertising the NHS overseas nurses advice line; and what form this advertising will take. [87469]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service overseas nurses advice line has been advertised through various means, including a press launch in September which channelled information about the line to the NHS and the independent sector. Articles on the NHS overseas nurses advice line have also appeared in the nursing press and the Chief Nursing Officer has highlighted the advice line in bulletins and through quarterly briefing meetings with nursing directors and primary care trust lead nurses.

A total of £2,273.62 has been spent this year on the production of cards publishing the advice line and these cards have been distributed by national organisations, including the Royal College of Nursing and Unison. In addition, the Philippine overseas employment administration also distributes the cards free of charge to their nurses and in the new year the Nursing and Midwifery Council will be issue cards to overseas representatives.

A decision on the advertising budget has yet to be decided and this will be in light of the likely future demand.

Patient Deregistration

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will ensure that GPs give written reasons why a patient is deregistered; and if he will make a statement. [86164]

Mr. Hutton: Although there is currently no legal requirement for a general practitioner (GP) to give a written reason why a patient is deregistered, the General Medical Council's guidance, Good Medical Practice, says that GPs should as far as possible give reasons for the removal. The Department fully supports this advice and the rules and procedures which allow GPs to remove patients from their lists are being reviewed as part of the process for negotiating a new general medical services contract.

Personal Medical Services

Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the contact details and objectives of the personal medical services pilot schemes in each primary care trust that were established from (a) April 2001, (b) October 2001, (c) April 2002 and (d) October 2002. [83913]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested will be placed in the Library.

Port Medical Units

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the last 12 months who came to the UK and resided for more than six months (a) received and (b) did not receive a medical screening on arrival at port of entry. [86742]

Ms Blears: Home Office statistics show that in 2001, the most recent year for which figures are available, 483,000 people subject to immigration control were granted leave at ports of entry in England to enter the United Kingdom for more than six months.

Long-standing policy is that any person subject to immigration control who:

(i) mentions health or medical treatment as a reason for coming to the United Kingdom, or appears unwell; or

(ii) is seeking leave to enter the United Kingdom for six months or more and is at high risk of having been exposed to tuberculosis should be referred by the immigration officer to a medical inspector.

Figures are not available on the number of people who meet one or both of the two criteria above, and statistics on the number of referrals to medical inspectors are not routinely collected from all ports of entry. However, four ports handled over 94 per cent. of entrants arriving in England in 2001 and seeking leave to enter the UK for six months or more. The health control units at those ports have provided the figures for referrals given in the table. In addition, for some visa nationals, medical referrals are made at the overseas post rather than the port of entry.

Port	Entrants granted leave to enter for six months or more[1]	Referrals to medical inspectors[2]
Heathrow	343,000	141,072
Gatwick	57,500	6,101
Manchester	21,500	2,774
Dover (including Channel Tunnel)	32,700	265

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical staff were employed in each port medical unit in each of the last 10 years; and how many were (a) doctors and (b) nurses. [86744]

Ms Blears: We do not routinely collect data on staff in medical units at all ports of entry in England. However, four ports handled over 94 per cent. of entrants arriving in England in 2001 and seeking leave to enter the United Kingdom for six months or more. The health control units at those ports have provided the figures in the table. These do not include figures for other support staff.

Poultry Imports

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who carries out tests for furazolidone in turkeys impounded at border inspection posts in the EU; whether such tests are conducted on all poultry imported from Brazil; how much such tests cost; how many birds for food were imported into this country from Brazil in each year since 1997; and how many tested positive for furazolidone. [87118]

Ms Blears [holding answer 16 December 2002]: The Food Standards Agency set up a testing system for nitrofurans in poultry meat from Brazil. Staff at the border inspection posts are responsible for operation of the system. All consignments of poultry meat from Brazil must be analysed. The cost of the tests varies among the laboratories which carry out the testing. The cost per sample varies from £220 to £600. We have no information on how many birds have been imported each year from Brazil since 1997. Since the testing regime was introduced in October 2002, 192 consignments have been analysed and none have tested positive for furazolidone.

Prisons (Health Needs Assessment)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the prisons that have not completed a health needs assessment. [87445]

Jacqui Smith: All prisons have completed a health needs assessment, working with their local National Health Service partners.

Prosecutions (Contaminated Blood)

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to protect doctors in the UK from being prosecuted for prescribing contaminated blood. [86266]

Ms Blears: The Consumer Protection Act 1987 was enacted by Parliament in compliance with the United Kingdom's obligations under the EU Product Liability Directive 85/374/EEC. The Act imposes strict liability on manufacturers. All blood and blood products issued to hospitals by the National Blood Service (NBS), are classed as falling within this Act. The NBS is therefore liable, not the doctor, should a patient develop a proven transfusion transmitted infection or any other adverse outcome that can be related to the quality of the blood or component transfused. Neither is the doctor liable if he prescribes any other licensed blood product not supplied by the NBS provided it is licensed for use in the UK.

School-age Workers

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of each of the current LEA byelaws on the employment of school age children. [82425]

Jacqui Smith: Local authority byelaws are a matter of public record and anyone wishing to obtain a copy may do so from the authority concerned. It is not normal practice to include individual byelaws in the Library.

Secure Beds

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) high secure beds, (b) medium secure beds, (c) low secure beds and (d) long-term secure beds there were in each year since 1997. [87439]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the tables. The long-term secure bed numbers are included in these figures, but not separately identified in routine data collection.

High secure beds

Year	Number
1997	1,374
1998	1,366
1999	1,320
2000	1,290
2001	1,263
2002	1,244

Estimated number of medium and other secure beds[1]

Year	Medium	Other
1997–98	1,493	986
1998–99	1,642	1,032
1999–2000	1,994	1,191
2000–01	2,231	1,353
2001–02	[2]	[2]

[1] Bed numbers are calculated from health authority returns of occupied bed days and assuming a 95 per cent. occupancy rate.

Specialist Register (Overseas Applicants)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of scrutiny of training will apply to overseas applicants to join the UK specialist register. [87754]

Mr. Hutton: All doctors applying to join the specialist register must meet certain standards. For doctors possessing a specialist qualification awarded overseas, the qualification must be equivalent to the United Kingdom qualification, in specialties for which the UK itself awards a qualification, or, for all other specialties, give the doctor the knowledge and skill consistent with practice as a consultant in that specialty in the national health service. These requirements are set by the European Specialist Medical Qualifications Order 1995.

It is the job of the specialist training authority of the Medical Royal Colleges (STA) to assess whether these standards are met in individual cases. We are proposing to replace the STA with a new body, the postgraduate medical education and training board, under legislation we hope to bring before the House in the new year.

Surgical Specialties

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to increase the number of additional funded Higher Surgical Training next year; [87753]

(2) what plans he has to increase the number of consultants in surgical specialities. [87892]

Mr. Hutton: As at March 2002, there were 4,969 consultants within the surgical group, which represents an increase of 21 per cent. since September 1997. Current work force projections suggest that by March 2004, there may be sufficient trained specialists to increase numbers in the specialties by around 1,000 over a 2,000 baseline.

In 2002–03, the surgical specialties were allocated 34 of the total number of centrally funded national training numbers. The combined ceiling posts were 316. This gives trusts considerable opportunity to fund extra posts themselves. The first round of bidding for ceiling posts suggests that locally funded surgical posts will be popular and that the ceiling is likely to be reached.

We have agreed that 316 additional higher specialist surgical training opportunities, with central and local funding, should be made available to be taken up by March 2004. Additionally, we are identifying and encouraging suitable doctors on the specialist register, but not working as consultants to compete for posts, establishing more part-time and job share posts and improving retention through a flexible careers scheme and flexible retirement.

Thrombolysis

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of heart attack victims in (a) Wiltshire, (b) the south west and (c) England received thrombolysis within 30 minutes in the most recent period for which records are available. [88005]

Ms Blears: According to data from the myocardial infarction national audit project for June to September 2002, the following percentage of eligible heart attack patients received thrombolysis within 30 minutes of hospital arrival:

57 per cent. of patients in Avon Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority;

61 per cent. of patients in the south west (Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire, Somerset and Dorset and South West Peninsula Strategic Health Authorities);

63 per cent. of patients in England.

This represents significant and steady progress since the publication of the national service framework for coronary heart disease in March 2000.

Woodside Adolescent Unit

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the estimated total annual cost is of the new adolescent unit at Springfield hospital combined with the estimated annual cost of maintaining the replacement services under consultation for Surrey following the proposed closure of the Woodside Adolescent Unit; and what the current annual cost was of the Woodside unit in the last 12 months; [87523]

(2) what discussions Surrey Oaklands initiated with the NHS in London about the closure of the Woodside Adolescent Unit; [87525]

(3) what the clinical reason was for the decision to transfer adolescent services from the Woodside Adolescent Unit to a new unit at Springfield hospital. [87524]

Ms Blears: In order to meet the needs of the local population, clinicians and commissioners in South West London felt that a local unit was needed with outreach provision, intensive care facilities, treatment available seven days a week and an ability to take emergency admissions where clinically indicated. This would better provide accessible specialist services to adolescents with mental health problems.

The new adolescent unit at Springfield hospital is estimated to cost £1.7 million, and will include the development of an outreach service to offer intensive pre and post-admission support to adolescents. Precise costs of proposed replacement services for Surrey will be available after the public consultation, depending on the outcome. However, East Surrey Primary Care Trust (PCT) is committed to maintaining the same level of funding as currently exists at £462,000. The annual cost of the Woodside unit is approximately £1.06 million, but other placements are made in both the national health service and the private sector, and costs vary according to the particular needs of the adolescent and the particular placement.

There have been regular quarterly meetings over the past three years, chaired by East Surrey Health Authority (HA) initially, and involving Merton Sutton and Wandsworth HA, South West London region. Surrey Oaklands formally declared its intention in March 2002 to close the unit in September 2002, but in July 2002, notified the South West Strategic HA that the closure had been deferred to allow more time for the service to be reconfigured.

All parties are fully aware of the impact that the withdrawal of South West London's funds would have on Woodside. Meetings are still held and are now chaired by East Surrey PCT, with the involvement of Wandsworth PCT and other stakeholders.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES SESSION 2002–03 VOLUME 396

9th December—19th December 2002

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'ws' indicate written statements.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting, is a written statement or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Chamber Debates (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Debates Westminster Hall Debates (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
  - Written Statements (consisting of ministerial statements issued in writing); and
  - Questions (which includes all written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division
- (HL)=Bill starting in House of Lords
- (SP)=Bill in Scottish Parliament.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
- Further information on Parliamentary proceedings and procedures is available from the House of Commons Information Office (020 7219 4272).
